The many programs sponsored by the agency are funded by the state and federal governments. The funds are funneled through the state Department of Elder Affairs. There are 27 similar agencies throughout the Commonwealth.

The largest program provided by South Shore Elder Services is home care services. These are programs specifically developed to assist homebound elderly who do not need nursing home care.

Under that heading is homemakers service, which enables a person to come to the home to do light housekeeping duties. A similar service is "Chore" which provides someone to complete the heavier household duties, such as washing floors — "anything that is necessary to keep the environment clean and safe around the frail resident," Kriby said.

Another program is "Case Management" which provides coordination among services for a more efficiently operated system. There are 17 staff persons on board at South Shore Elder Services who interview the housebound elderly and determine the best array of programs for that person. A senior citizen must be at, or slightly above the poverty income level to qualify for this service, Kirby said.

The "Companionship Program" is a service which awards a $110 monthly stipend to persons willing to provide companionship to an isolated elderly citizen.

This program is created by the case management liaison and is provided to those senior citizens who have no relative or friends in the vicinity.

"Home-Delivered Meals" is another program for the elderly housebound resident. Many towns, such as Milton, Braintree and Cohasset, provide a similar service, so all programs are coordinated with the various town organizations.

A new and innovative program which is receiving high commendations from Kirby, is the Nursing Home Ombudsmen service.

This program, operateing at the Cohasset Knoll, the Deering and Queen Ann nursing homes in Hingham, and the Cardigan and Ocean Manor nursing homes in Scituate, allows volunteers to enter nursing homes and establish relationships with isolated patients.

A list of patients who have few relatives or visitors is given to the trained volunteer. Week by week, the volunteer talks with the patient and progressively develops a relationship with the elderly patient.

Each volunteer must undergo 16 hours of training by the Elder Services staff and the state Department of Elder Affairs. There are currently 23 volunteers in the South Shore program. The program was established within the first local nursing home last summer.

The main objective of the volunteer is to provide companionship to the lonely patient, although the citizen representative also sensitizes the patient as to his rights within the nursing home, Kirby added.

The volunteers meet monthly at the Elder Services building to discuss their progress and any problems. "We try to give them as much support and supervision as possible," Kirby said. "The relationship between the volunteer and the supervisor is a good and supportive one."

South Shore Elder Services, which is operated by a board of directors comprised of two representatives from every community, also provides extensive nutrition programs. Many of these programs are coordinated between the local communities, such as Cohasset.

The home delivered meals program is available weekdays in Cohasset through the Social Services League and might be expanded by Elder Services.

Kirby said the agency is experimenting with a weekend hot meal program in Quincy. Because there is a larger low income population there it was determined the need for such a program would be greater in that community.

"This program, which just began in Quincy, is for those frail, elderly residents who don't have anyone to cook for them on the weekends. Usually there is someone available for them on the weekends, but sometimes there is no one," Kirby said. "The case manager determines if there is a need. We don't know yet how successful the program will be. Volunteers are needed to serve the meals, and it's pretty difficult to get volunteers on the weekends."

South Shore Elder Services provides home care assistance to more than 1500 persons, and nutrition programs to 600 persons daily. Mrs. Fallon of the 60 Plus Club added, "We are doing very well by our senior citizens in Cohasset."

Montessori auction

The seventh annual auction sponsored by the Montessori Community School, Scituate, will be held Saturday, Nov. 6 at the Elks Hall, Route 53, Hanover.

This year the auction has been expanded due to overwhelming support from Cohasset businesses.

Bernard and Barbara Cross, both of Cohasset, have been working hard soliciting items and program sponsors. Items going on the block will include day sailing, gift certificates from local restaurants and stores, sporting equipment, small appliances, multiples, get-away weekends, sports and theater tickets, antiques and collectables.

The doors will open at 6 p.m. for previewing and bidding begins at 7 p.m.

For further information, call Colleen Bent at 545-5544.

Psychic fair

The Education Association of Norwell is sponsoring a Psychic Fair Saturday, Oct. 30 from noon to 6 p.m. at the Junior High School (Rte. 123) to benefit its scholarship fund. Leading area psychics will offer readings in various fields.

Georgia Burke will offer readings in Astrology, Bedell Richmond in Graphology, Ida Dee — psychic readings, Joyce Levine in Astrology, Cheri in Auras, Sue Nathan in Psychometry and Tarot, Pat Hixon in Tarot, Dawn in cards, etc., Beverly in cards and Joan Mais in cards, Psychometry and psychic readings. There will also be Inspirational Writing by Donna. Herb Peterson, a master palmist, will be offering a free lecture on Palmistry in the Auditorium.

Admission will be $2. Individual 15 minute readings are $5 for each psychic visited. Refreshments will be available in the cafeteria. Admission is open to anyone 17 or older.

Thayer Academy yard sale

The Parents Club of Thayer Academy in Braintree will hold its fifth annual yard sale in the main gym at the school starting Friday, Oct. 29, 7 to 10 p.m. and Saturday, Oct. 30, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Any items not sold will be sold at half price on Monday, Nov. 1 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Thayer families contributed to this sale as well as new merchandise donated by the business community. Items offered for sale include sports equipment, toys, clothing, furniture, art, plants, white elephant and baked goods.

Admission is free and coffee and a snack bar are available.

Civic Orchestra concert

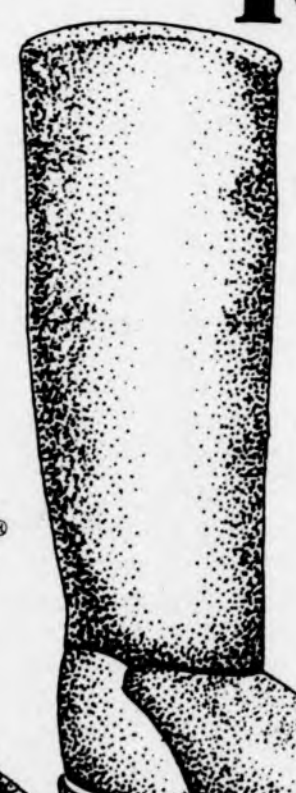
Some of the innovations planned for the Hingham Civic Orchestra's 1982-1983 season will be seen at the opening concert, Saturday, Oct. 30 at 8 p.m. The conductor is John Corley.

There's the new location at the South Junior High School auditorium, which will provide a less formal and more intimate setting for this particular concert. The program's title is: "Music For An Autumn Evening." Instead of formal program notes, Corley will relay interesting bits of information to the audience before each piece.

Another new concept for this concert is a lighter, more colorful and creative program. After the "Petite Suite" of Samuel Coleridge-Taylor will be the familiar and popular "Autumn" section from "The Four Seasons" by Antonio Vivaldi.

Laura-Eleanor Stewart, concert mistress, will be the violin soloist. The harpsichord part will be played by Joanne Norton.

The evening will conclude with refreshments.



Tickets are $4 and will be available at the door or can be purchased in advance by calling 749-5862.

When the sun goes down and the hobgoblins come out, that magical night called Halloween begins. For the kids about to sally forth in costume, it's been an endlesss wait from the time they swapped stories at the bus stop of their evening plans, through the school day that dragged on seemingly forever, to an afternoon of interminable length, till the witching hour at dusk. Even this innocent fun is tainted these days by horror tales of harmful trick or treat offerings by "sick" adults and so we must be careful of what we choose to add to their booty of candy. Surely anyone who would take pains to prepare homemade treats could hardly wish the children harm and from the fabulous "Cohasset Entertains," comes Barbara Steele's recipe for

CRAZY CORN

2 qts. popped corn
1 ⅓ c. pecans
2/3 c. almonds
1⅓ sugar
1 c. margarine
1 tsp vanilla
1/2 c. Karo crystal clear syrup

Mix popped corn and nuts on a cookie sheet. Combine sugar, margarine and Karo in a 1½ qt. saucepan. Bring to boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Continue boiling, stirring occasionally, 10-15 min., or until mixture turns a light caramel color. Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla. Pour over popped corn and nuts, mix to coat well. Spread out to dry. Break apart and store in tightly covered container. Makes about 2 lbs. NOTE: Pecans and almonds being rather expensive, why not substitute raisins, walnuts, or peanuts for Halloween?

It used to be called All-Hallow Eve before All Saints Day. An old scrapbook I have tells us that in the days of our grandparents, it was a time for harvest frolics, candy "pulls," huskings, nutting parties and melon meets. Can't imagine what a melon meet was, but of the nutting shake they say that a huge bonfire was built under a chestnut tree. Dozens of "lantern Jacks" were lit with candles and set on tree stumps to suggest the presence of gnomes and other fairy folk. Chinese lanterns were hung from the branches and blankets spread around the fire, where "young people gathered for their merry making." If we have a "harvest frolic," wouldn't it be grand to include Cathy Brennan's

HALLOWEEN PUMPKIN CAKE

1/2 c. butter
1½ c. sugar
3 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
2 c. flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. ginger
1/4 tsp. ground cloves
1 c. canned pumpkin or fresh pumpkin puree
1/4 c. milk
1 c. chopped walnuts
3/4 c. raisins

Cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Sift flour with baking powder, soda and spices; stir into butter mixture alternately with pumpkin, ending with flour. Stir in milk, walnuts and raisins. Pour batter into a greased and floured 10" bundt pan. Bake in 350 oven for 1 hour and 15 min., or until cake tests done. Cool in pan 30 mins., then turn out onto a cake rack.

PUMPKIN CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

1/2 c. oil
1 c. sugar
1 egg
1 tsp vanilla
1 c. chocolate chips
2 c. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda dissolved in 1 tsp. milk
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 c. nuts

Mix above ingredients. Drop dough on greased cookie sheets. Bake 375 degrees for 10 to 12 min. NOTE: These last two recipes are courtesy of "Delectable Collectibles."

Studio IV open house featured special artwork

By J.A. Marshall

A special wine and cheese Invitational Open House for Studio IV was held on Sunday, Oct. 24.

This cooperative Art Studio/Gallery at 59 Water Street, Hingham Harbor, features special artwork painted by Roberta Raffa of Cohasset, and Gloria Worthington, Grace Lawrence, Elizabeth Robinson, Susan Kilmartin and Mary Walther, all of Hingham.

Each artist has her own style and specialties. Roberta Raffa works her muted, gentle paintings in oils, paints Holly Hobby style paintings to order and fashions paper flowers to make lovely arrangements for any season.

Gloria Worthington also works in oils, as well as charcoal and pastels, still lifes, landscapes and portraits.

She will also be offering classes in pastel portrait, still lifes and life drawing. Elizabeth Robinson works in water colors — still lifes and landscapes, primarily.

Grace Lawrence also illustrates her artistic talents through the medium of watercolors.

Susan Kilmartin does portraits on commission in oils, as well as painting houses or landscapes and still lifes and offers classes.

Mary Walther works in pencil, watercolor, oil and small pen and ink drawings of local scenes.

New for the Christmas season, will be a table of handicrafts designed and made by Mrs. Andy Marshall and Jane A. Marshall of Cohasset. The gifts will range from special decorations for the Christmas season to handiwork which is appropriate throughout the year.

Handsewn tea cozies, calico-patch duck decoys, velvet Christmas tree wall hangings and original design, hand-colored stationery, are a few of the items which will be featured at Studio IV.

Studio and Gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday. For additional information, call 749-8767.

Civic Orchestra presents 'Music for an Autumn Evening'

Selectmen to act on Beechwood station

Selectmen are expected to act Wednesday night on a request to move the vacant Beechwood Fire Station to Clapp Road in the west end of Scituate.

Gene Duvoisin of Scituate bid $200 for the station and said he wanted to move the building to Scituate where he would restore it and use it as a barn.

Duvoisin owns private property on Clapp Road and he needs storage area for equipment for his orchard.

Selectmen said they were not sure if they could sell the building without soliciting bids or holding an auction. The property was advertised some time ago but no one submitted a bid by the deadline.

Selectmen also were waiting for hear the results of a Cohasset Historical Society vote. Executive Secretary Arthur Clark told selectmen the vote was to be taken to consider if the society was interested in the station.

Connie Parker, society president, told the Mariner the vote was deadlocked. "Nothing was resolved at the meeting. There is nothing to be spoken about right now and I'm not sure what the answer will be. But discussion hasn't ended yet."

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie asked, "Do we auction it off or do we ask for new bids?" Town meeting, selectmen said, gave them the authority to sell it or tear it down.

Ainslie told Duvoisin selectmen would put a time limit on the removal and act before "the ground freezes. We are not trying to discourage you."

Duvoisin said he would need permits from Cohasset and Scituate selectmen was well as clearance from each community's police and highway departments.

"They would want to know the actual route and how the move would affect the road's tree limbs and our plans for delimbing," Duvoisin said.

The vacant station cannot be moved as one unit, he said. The tower will be taken down by a crane and reassembled. The station will be sectioned off, iron beams will be installed, some of the station's walls will be cut away and the back shed will be taken off.

The station, said Duvoisin, has been the target of vandals and "I believe the residents of Beechwood want the station to be removed."

The station had served the Beechwood residents and at one time had also served residents of the West End of Scituate.

The final costs of renovation and removal have not been worked out yet, Duvoisin said.

Firefighter Dick Conley told selectmen a volunteer fire department in Maine was interested in the station's tank. Duvoisin added, "If they wanted to get it out, it would be okay."

Register now for upcoming CCC workshops

Registrations will be accepted for two upcoming workshops at the Cohasset Community Center.

Well-known area quilter Mary Struzziero will conduct a one-day workshop on the Celtic Design on Thursday, Nov. 4. This new technique will feature applique strips of fabric which will be used to make a design taken from the Book of Kells. This course will be taught from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. A $6 fee will be charged.

Thursdays, Nov. 11 and 18, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Mary will teach the Log Cabin technique for a Christmas tree wall hanging. A $12 fee will be charged.

Information on this and other programs will be available at the center weekdays from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

Studded snow tires legal

Studded snow tires are legal to use this winter in Massachusetts and the entire Northeast, according to AAA Massachusetts.

Legislation that would have outlawed them failed to pass this year.

Studded snow tires may be used in Massachusetts from Nov. 2 - April 30.

Sixty Plus winners

The Cohasset Sixty Plus Club's Harvest Fair chance winners were May Slater of Scituate, a television set; and Rose Pape of Cohasset, 10 pounds of lobsters.

The rag doll went to May Mack of Scituate and Hugo's gift went to Anthony Laugelle of Cohasset. The club appreciates the merchants who donated to the Fair. These include Cohasset Hardware, Pat Sargent of Cohasset Cleaners, Cards and Sharads and Charlotte's.

The board of directors will meet Tuesday, Nov. 2 at the Unitarian Parish House at 11 a.m.

Members will meet Thursday, Nov. 18, at the Unitarian Parish House. A coffee hour will be at 12:30, followed by an important meeting at 1 p.m.

Astrologer Catherine McGovan, will be the guest speaker.

Yard sale planned by Republican Town Committee

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee is planning a giant yard sale on Saturday, Oct. 30 from 9 to 2 at 48 Old Coach Road, (off Forest Ave.).

In addition to household and personal items, other features will include a bake table, popcorn, cotton candy and other refreshments.

Brotherly sparring, a familiar but unfavorite sport

By Lois Martin

My vote for the most ill-directed fundraiser was one on behalf of Mrs. Spinks. She's the mother of Leon and Michael. And if my memory has withstood warp, her friends and her sons' supporters rallied to raise money several years ago so she'd have the air fare to go watch her boys fight.

Of course her sons are professional fighters. Most of us only deal with amateurs. But when I heard some were actually going to see to it that she could see them fight, some more, I was horrified. I wouldn't care tc be flown anywhere, including Hawaii to watch my boys fight. That goes for whether or not they'd get paid for it.

PATCHES

Mothers have seen their sons fighting since the little guys were able to swing one plump leg up over the crib slats. All they needed to get started was a brother. And unlike Leon and Michael, most of them never waited to insert mouth pieces or put on gloves.

This came to mind a couple of weeks ago when I spoke to a group of young women about motherhood. I gave them then some darn good news...They do, they really do stop fighting.

Naturally the women didn't believe me. Why should they. I would have given such a statement the same credence as I'd have applied to the idea that a woman grows nonchalant about physical examinations.

There are years when a look from one brother to another as they meet by the refrigerator door is like the shot heard round the world. Peace was when they were sick, separated or opening Christmas presents.

There was that summer day years ago when two boys I am related to fought inside the house until they were told to go out and do it...which they did until that was no longer an acceptable alternative. So, blaming the weather, I decided to trundle everyone to the pool so they wouldn't be together. Once settled for my lifeguard duty, I was horrified to see the brothers playing together, by choice. I hollered to them, saying they weren't to be having fun together. That added another 15 minutes to that respite.

And squabbling as a way of life from the cereal bowl confrontation to the rematch in the tub hasn't been limited to my household. Many of us have saved the lives of other brothers throughout the years...and have yet to be thanked for it. There used to be vigorous street hockey games behind my house. I could see the bloodletting among family members from my kitchen window.

I intervened one day in what I considered a life-threatening disagreement between twins who were armed with hockey sticks. I bellowed out the window, distracting the identical foes. They were at a loss to understand what my problem was and they resumed the game in peace, united in their grumblings about panicky women.

High school freshmen have complained that older brother upperclassmen pretend they don't notice them at school, have no recollection of having seen them before. Naturally, some of the most promising lunges for sibling's throats have been when their best behavior would have been most appreciated — church, supermarkets, important company.

But somewhere in the second year of college a change begins. That's in spite of a letter home that threatens to put a contract out on any brother who goes in the person's room while he's away. For all their lives, they might as well face this, they'll believe their brothers have walked off with their jacket or is the one who wrecked their tape.

It was in 1977 during Christmas vacation that our second son offered his older brother 75 cents to walk through Hanover Mall with him. The deal was struck. And since that time the strangest thing has happened. They actually like one another, choose to be together, write to each other.

It's shocking. And it is a mother's reward, one of two I've discovered thus far.

I do not expect to outgrow my appreciation for peace. Still fresh in my mind are their boyish warfares and I know a good game of Monopoly could bring those alive again.

Just in case, though, 'cause one never knows, if any of my offspring become professional fighters, I wouldn't walk across the street to see them get hurt or to hurt one another. I'm still trying to get them to memorize, "He ain't heavy, he's my brother." And the trick is, you keep'm hundreds of miles apart and they don't say a mean word about one another...but they still say one took the other's jacket with him.

Psychic fair at Norwell Jr. High

The Education Association of Norwell is sponsoring a Psychic Fair Saturday, Oct. 30 from noon to 6 p.m. at the Junior High School (Rte. 123) to benefit its scholarship fund. Leading area psychics will offer readings in various fields.

Chip of Fools.

In June of 1980 a 46-cent computer chip almost started World War III. The chip's failure was the cause of a full alert, showing that the Russians were attacking us. They weren't. Luckily we caught the mistake in time. But what if it happens again?
It's foolish to balance the fate of our country on a tiny piece of plastic. Especially if we can find a way our of the nuclear weapons mess.
That's where the Freeze comes in. With the Freeze the United States and Russia would stop making nuclear weapons Period. We've got 34,000; they've got 20,000* That's more than enough.
The bottom line is survival. That's why neither country has broken any of the 14 nuclear weapons agreements they've signed† To help prevent cheating each side watches the other with high-powered sensors and satellites (ours can read a license plate in Moscow). Of course, the Freeze won't solve everything; but it would be a strong first step toward a safer tomorrow.
With the Freeze we will finally begin moving in the right direction. Instead of waiting until the chips are down.

South Shore Art Center director Margaret Dillon and Auction Committee member Jean Replogle display the pastel portrait by Constance Flavell Pratt with President of the Board and Auction Chairman Ubaldo de Benedetto.

Save Saturday for the Art Auction

The South Shore Art Center will hold a public art auction Saturday, Oct. 30 from noon to 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Sealed bids will be taken from noon to 2 p.m.

The center has received many generous donations. The most recent is the watercolor "Sloop Digby -Cohasset" by the nationally known MacIvor Reddie (1899-1966).

Reddie's work is exhibited throughout the United States, Europe and South America as well as extensive exhibitions from New England to New York. He was Director of the Art Institute of Boston from 1939 to 1966, a member of the Boston Society of Watercolor Painters, the Guild of Boston Artist and the American Watercolorist Society of New York as well as a charter member of the SSAC.

Constance Flavell Pratt, a member of the Copley Society and the Pastel Society of America, will be donating a portrait on commission. After studying for four years at Mass. College of Art and one year each with Rutledge Bates and Charles Mahoney, her accomplishments are numerous.

She's had many one Women Shows from Quincy to Brockton to Plymouth, as well as two women shows with SSAC, Circle Gallery of New York, Pastel Society of America at National Arts Club, Lion Gallery, North Conway, and Newport Art Association.

Mercie Nichols, member and benefactor of SSAC, has donated a beautiful antique watercolor done in 1894 by Marion Curtis Browning of Cohasset Harbor, which is in superb condition.

Another piece from Mercie that was done by Cohasset's well known Dr. Reid who studied with MacIvor Reddie, has been received at the center.

Many collectible items received are leaded antique stained glass pieces which could be made into windows. These were donated by Irving LeClair of Hanover. Other donors are Margaret Dillon and Roz Farbush.

Dillon wins award

Margaret Dillon, director of the South Shore Art Center, has won the CLWAC cash award for still life for her painting "Bottles and Jars" at the Catharine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club's 86th Annual Exhibition.

The exhibit will be shown at the National Arts Club, New York City, until Oct. 29.

In addition, Constance Flavell Pratt won the Pastel Society of America award for her pastel protrait.

Genuine Oriental rugs come from Iran and China. The Iranian rugs are perhaps the best known in this country. Since Iran used to be called Persia, the Oriental rugs from Iran are often known as Persian rugs. They are known for their brilliant red coloring and they intricate patterns. These patterns, which are basically geometrical, over the whole rug, from the center to the outer border. Chinese Oriental rugs, on the other hand, usually have a lighter or white base color and have a less ornate pattern. They are known more for their open spaces and the patterns usually do not extend to the borders of the rug.

Oriental designs whether in the form of a lamp, rug, wall hanging, screen, etc. adds a tough of the exotic that enlivens any type of room. You want to make sure no matter what your decor that your wall colors are coordinated. Located in N.Scituate at 763 Country Way, BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE has all the paints, wallpaper, sundries, etc. to make home decorating easier. Roger Lincoln takes the job

Meet your new fire chief

By Mike Berger

Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln announced his decision Monday morning. He had deliberated all weekend and decided to accept the position of permanent fire chief, offered by selectmen.

There will be no provision calling for the guarantee of job security.

Lincoln had asked for a leave of absence from his captain's position to take the chief's job.

Last week selectmen adopted a policy refusing protection for any town employee. Selectmen said whoever accepted department head jobs should accept the risks along with the raise which comes with the appointment.

Wednesday, Lincoln told selectmen he would use the weekend to think about the job offer but added he didn't think he could accept it without the job protection clause.

Monday, Lincoln issued a public statement.

"I've used the last few days to rethink my position and I have had conversations with people whose opinions I value.

"When I became acting chief (March 1982) I said this was what I have been working towards. The opportunity is here and I'm going to take it."

Lincoln said he was aided in his decision by 500 residents and the results of a town meeting which called for expanding the search committee's selection list.

The selection process called for a search committee to review applications and pick three finalists. When the list of finalists was announced, none of the three local candidates were included.

Firefighters and residents protested and pushed for a town meeting article to expand the list. In August,

Rum, the Newfoundland, succumbs

Friday was a sad day for Todd Williams and his family of 38 Elm Court.

Rum, a 15-month old, 100 lb. Newfoundland puppy, was put to sleep at South Shore Veterinary Associates of Weymouth. He suffered from heart problems.

He underwent surgery in March, to correct his heart murmur at Massachusetts General Hospital. His operation was unsuccessful, but Rum was considered a hero for allowing a team of doctors to attempt a new procedure. They had hoped to use the technique on two young girls who had heart disorders.

Rum was born with a heart problem. One of the normal outflows of his heart had narrowed and made the heart work harder to pump blood through the aortic valve.

Last week, one of Rum's heart valves let go and his lungs filled with water making him uncomfortable. The decision was made to put him to sleep.

Though doctors were unable to solve Rum's problem the testing and continued monitoring on Rum has been a learning experience for the specialists.

Doctors said Rum had a severly enlarged heart and his life expectancy was less than normal. In June doctors said each week Rum lived was a blessing.

The Williams family first learned of Rum's heart condition on New Year's Eve. One specialist predicted in January Rum had between two and five months to live.

In June, Rum was a playful as ever. For example, when told to go to his pen, he plopped right down and played dead.

Rum was a friendly, smart dog who won the love of his neighbors on Elm Court. One new neighbor met Rum when she left the sliding door open and he wandered into her home. She thought it was a bear and screamed.

The Williams family will remember Rum as lovable, happy, clumsy, but charming.

In June, the Williams family was prepared for Rum's inevitable early death. Todd said, "You just couldn't come home everyday and look at his empty pen."

Sunday, the Williams family including Keith, 6 and Kim, 14, selected a new three-week old Newfoundland. They will pick him up the Sunday after Thanksgiving.

"He's a little black ball of fur right now," said Mrs. Joan Williams.

Who wants a house . . . free

By Jane Lane

It seems a person can't even give away a house these days.

In September, Border St. resident Drexel Gibson offered a 40-by-41 foot prefabricated house to any non-profit organization or vocation school which would dismantle and cart the structure away. Although the Gibsons have received offers, the structure is still standing.

Last week, it seemed that one unidentified person had accepted the Gibson's offer and was about to begin taking the cottage apart, but he changed his mind. The Gibsons were "disappointed, naturally," according to Mrs. Gibson, "it kinds of leaves us in the middle."

The couple must start again and review previous offers for the 1,000 square foot home.

Gibson had originally hoped a group such as the Boy Scouts or a vocational school would claim the vacant structure. According to the owner, such an organization could gain practical experience dismantling the 10-by-10 foot sections. The house is a pre-fabricated Hodgson summer cottage, containing two bedrooms, two bathrooms, a living-dining room, a kitchen with an electric stove, a water heater and two sinks. The plumbing and electric fixtures were also part of the offer, according to Gibson.

Gibson still owns the original floor plan, which will aid in reassembling the home.

Although the owner does not know how much the cottage is worth, he has been told it is valued at about $40 per square foot, or a total of $40,000.

Gibson's two children once used the home which is located on his property at 169 Border St., but they have both since married and moved away. Because Gibson would like to alter his property's landscape, he wanted the building removed. He would prefer to donate the cottage, rather than selling it for a profit.

The future of the home is in limbo, according to Mrs. Gibson. She was not optimistic about their chances of giving away the 11-year-old building.

Cohasset's week ...

Keating testimonial

A committee has been formed to honor Gerard Keating, recently retired postmaster and active community leader. A tribute to Gerard will be held at Hugo's Lighthouse on December 2.

Tickets may be purchased from the following committee members: A.J. Antoine, Richard Sylvia, Fran Mitchell, Jack & Bobbi Buckley, Phil Murray and Gerard Stanton.

Also, Bob Ciciotte, Joe Laugelle, Larry Keating, Frank Salvador, George McCullough, Clark Chatterton and Sumner Smith.

Cable proposal

The cable advisory committee is in the process of creating a proposal which will outline Cohasset's specific cable television needs.

The RFP (request for proposal) is undergoing careful scrutiny by all cable committee members and will be given to the four companies competing for Cohasset's provisional license.

The companies which will submit detailed, precise bids based on the committee's specifications, include American Cablesystems, Campbell Cable Television, Suburban South Shore Cable, and United Cablesystems.

The deadline for selectmen to award the provisional license is April 15. Meanwhile, the local cable committee is busy preparing the final specifications for that system.

According to committee chairman Joseph McCool, the committee heard presentations from the four companies last week. Now the individual committee members are detailing specific cable needs for Cohasset, and the final specifications will be brought before selectmen for the board's approval.

The four companies presented a generalized version of their individual proposals to the cable committee. The committee is now combining the best of those offerings to create a formal proposal. This will be given to each company, which in turn will offer a final bid to the committee.

Each company will offer bids according to the requirements set forth by the local cable committee, McCool said. Specific bids and designs will be outlined in that final presentation. That will take place sometime this winter.

The committee will review the final bids and make site visits to the communities where the cable companies are currently operating systems. After one month, a final recommendation will be made to selectmen by the committee, and a provisional license should be awarded by selectmen in the spring, McCool said.

Paintings shown

The Quincy Co-operative bank and the South Shore Art Center are showing paintings of five South Shore artists at their galleria in Cohasset.

The artists representing four towns are Mayme Good of Randolph, Mary Lizotte of Norwell, Patricia McCarthy of Cohasset and Rachel Kennedy and K.A. Calnan of Scituate.

The works were painted on location at Block Island, R.I. in September and will be shown at a gallery on Block Island next summer.

The show will continue through November and is open to the public during banking hours.

Flea market & crafts sale

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School will sponsor a Fall Flea Market and Crafts Sale Saturday, Nov. 20 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church.

Table space will be available at $10. For table reservations or further information, call 383-1166 before Nov. 15.

Donations of toys, sports equipment, books, etc. are welcome, and may be brought to the Community Center weekday mornings.

Proceeds from the Flea Market will benefit the nursery school's scholarship and equipment fund. A big bake table is planned.

Metco dinner Sunday

Cohasset's Metco Host Families will sponsor a dinner for Metco students and their families Sunday, Nov. 14 from 4 to 6 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Bryan Marks, high school music director, has organized entertainment for the afternoon. The high school chorus will perform, and the cast of "Grease" will present a few skits from the school musical now in rehearsal.

Host families should RSVP by Nov. 7 to Jane Ellis, 383-0767.

Here is the Old Beechwood Fire Station. Selectmen have decided to readvertise this town owned but vacant property following a recent bid of $200 by Gene Duvoisin of Scituate to move the building to Scituate where he would restore it and use it as a barn. The Cohasset Historical Society is deadlocked over its interest in the house.

Services held for Peter Grimes

A Cohasset fisherman and two unidentified men on Bassings Beach in Scituate found the body of a Cohasset lobsterman Sunday.

Jack Silvia of 43 Border St. recovered the body of Peter Grimes, 26, of 15 Arrowwood Road missing since Oct. 23. Medical Examiner Dr. Clifford Ward has ruled the death was caused by accidental drowning.

Silvia and his four sons have searched Cohasset Harbor daily since Grimes was reported missing. The Coast Guard and the Quincy Underwater Rescue and Recovery Team searched for two days after Grimes' 23-foot green vessel capsized among a pile of lobster pots.

Silvia was a close friend of Grimes and had vowed to his family that he would find his body.

Grimes was replacing lobster pots lost in a storm when his boat capsized because of strong wind and a heavy load of lobster pots.

Two men on Bassings Beach told Silvia they saw something in the water. Silvia went to investigate and reported the discovery to police at 3:45 p.m.

The body was discovered beyond the Cohasset Harbor breakwater, near Bassings Beach. The body was fully clothed.

Silvia had known Grimes for several years. Grimes attended Cohasset schools and after finishing high school worked on several swordfishing boats. He switched to lobstering a few years ago.

Grimes was praised by many Cohasset fishermen and Harbormaster Harry Ritter. A memorial service was held Saturday at First Parish Unitarian Church.

Since the Oct. 23 mishap, numerous lobstermen and pleasure boaters have joined the search. Many dragged the harbor area last week and combed the shore and asked residents if they had seen any sign of Grimes.

A letter of appreciation to the volunteers appears as a Letter to the Editor, written by Dick Conley, chairman of the Cohasset chapter of the American Red Cross.

Meet your new fire chief . . .

voters agreed to enlarge the list to eight and selectmen completed a new round of interviews last month.

Three candidates dropped out of the running and the list was narrowed to Lincoln and Lt. Martin Dooley of Hartford, Connecticut.

Lincoln said town meeting turnout and support from his men helped his decision. "I'm just glad it's over," he said.

Selectmen offered a three-year contract at a $28,000 salary. The final contract which will be negotiated within a few weeks, allows Lincoln the right of appeal to the Personnel Board if disputes arise between future selectmen and the chief.

Selectmen Henry Ainslie and Rocco Laugelle made the offer to Lincoln. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur didn't vote. She said Lincoln had already made it clear how he felt about the lack of job security.

Ainslie and Laugelle said they wanted Lincoln and had full confidence in his ability to run the department. They said he had the track record, dependability and knowledge of the job.

Before discussing Lincoln's selection as chief, selectmen, in a 2-1 vote, approved the following policy for all town employees.

Employee contracts "shall not contain any provision guaranteeing such employee reinstatement to his former position at the conclusion of the term of the employment agreement or prior thereto as a result of his resignation or dismissal."

Laugelle tried to amend the motion by suggesting that Lincoln be given a leave for 21 months and then reviewing his record. His motion failed for lack of a second.

McArthur's policy drew criticism from firefighters. They said the proposal discriminated against Lincoln because Dooley would be able to fall back on his Hartford job.

Richard Conley, a firefighter, said the policy was an easy excuse to reject Lincoln. "Maybe it gets some people off the hook. It's a foregone conclusion what you're going to do. You want control of the departments and to control the man at the top." He added the policy would discourage town employees from trying to move up through the ranks.

Laugelle disputed Conley's charge saying, "If I'm going to vote for someone, I'll vote regardless of who's here or who isn't, or who knows it. I'm not bashful about it.

Conley also said there is some sentiment in town to form a Public Safety Department under the direction of one man.

"There's some strong talk that the town will create a new department. It's been in the talking stages for about two years.

"Most communities build from within the town and promote from within. Not this town," he said.

Lincoln has been a Cohasset firefighter for 13½ years and captain for the past six years. Lincoln will replace former Chief Charles Piepenbrink who retired last spring.

Atty. Richard Henderson, a member of the town counsel's staff, said if voters decided to put the position of fire chief back into Civil Service, the current chief would have the right to take the exam. If passed, the chief would have tenure over any future candidates.

What's going on here? Monsters and a dancing clown invade the Ripley Road Nursing Home for some friendly Halloween frolicking.

Meet Mike Gill: health coordinator in Cohasset

By Jane Lane

Michael Gill thinks health education is about the most important subject taught in schools today.

As Health Education Coordinator in Cohasset, his expertise enhances the education of the five year-old entering kindergarten, as well as his parents attending an evening community education seminar on nutrition.

This will be Gill's third year at Cohasset, and the second year since the health education program has been in place. He's content with the program's development and excited about its future.

Gill occupies a cluttered office at Cohasset High School although he is frequently absent from its cloistered environment.

The young, mustachioed educator is more often teaching in the classroom or huddled with a concerned student. He is, by his own volition, accessible to anyone who requests his attention.

And he is concerned about Cohasset's neighboring community. Next week, voters in Scituate will be asked at Town Meeting to establish a position of health education administrator, and to provide $20,000 to fund that position. As a lifelong Scituate resident and taxpayer, Gill feels this would be the proper step in providing necessary health education to students and the community.

A graduate of Scituate High School, Gill said, "There are a lot of kids in Scituate I know who would benefit from some type of health education program."

And for anyone who is unaware of what health education encompasses, a description of the curriculum would be surprising. According to Gill, the program begins in the elementary grades with basic instruction in health knowledge and attitudes, decisions and behaviors, mental and social health, growth and development, safety and First Aid, nutrition, environmental health, alcohol and drug education, and dental health.

These programs, combined with more complex issues, are continued through the junior and senior high school grades. That is one element of this program which pleases Gill.

"Now there is some continuity in our health education program," Gill said. "Before, one teacher would do a lot on one aspect of health education, and not cover anything else on the subject. Another classroom instructor might not bother with the subject at all, and still another would teach a different aspect of the program. There was no transition from one grade to the next. The students of one grade level were at various stages of the program. Now they are all at the same level."

A more in-depth program is initiated in the seventh grade, and an elective course is offered at the senior high school level. The course begins in the seventh grade because that's when students must make more difficult personal choices and peer pressure plays a greater role in determining that choice, Gill said.

"The philosophy of any health education program is to start at kindergarten with preventive health education. What we try to do is to develop an attitude of appreciation for their bodies. By the time they have to make decisions regarding their bodies, pertaining to such things as drugs, alcohol and nutrition, they hopefully will have learned that decision-making process, and know how to make a responsible decision in regard to their own health — to improve their own life," Gill said.

"My job is not to moralize to the students about drugs, alcohol or nutrition," he added. "Health education means more than drugs, alcohol and sex education. Instruction on disease prevention and control, dental health, fitness, safety and human growth, are all interrelated to mental health. My attitude is that if the students don't learn about their bodies as a whole, they won't care about themselves."

Gill said if elementary-aged students develop an appreciation of their bodies, decisions about using substances such as drugs and alcohol will be easier for them in later years.

"We have got to teach these kids at a very young age to respect their bodies. The kids leave this high school with the only body they'll ever have, and it's obvious to me that a lot of these kids are abusing their bodies," Gill said.

"I have talked with a lot of kids who have told me they've experimented with various drugs, and they have no idea what the consequences will be. We look at both sides of an issue and teach kids to make responsible decisions by weighing both sides. You must look at the consequences and advantages of a certain action before you choose your behavior."

Gill has talked to students who have experimented with marijuana or cocaine or alcohol, and his first question to them is, "Do you know what that does to your body?"

If he spies a student constantly feasting on junk foods, he will make the identical query. The most frequent answer he receives is "no."

He is quick to relay an answer. "I want to educate them all — so that all students know enough to make a responsible decision."

Gill feels health education is becoming increasingly important as health problems expand in our society.

"More youngsters drink at an early age and more experiment with drugs at an earlier age than ever before," he said. "The latest statistics (which fill his office) say that cigarette smoking is increasing among teenage girls. More people are dying from obesity. Heart ailments are increasing among women. We are just finding out the vast side effects of caffeine consumption."

These are just a sample of the health issues discussed in the program. But, as Gill quickly added, all this education is for naught if some form of support is not provided within the student's home.

"We're just banging our heads against a wall unless the parents help out and participate in the overall health education of the student," Gill ntoed.

For example, a young elementary student is taught that a continuing diet of junk food snacks is detrimental to his well being. Yet all is lost if Mom serves a daily ration of Twinkies after he arrives home from school.

To combat this type of situation, the health education coordinator has established a community

Selectmen briefs...

Selectmen have changed the date of the special town meeting from Nov. 22 to Nov. 29 and have extended the closing of the town warrant from Wednesday, Oct. 27 to Nov. 3 at 4:30 p.m.

Selectmen said they were extending the date to clear up any confusion. The by-law requires the warrant remain open for at least seven days. Originally, selectmen agreed to hold it open for only two days.

A special town meeting was called so voters could appropriate money to finish a townwide revaluation project. The assessors will have two articles, one of which will have to be acted on. They will ask for $30,000 to revaluate commercial, industrial and personal property if a study shows revaluation work can be used, or $120,000 to do a complete revaluation if the study shows the previous work is no good.

A third article has been submitted by more than 100 residents opposed to the $13.7 million sewage treatment plan.

A fourth article to accept the collective bargaining agreement between the town and the Cohasset Police Association will be placed on the warrant. Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said the contract has not been resolved but may be settled prior to the Nov. 29 meeting.

POMERICO CLEARED

Police Officer David Pomerico has been cleared of any wrongdoing in a recent motor vehicle accident. Police reports of a traffic accident in September on Old Pasture Road were submitted to selectmen. Selectmen said no complaints were filed and Pomerico will not be disciplined.

MUSSEL PERMITS

Selectmen will await the recommendation of the town shellfish warden and the state before issuing any further mussel permit licenses. Selectmen want to know the current mussel population and future growth of the fish.

outreach program which provides similar educational opportunities to residents. The program is sponsored by the school department and the Community Health Education Committee (which initiated the drive to establish the coordinator position).

Evening seminars on subjects such as child abuse, alcohol and drug abuse, drunk driving and nutrition have been implemented at the high school for any interested residents.

Although Gill said health knowledge disseminated now to students will filter through to future generations, it is the present adult population which is generally lacking health education awareness.

"A lot of parents are not as up-to-date on health issues as they might want to be, so a health education program for adults is a very important part of my duty here," he explained.

Gill also sees the parent, along with the schools, as a provider of factual health information to the youngsters.

"Health education has been taught in every school system since schools began, except that it was taught to kids by kids, and most often the information was wrong," he said. "Through this program they are learning about themselves and are aware of the issues before they confront them."

Student reps encouraged

The School Committee agreed to expand the input of high school students by encouraging more students to volunteer to serve as student representative.

Beginning in January, freshmen, sophomores and juniors will be encouraged to participate as representatives. This will help ensure an improved transition to the next school year.

☐In a recent game against the Coast Guard, Bowdoin College fullback Chris Abbruzzese had his best day rushing in four seasons for Bowdoin. He gained 73 yards on 10 carries and added spark to the Bowdoin ground game, which gained 290 yards during the afternoon. He has gained 104 yards overall and 55 yards receiving.

☐James Vivian, son of John and Dawn Vivian, has achieved placement on the Dean's List for the spring term at Gordon College where he is a junior psychology major. Students must carry at least three courses and earn a grade point average of 3.6 or better to be placed on the Dean's List.

☐Ralph Dormitzer has been elected to the Corporation of Boston's Museum of Science.

Dormitzer has been active on Cohasset town boards and is a senior engineering manager for Digital Equipment Corporation. A specialist in power supplies and systems, he was formerly vice president of engineering, and an officer of Electro Powerpacs Corporation. He is a graduate of Harvard University.

☐Has anyone seen an Atari jacket? Matt Sylvia hopes so. It is dark blue, size large, and has his name inside the collar. Matt is pretty sure the last time he had it was last Friday on the school bus. Anyone with information please call Matt at 383-9395.

☐Plans are underway to honor Gerard Keating ... a tribute to Gerard and all of his years of dedication to the town of Cohasset.

Gerard retired from the Post Office this year, after being our Postmaster for many years. The date to remember is Dec. 2, the location is Hugo's Lighthouse.

Committee members include: Jack and Bobbi Buckley, 383-1243; Phil Murray, 383-1000; Sumner Smith, 383-0657; Bob Ciciotte, 383-6322; Larry Keating, 383-0672 and Richard Sylvia, 383-9395.

Also, Fran Mitchell, 383-1138; Gerard Stanton, 383-0944; Joe Laugelle, 383-0079; Frank Salvador, 383-0318; George McCullough, 383-0466; and Clark Chatterton, 383-0560. Please call them for more information ... I'll supply more as it is given to me.

☐While on the subject of dates to be remembered, Nov. 9 is the Boosters Banquet. There will be no postcards mailed to parents this year in an effort to keep expenses down, so mark Tuesday, Nov. 9 on your calendar now!

☐A new group of Boy Scouts has been formed. They're called the Tiger Cubs and are an off-shoot of Boy Scouts for ages 7 and 8. There are five dens, with five boys in each.

Tiger Den No. 1 met at Pat Baird's home (den mother) last week. Members are: Danny Baird, Mike Equi, Greg Pyle, Mike Russell and Doug Schultz. The boys carved pumpkins to present to the nursing homes in Cohasset, which goes toward their "Helping Others" badge. Their motto is "Search, Discover, Share."

☐"I hope Mike Ellis gets lots of response to his plea that was in last week's Mariner! It's so nice when young people "get involved" and "care" about our town ... let's help him.

☐On Nov. 11, 12, and 13 the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "Scenes From American Life," by A.R. Gurney. It will be held at the Town Hall; curtain time is 8 p.m. Admission is $3.50 (senior citizens free on Thursday); tickets are available at the door on the nights of the performance.

☐A farewell party was held for John Raftery last week at P.J.'s in Scituate. John was our school business manager and is going to be missed by all. Good luck with your new venture, John.

☐The Gridiron Club is holding their annual dinner dance on Nov. 19 at the Cohasset Golf Club. The drawing for the $1000 raffle will be held that night too. It is always a night of fun and good food. Contact a member of the Gridiron Club for further ticket information.

☐Here's hoping the injuries of the players on the football team are mended by game time next week. Many starters were unable to play in Saturday's game, a fact that surely helped Norwell!

☐I think "Ma Bell" should pay for a little of every college freshman's tution. Think of the money "she" makes on collect calls that first year! Especially if the calls are coming from Hawaii on a regular basis ... as most people know, that's where our daughter, Kim, is this year. She gets more Cohasset news there than I do here, she helps me to keep you informed on her classmates.

Some kids just can't keep their heads on straight. Paddington Bear, as Danny Silvia, visits the Ripley Road Nursing Home with his first grade class.

☐Joe Becker and Bob Donahue are playing great football at Deerfield this year. Last week the Globe called them the "Cohasset Connection" with each of them scoring touchdowns! Great!

☐Yachtsman, white water rafter, tennis speed-o, Robert Jackson modestly accepted condolences and prank-presents from friends on the occasion of his 40th birthday.

Fortified with hats for all his avocations, and aids to last well into retirement, Jackson marched bravely into his fifth decade.

Congratulations and best wishes, Bob.

Chief Lincoln

Congratulations to Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, who at long last can scratch out the "acting" part of his title. With his 13½ years in the department, including the last eight months as acting chief, and with the great respect he has among his colleagues, he ought to be a strong appointment.

We also congratulate Lincoln for having the wisdom to swallow his pride and take the chief's job without the guarantee he had sought to get his old job in the department back if he should ever lose the chief's position.

In taking the new job without the guarantee, Lincoln has heeded the advice of his many friends and admirers. But for him it was a tough decision — "changing fields" when everyone's eyes are on you takes a big man.

We agree with Selectmen Ainslie and McArthur on the important principle involved in this case: Department heads should not have a safety net under them in the form of guaranteed "post-partum" employment. Such guarantees are not the norm in the real world most of us inhabit, and as Chairman Ainslie has pointed out they can only detract from an administrator's incentive to do a good job, they cannot add to it.

"Safety nets" are also likely to make department heads more difficult for selectmen to handle. Perhaps not in the case of Lincoln, who does not seem to be the feuding type. But in principle the selectmen are absolutely right. If department heads know they can never be fired, sooner or later one of them is going to succumb to the temptation of the arrogance of power.

Mud campaigns

How about that election? Have you ever seen so many "negative spots," as they say in the electronic media?

We mean those paid political commercials in which some gravelly-voiced New York ad man says: "Did you know that while Joey Doogood was slopping hogs putting his crippled widowed mother through law school, Congressman Stinkpole was junketeering in the Orient on the proceeds of his tax on the elderly?"

Congressman Stinkpole's hired voice then responds that he's a family man — whatever that means. We'll tell you what it means, it means that Stinkpole would love it if you would conclude that Joey Doogood is gay, but he'll gladly settle for your just thinking of him as a philandering, irresponsible family-wrecker!

And so it goes. Our question is, isn't anybody for anything anymore? Don't any of these candidates have a vision for the future they'd like to share with us? Or are negative ads like hijackings and candy pranks — something we have to wait out until the sour trend sweetens?

No . . . it was not confetti

Dear Ann Landers:

This time I'm not looking for advice; I'm giving it. Ann, please tell your readers that as they go through life they should always keep one law of nature in the forefront of their minds: Never, never, never park your vehicle under an expressway over night.

You see, Ann, for reasons beyond my control I recently had to do just that, and the results, quite literally, weren't pretty.

First question: Ann, do you have any idea how many pigeons come home each night to roost on the girders that support that portion of the expressway that is located behind the North Station? I do, Ann. 8,927.

Second question: Do you have any notion what 8,927 pigeons can do to a van? Frankly, Ann, I hope you never find out.

The following day I had to pick my van up at the dealership in Needham where it had been towed for repair. Ann, when I saw that poor, abused, pigeon-violated van I wanted to cry. I wanted to run. I wanted to wake up and find out it was a nightmare. The one thing I didn't want was to get in that van and drive it.

I did what I had to do.

Ann, it's been more years than I care to count since strange men have felt impelled to follow my vehicle, establish eye contact, and make personal suggestions.

That day, they did. Business-dressed men in their 40's pulled level to me in their Lincoln Continentals and, between gasps of helpless laughter, shouted, "Hey, lady! You'd better find another place to park that van!"

A station wagon full of nuns passed me yelling, "Hey, van-dal, cleanliness is next to Godliness!"

Ann, I was so upset that I took a wrong exit off the Mass. Pike. When I gave my money to the man at the toll booth, I begged him to tell me how to get back on. I explained between sobs that I was lost and in need of guidance.

He looked at my sympathetically with limpid Hispanic eyes, and murmured in a softly accented voice, "Ho boy, lady. Thees eesn' your day, ees it? Even thee birds don' like you."

Then he collapsed in a fit of giggles.

When I pulled into Boston, my riders spotted me from a distance. I later learned that as I approached, each voiced his or her own thought.

Joanne was convinced that I was so happy to have the van back that in a festive mood I had bedecked it with confetti.

Brenda's first opinion was that some vandal had taken a can of spray paint to the helpless vehicle.

Ed wondered what that terrible odor could be.

Don hoped to get some free fertilizer for his garden.

I didn't have to be told Brenda's second thought. I read lips fairly well, and when she whispered two words, I said, "Bingo."

Margie expressed reluctance to touch the door handle.

It was a long ride home. When I finally pulled into the driveway, Skipper examined the vehicle thoughtfully. "Been to the teredactyl nesting rounds?" he enquired politely.

The Dragon was wonderfully sympathetic, though. Not only did he, Breida and Tanya clean the van while I was at a conservation meeting (the only conservationist there who hated birds) but the next day he gave me a present.

"You may need it for the van in the future," he told me, "and you can certainly use it in your work with the Legislature."

It was a shiny new shovel.

Ann, some gifts are beyond price.

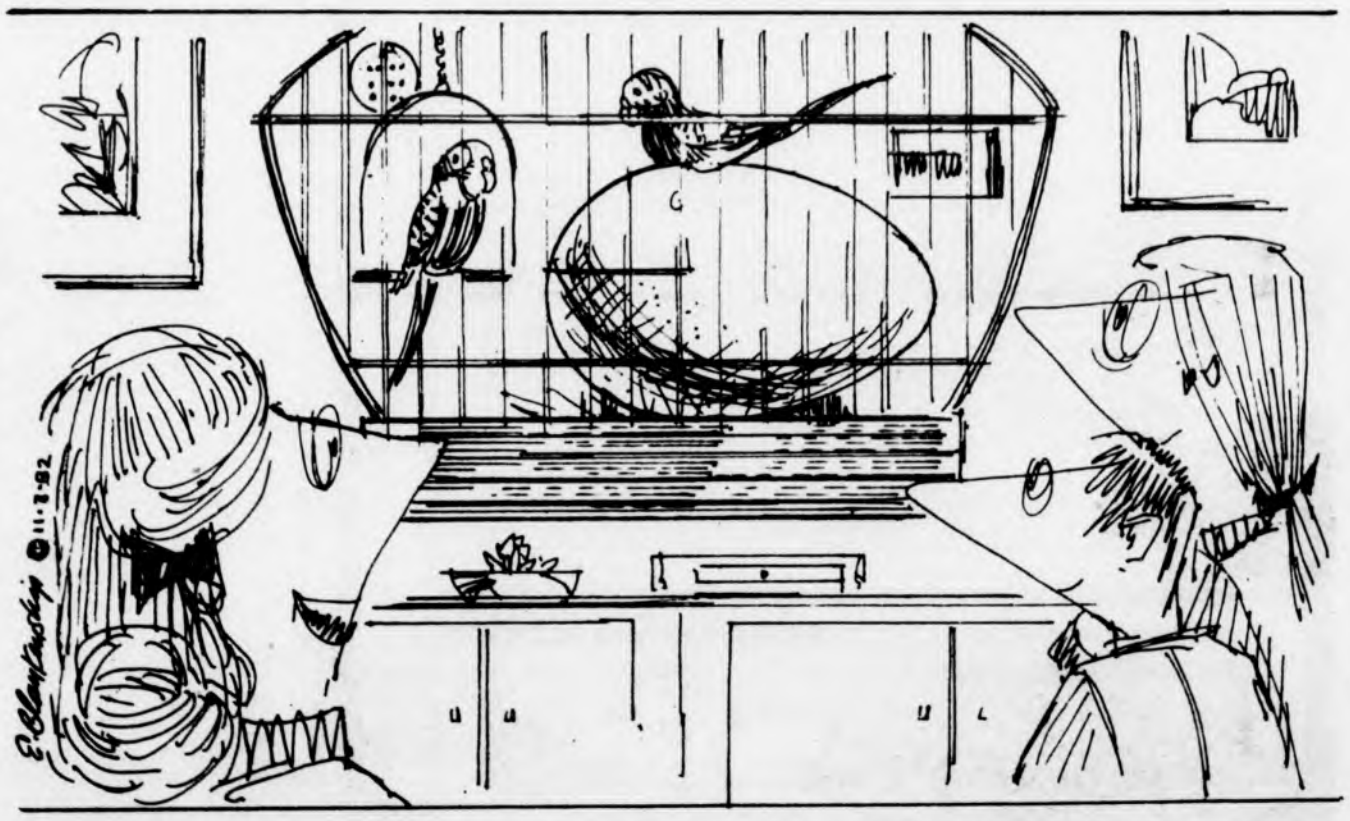
The Ombudsman for elder services

Letters

To the Editor:

I believe the report in last week's Mariner by one of your reporters purporting her understanding of the Ombudsman program (of the South Shore Elder Services, ed.) as explained to her by Eileen Kirby is a distortion of the Ombudsman program.

I feel compelled to comment because this is not what I have been told by a person who went through the program and what I read in the manual.



Kirby states that the main objective of the volunteer is to provide companionship to the lonely patient. The Procedures Manual for the Sub-State Ombudsman Program states otherwise: In the selection of volunteers, "prior experience as a 'friendly visitor' should be carefully evaluated in terms of adjustment to the Ombudsman role. ... The role of Ombudsperson is to assist the resident in resolving situations of concern which may adversely affect the quality of care, health, finances, welfare and autonomy of that person and to also act as the resident's advocate when appropriate."

Training stressed that Ombudspersons were not "friendly visitors."

Kirby states that a list of patients who have few visitors or relatives is given to the volunteer. This is by no means the volunteer's primary method of relating to the residents: On page 21 of the manual the om-

It appears to me that the main objective of the program is of a different nature than that stated by Kirby: "to provide companionship to the lonely patient."

Those who helped

To the Editor:

During the recent boating accident, many agencies came forward to help. These included the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments, Coast Guard, the Quincy Diving Team and the Red Cross.

Two special people, Isabel and Barron Salvador came forward to help. With their assistance and the donation of their motor home to the Red Cross, we were able to prepare hot food and coffee and provide bathroom facilities for more than 50 volunteers.

Those of us who are privileged enough to have Izzy and Barron as friends know of their many generosities to our community.

On behalf of the American Red Cross Cohasset Chapter, I would like to publicly thank these fine people for their contribution to our effort.

School Dept. briefed on cable process

[Here is a copy of a letter sent to the School Committee and School Superintendent concerning the impact of cable television to the schools. Ed.]

Dear Mr. Crowell:

I believe the report that I prepared in May is still a useful document through which to present the school committee, at their meeting on Nov. 1, 1982, a short overview of the nature and status of the cable TV process in Cohasset.

The deliberations are at a crucial point. Preliminary drafts have been submitted by four companies — American Cablesystems, Campbell CATV Systems Associates IV, Greater South Shore Cablevision, Inc. and United Cablevision Funding, L.P. The Cohasset Cable Advisory Committee is preparing a draft of the final specifications for the cable system they wish to see implemented in Cohasset.

At their request, and with your permission, I serve on the Community Programming Sub-Committee, and am helping prepare the draft of this portion of the specifications. I am pleased to be able to represent the interests of the schools in this process.

The companies will return amended proposals by January 31, 1983. After a period of evaluations and a public hearing, the choice of the company to build the Cohasset system will be made by Selectmen by mid-April, 1983. An immediate provisonal license to the company will be followed by a permanent license in about four months. Construction can begin at that point, depending upon its speed, the system could be in operation about six months to a year after that, or as I figure it, between January, 1984 and September, 1985.

As the schools are very likely to participate in some aspects of the cable system, and this time schedule could affect our next budgeting process, I recommend that the school committee be regularly updated on the progress of the cable franchising project and the possible potentials and obligations this system may have for the Cohasset schools.

There will be an ongoing committee of some sort to oversee the cable operation in Cohasset during the life of the franchise. Its form has not yet been determined. Cohasset schools' representation on this committee would be, to my mind, highly desirable.

Similarly, as the schools will most likely be one of the major users (and, possible producers) of cable TV in Cohasset, I think that we should consider the establishment of some kind of group that oversees the implementation of the cable program in the schools and coordinate its functions with the community at large.

Perhaps it would be wise to include representation from administration, teachers from each school, media personnel, students, and parents in such an organization. Working with the school committee, they could see to it that the Cohasset education community derives the most appropriate and cost-effective benefits of this new and highly promising communications and learning tool.

The franchise, when awarded, will be for fifteen years, or until almost the year 2000. Students that we educate during these years will, I think, find themselves better able to compete in a world of technology that's hard for us to predict, or even imagine, if we can provide them with experiences in the kind of program production and information processing systems that cable TV networks can provide.

Tape from Florida

Al Odermatt recently had the pleasure of visiting with Rene and Margaret Chiasson in their mobile home at Sebastian, Fla. Rene has sent the following taped message to the Mariner.

"I lived in Cohasset for 34 years and tried to give good service to my customers and contributed in ways I could best. I was active in many town organizations (served 18 years on the Sewer Commission). Now with criticism in local papers of people who try to do a good job for the town, I would hate to serve the town in any capacity. It seems there's no constructive criticism. Every week we're waiting to see who they are going after next. I don't know what's going to happen. I would hate to run for selectman, would hate to be a public servant.

"On the positive side, when I get the Mariner each week it's like old home week. I like to read about friends (their positive news, too much negative news).

"I've said what I'm going to say about editorials and commentaries. The town officials are not blameless, no doubt about it, but can you imagine putting up with that abuse. Of course, the selectmen and some other officials are paid. But, the board of health, advisory board, personnel board are not paid. And, the least little thing you do, you are dragged through court — that's unfortunate. But, everything aside, it's always nice to read the Mariner."

Mrs. Price's first grade goblins wish the Ripley Road Nursing Home residents a Happy Halloween with a song.

OSGOOD AND DEER HILL

A scene from the high school's coming production, "GREASE" will be presented at the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools on Wednesday, Nov. 17 at 9:15 and 10 a.m., respectively.

This preview, courtesy of Bryan Marks, Ron Emmons and part of the high school cast, will serve to spark the younger students' interest in the play, and it will also give them a close-up of the workings of a play in rehearsal.

The Deer Hill and Osgood Schools have applied for a theatre residency for January-February 1983.

Robin Lawrence won the dried flower arrangement raffled off at the Osgood open house night. The RAFFLE raised another $75 towards the theatre residency. Thanks to all who bought a chance.

HIGH SCHOOL

SPELLING WORDS to be learned this week are: noticeable, nuisance, occurred, occurring, omitted.

Thomas Lucas, CHS art instructor, announces that there are FOUR EXHIBITS in the CHS display areas. These were assembled by the junior and senior high art classes and the 10th grade humanities classes.

The themes are "Our Concepts of War," "Last Summer," "Great Ideas of Man," and "Colonial Crafts and Living."

Parents are encouraged to visit the school and view these detailed show windows. The Grade 10 display of Colonial Crafts and Living includes ropes, leather making, stencilling, distilling, paper making, butter churning, home building, preserving foods, gravestone art, tools, quilting, candles and scents.

PSO

Gail and John Convery and Robin Schubier, organizers of the recent yard sale, say it was a great success.

. . . Schedule . . . 'Grease' . . . Spelling words . . . PSO update

They would like to thank the following businesses for donations: The Red Lion Inn, dinner for two; The Bread Shop, baked goods; Kimball's, breakfast for two; The Donut Tree, doughnuts; Kehoe's U-Haul, U-Haul truck; Child World, balloons; and Stop & Shop, 10 percent discount.

They also thank parents for their donations, and all the volunteers who worked hard for the sale.

The PSO is very pleased with the reception the COHASSET SCHOOL CALENDAR has received. As they are a non-profit organization, they would appreciate a donation to help cover calendar expenses.

Checks may be sent to the PSO, P.O. Box 30, Cohasset, or left with the school secretaries.

Fall Harvest Feast at the Deer Hill

The tenth annual Fall Harvest Feast is underway in the fifth and sixth grade open space classroom — a curriculum project which immerses the students fully in the habits and lifestyles of Massachusetts' earliest settlers.

Teachers Larry Schultz and Joann Magoun recently traveled to Plimouth Plantation and the Wampanoags' Indian Village with their classes. Some visited the Village to inquire about the attitudes, ideas and customs of the Wampanoags at the time when the Pilgrims arrived in Plymouth.

Other students in the class explored the Pilgrim's compound, talking with its first residents, Captain Miles Standish and Governor Bradford, other more recent Pilgrims, and temporary settlers awaiting transport to the Jamestown colony.

The trip was important on-site education for their re-creation of life at Plimouth Plantation which will be shared with the rest of the school. Their presentation will bring the year 1627 to life with costumes, artifacts and dialogue.

Pilgrims, Wampanoags and their families will then join for the traditional feast of thanksgiving. Students will each prepare a portion of the meal.

Enrichment update: computers are here

COMPUTERS

Computers have come to the Deer Hill School. Many of the students have already experienced "hands-on" time at the keyboards.

Enthusiasm is high and some 5th and 6th graders chose to find out more about how these machines work.

John Hubbard, a systems manager at Honeywell Corp., visited Deer Hill recently. After giving a brief history dating back to Elizabethan times, Hubbard focused on the technological advances of the last 20 years.

Comparing the bulky size of the original vacuum tubes with the silicone chips of today made quite an impression on his young audience.

Hubbard pointed out that the original computers filled many rooms, generated intense heat and were prone to breakdowns.

The students enjoyed handling the circuit boards, magnetic tapes and printouts associated with contemporary technology.

The session ended with projections into the future and a lively question and answer period.

HALLOWEEN SKIT

Joan Cassiani's fifth grade class got into the Halloween spirit by performing an adaptation of the poem, "Little Orphan Annie," for the 4th and 5th grade library classes.

Under the direction of librarian Marjorie Murphy, the performances adopted Cockney accents to lend credence to their performance. Each child wore his or her favorite ghoulish costume.

The polished production was also presented at the Joseph Osgood School. Squeals of delight and applause brought this Halloween adventure to an appropriate conclusion.

Judy Arndt cleans up . . . professionally

by Tanna Kasperowicz

There's a joke among individuals involved in the printing trade that Cohasset residents have not one business card, not two business cards, but various business cards for their many enterprises.

That's probably a reflection of the times, and how many of us are "Making It In Massachusetts."

Judy Arndt of South Main Street is no exception to the rule. She's tenacious, vastly talented in many areas, and could have a slew of business cards made up to reflect her various abilities:

TENNIS INSTRUCTOR

In 1972 ranked third in the Women's Competition in the Dominican Republic Nationals.

RESEARCHER

BA in Biology/Minor in Chemistry. Four years of research experience with various Boston Medical Institutions.

PROFESSIONAL COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHER

Has contracted with various American companies overseas for their commercial work: Gillette, General Foods, Vicks.

EMBASSY OF THE UNITED STATES
Colombo, Ceylon

Former Secretary and Budget Assistant. Conversational ability in Spanish.

OWNER
J.C. ARNDT PROFESSIONAL CLEANING SERVICE
1978 to Present

And of course this last and only existing business card is the most important one because Judy has been making a living as a professional cleaner for the past four years. Her customers are commercial and residential.

She got into the business not because she's always loved dragging a vacuum behind her, but because, like many of us, she needed to earn a living. After returning to Cohasset from Ceylon four years ago, she couldn't find the job she wanted.

Instead of waiting around for the right opportunity, she advertised as "Hazel" in a local newspaper. She got some immediate clients. Her business boomed. And four years later she's basically happy with her enterprise, which she first thought of as only a "temporary" situation.

Running her own business gives her the flexibility she needs for her various interests. And they are many.

After cleaning two or three houses a day, it's not uncommon for Judy to relax with a game of squash. After a week of what might be a grueling experience for anybody else, she might get on her 10-speed and cycle to Plymouth or go sailing for the day. She likes to keep moving.

"House cleaning does not provide good circulatory exercise," she says. "But it does keep you in motion." And it keeps Judy at a perfect 111 pound weight for her muscular 5 foot 4 inch frame.

She admits that the work is not intellectually stimulating. "But most people don't have intellectual stimulation in their jobs. What's important is what people do outside their jobs. Besides, cleaning somebody else's house isn't as awful as cleaning your own." And usually, she has one of her professional team in tow.

For most clients, she uses her own equipment (vacuum through dust cloths). That's so she's always sure she has the equipment she needs. Depending upon the plan of the day, she might arrive at a client's home on her moped or on her bicycle. But usually she needs her car.

"Most people are pretty easy-going. Ideally rooms should be picked up before we get there. Picking up takes time and cuts into my contracted cleaning time which is normally one or two hours a week per client."

She will dust, vacuum, clean bathrooms, refrigerators, ovens, even do some windows. "But I won't iron." If a client requires extensive window-washing Judy has several sub-contractors who will provide that service.

Some clients clean along with her. "Cleaning is no fun by yourself."

Last summer she employed one popular Cohasset college student who startled one of his friends when he walked into his bedroom and said: "I'm here to clean your room, Bill. If you'd get out of bed it would make things easier."

Because Judy is a former chemist, she has some knowledge of special cleaning "potions." She can usually get the brown stains out of the old porcelain tubs so popular in Cohasset homes. And she has some other magic tricks for brass, bathrooms...but she will never give away her chemical recipes.

During the day she sometimes has the pleasure of being "assisted" by non-school age children...one five year-old tot was asked to put her sneakers away.

"Where should I put them?" the tot asked.

"in the freezer," Judy said.

Before Judy left that day the tot's mother found the sneakers in the freezer and everybody had a round of laughs.

"Not being around children very much, I keep forgetting how literal kids are."

And now...the question you've all been waiting to hear the answer to: She dusts first.

Pecce is million dollar home seller

For 21 years real estate veteran Mary Pecce of Norwell has been engaged in the "home wars" of finding and selling homes people can afford.

Recently she again won the annual "battle" of chalking up $1 million in home sales to qualify for entry into the Million Dollar Club as an associate of the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, Realtor.

No stranger to Million Dollar Clubs, Pecce, for the past four years, has also won entry into the Multiple Listing Service Million Dollar Club, as well as the Conway Company's $2 Million Dollar Club.

A member of the Plymouth County MLW Board of Directors, she is also a state director of the Massachusetts Real Estate Board and holds certification as a Graduate of the Realtors' Institute (GRI) and as a Certified Residential Specialist (CRS).

Pecce has spent all of her 21 years in the real estate industry in the Cohasset Conway office, managed by Muriel Desmond.

Obituaries

Sarah McLarey

Sarah E. (Wilson) McLarey, 79, a retired housekeeper for private estates in Cohasset, died Oct. 27 in South Shore Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Northern Ireland, she lived in Cohasset 25 years.

Wife of the late Henry McLarey, she leaves a son, Henry Wallace McLarey of Norwell; two granddaughters, Patricia Ann McLarey and Jennifer Sarah McLarey of Norwell; and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held Saturday in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Peter Grimes

Peter Wendell Grimes, a 26-year-old Cohasset resident, died by accident Oct. 23. He was the son of Elaine H. (Stannard) and the late Professor Wendell F. Grimes.

He leaves a sister Martha J. Grimes of Colorado and four brothers, Stewart H. Grimes of California, Michael H. Grimes of Cohasset, Marcus H. Stannard of Hawaii and Christian A. Stannard of Hingham.

Services were held Saturday in the First Parish Unitarian Church in Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Big Brother Association, 294 Washington St., Boston.

Philoptohos Society tea

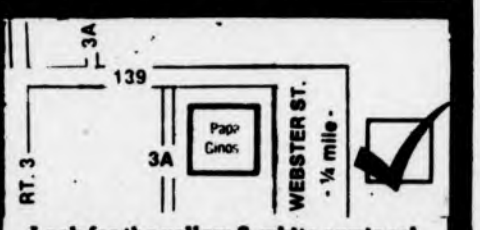
The Philoptohos Society of Panagia Church, Cohasset, is sponsoring a tea to honor Rev. and Mrs. Constantinos Mendrinos Sunday, Nov. 7 at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Historical Society's Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street.

The recently founded Greek community is welcoming Father Mendrinos and his wife as the permanent Priest to the South Shore Church.

Father Mendrinos worked in New York, but has been relocated to the Boston area to teach at the Hellenic College in Brookline, as well as minister to the needs of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church (Pope Memorial).

Chairwomen for this welcoming tea are the officers of the Philoptohos Society, Jeanne Syrmopoulos of Cohasset, President; Helen Manjos of Hingham, Vice-President; Elizabeth Bourne of Scituate, Treasurer; Laura Apostolu of Hull and Dee Alexopoulos of Weymouth, Secretaries.

Free innoculations



The Southern Massachusetts Chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) is offering free anti-influenza inoculations again this year to patients who have muscular dystrophy or related neuromuscular diseases covered by the Association's program.

Children and adults afflicted with neuromuscular disorders are considered at high risk of serious illness if infected with influenza viruses and should receive flu shots annually as medically prescribed.

The chapter will pay for flu shots for all patients it serves, whether shots are administered by patients' personal physicians or by physicians at MDA clinics.

In the southern Massachusetts area, the MDA clinics are located at Boston University Medical Center; Children's Hospital; New England Medical Center; Massachusetts General Hospital; Boston, and Lakeville Hospital, Lakeville.

Sparetime folly, leisurely surveys

By Lois Martin

No one gave a hoot about how I would vote. There never has been a call about what television programs I favor. And not once have I been polled, even superficially, for inclusion in anything approaching a Kinsey report.

But finally a couple weeks ago a polling person in New York called with this survey: "How do media leaders spend their leisure time."

Isn't that wonderful? At last somebody asked.

So I answered. The questions weren't tough. Some bordered on being insipid. But I was ready to play. Essentially the woman wanted to know what value if any I place on leisure time and how I like to spend it. Then I was to guess how readers would answer the same questions. So we're all on the record now.

PATCHES

Getting right to it, she said, when I was not working, sleeping or participating in family activities (the wash), what on earth was I doing. Did I have time on my hands, did I waste it, was I "somewhat adrift."

That's it, the last one, adrift in my leisure. Now I know what I've been doing so I can tell people when they ask.

Sometimes it's embarrassing when people apologize for calling. They say, "You're so busy." I'm not a whit busier than most of my friends/acquaintances/fellow workers. I just flurry more giving the appearance of someone who's right out straight.

Some I know are workaholics. Not I. She asked if leisure was a luxury or a necessity. Necessity, I told her and I said you'd say that, too.

Take reading, for example. It's wonderful, enriching, distracting, educational, entertaining.

But for me it can be mind-altering, dangerous. A person who tends to transform into the leading character shouldn't read "Harvest Home." How would you like to have someone like Betty Davis in that role making your supper?

Even non fiction could be risky if readers favor the likes of Fall River's Lizzi Borden, never mind the daily news.

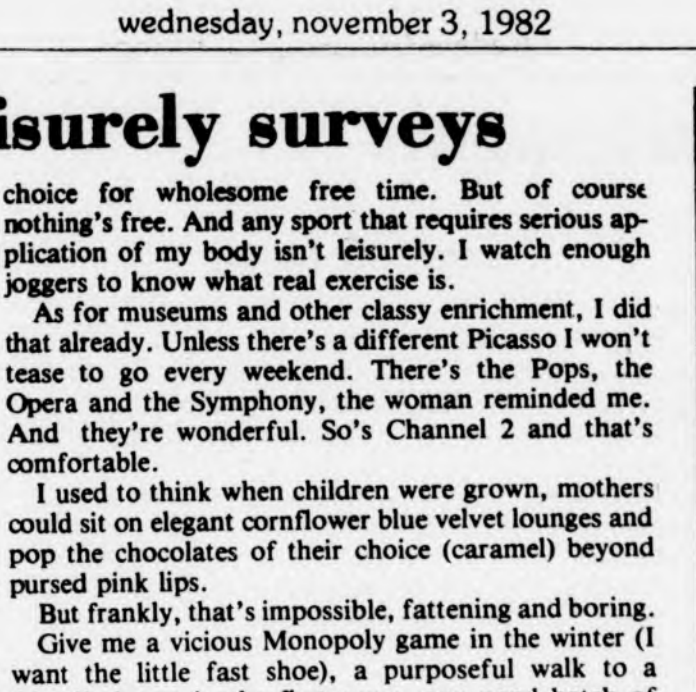
There's knitting or other craftiness, but I didn't indicate that was something I've been doing since I broke my needles over my right knee for kindling.

Sports, she said. That was supposed to inspire my choice for wholesome free time. But of course nothing's free. And any sport that requires serious application of my body isn't leisurely. I watch enough joggers to know what real exercise is.

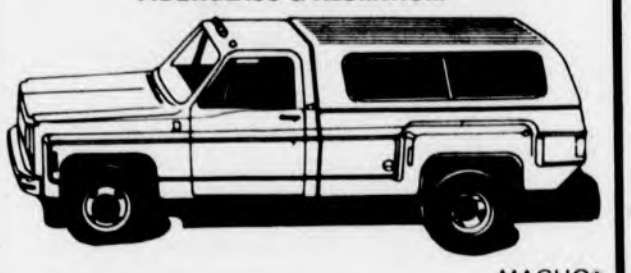
As for museums and other classy enrichment, I did that already. Unless there's a different Picasso I won't tease to go every weekend. There's the Pops, the Opera and the Symphony, the woman reminded me. And they're wonderful. So's Channel 2 and that's comfortable.

I used to think when children were grown, mothers could sit on elegant cornflower blue velvet lounges and pop the chocolates of their choice (caramel) beyond pursed pink lips.

But frankly, that's impossible, fattening and boring.



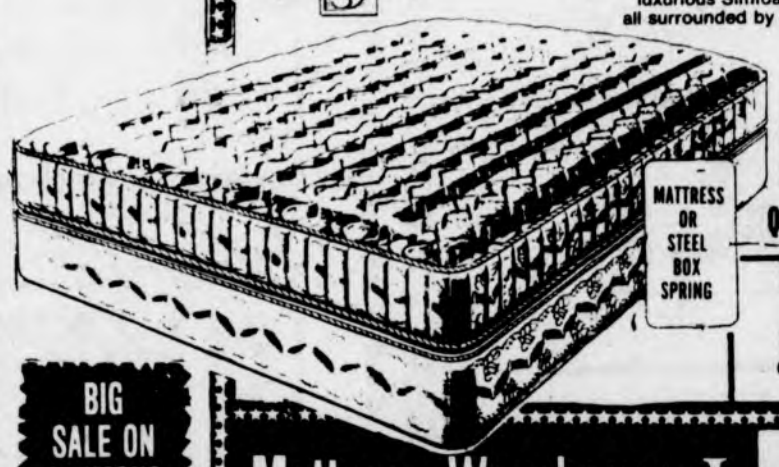
Give me a vicious Monopoly game in the winter (I want the little fast shoe), a purposeful walk to a friend's house in the first snow, one good batch of popcorn balls to make before the molasses stuff hardens on you, good food enough to share.



And people, I'll take people, those who consider free time best spent in good company with good conversation about great ideas...and bountiful nonsense.

Most of all in my leisure I want no deadline. I have those a lot and I prefer them in work.

But in play, oh no. A place set aside for fun but unscheduled, joyful wherever possible, and..."somewhat adrift."



For the record I told her that's what you'd prefer, too. So if I was off a little, give her a call to correct it...in your spare time, of course.

Present sewage treatment plans costly, say practitioners

Should voters approve the go ahead of construction of the sewage treatment plant or should residents ask town officials to look for a more cost effective solution?

More than 100 residents who signed a petition to suspend plans for the proposed $13.7 million sewage treatment plant would prefer voters abandon the project.

They submitted an article for consideration at the Monday, Nov. 29 town meeting, which would do several things:

— Direct town officials to renegotiate the terms of an agreement made between the town and the state Division of Water Pollution Control.

— Prepare preliminary design alternatives to the proposed plant.

— File applications with the state to receive financial assistance for any proposed alternative.

— Authorize the town to vote money to pay for the cost of an alternative sewage plan.

— Suspend, delay or end a contract with consultant Metcalf and Eddy for the design of the $13.7 million sewer plant.

Plans for the plant go back to 1978 when state officials were concerned with the quality of water going into James Brook from the Elm Street sewage treatment plant.

The state banned any new connections to the plant and federal officials ordered the town to adhere to its discharge permit.

The permit is for 72,000 gallons per day. The plant has had flows as high as 250,000 gallons per day, but Charles DeSantis of 260 Forest Avenue said this amount is a result of inflow infiltration, ground water runoff, leaks and sump pumps and normal sewage flows.

The new plant would have an initial capacity of 500,000 gallons per day but could be expanded to 700,000 gallons per day.

The town faces a timetable for design and construction of another facility. In 1979 the state threatened to take the town to court because of its failure to develop plans for a plant.

To avoid a lawsuit, town officials accepted a $10,000 fine for past violations and agreed to stick to a timetable for construction of a new facility.

DeSantis' primary objective for submitting the article is to provide the town with an affordable method to fulfill the requirements of the discharge permit and to give residents an opportunity to solve sewage disposal problems, "wherever they may exist."

The current plans, DeSantis said, provide for only a small section of town. His alternative would encompass the entire town.

He is also concerned about sewerage system outfall plans affecting Pleasant Beach and Jerusalem Road. "What happens if the plant isn't functioning. What happens to the unprocessed sewage? Will we be getting effluent in the harbor?"

DeSantis also feels the current plans do not effectively consider the future growth of the town and the potential for population expansion.

Earlier, DeSantis had asked selectmen to look into the terms of a $1 million state loan to the town to pay for the treatment plant.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering has agreed to make the $1 million available until federal money is awarded. The town has voted $500,000 for its share of the $1.5 million design costs.

Football Skippers fall to Clippers, soccermen win

By Alano O'Brien

Mariner sports

FOOTBALL

The CHS football team travelled to Norwell last Saturday and were downed 28-0.

Coach Leone was disappointed saying Norwell wasn't a better team by a 28-0 score.

The Skippers were handicapped by the loss of the team's stars, Senior Tom O'Brien and Junior Lee Wilson due to injuries.

Quarterback Rich Evans had to sit out the first half due to injury and sophomore Troy Chatterton stepped in to take over.

Senior Pat Broderick was praised for an oustanding game.

This Saturday the Skippers travel to Rockland for what is expected to be a rough game.

FIELD HOCKEY

Last Monday, the field hockey team was defeated 2-1 in a tough game against Duxbury.

The score was tied 1-1 until the final four minutes when Duxbury broke the tie and won the game.

Senior Mia Graham scored the goal for Cohasset off a pass from Gia Barresi.

The Skippers also faced Holbrook last week and shut the Bulldogs out 1-0.

Mia Graham scored the game winner in the first half with assists from Joy Pratt and Nancy Walls.

Elizabeth Glasfeld was praised for a fine performance while her sister Emily recorded the shut-out.

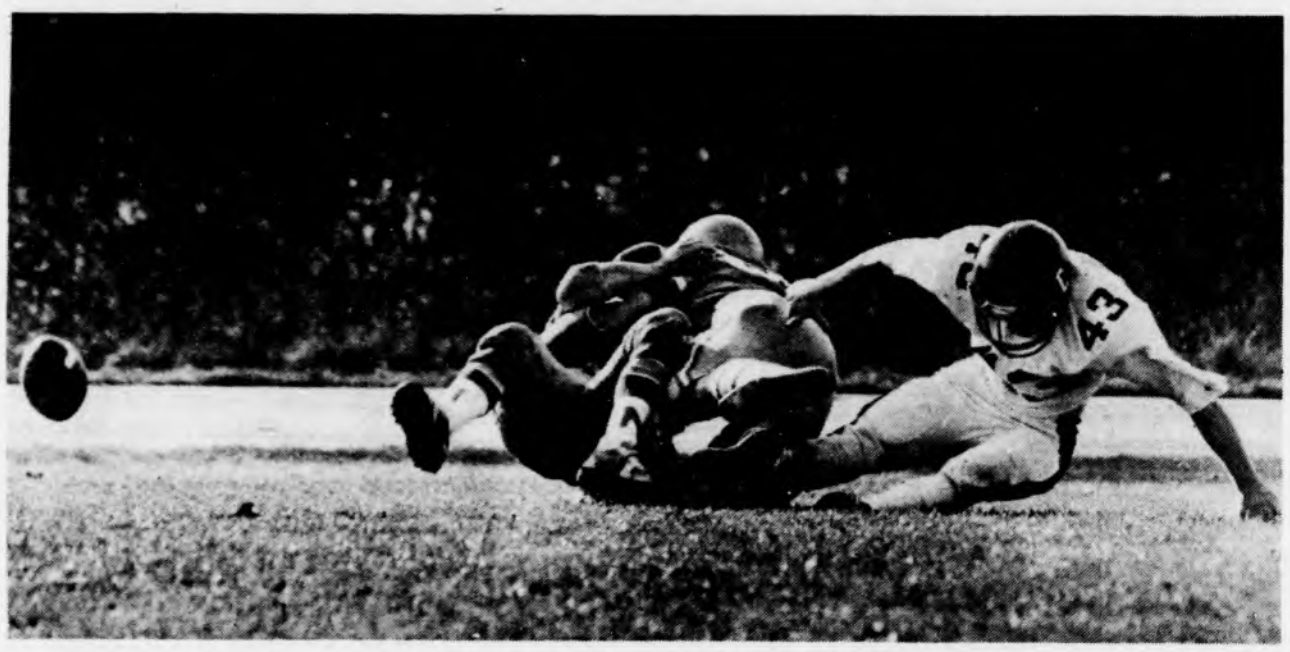
The girls, now 7-8, wrap up their season this week with a match against Norwell on Monday.

BOYS SOCCER

Last week the boys soccer team eliminated league opponent Norwell from the state tournament by defeating them 2-0.

Sophomore David McDonald and Bobby Schultz earned the goals for Cohasset with assists from Scott Duncombe and Lee Reld.

Mike DeSantis and Lee Reld were praised for a great midfield game while goalie Chris Mahoney recorded his fourth shut-out of the season.



The boys also faced East Bridgewater last week and tied them 1-1.

The Skippers took the lead two minutes into the game with a goal from sophomore Mike DeSantis off a Jim Stallard pass.

Captain Dan Bowen was praised for playing a strong game at defense and goalie Chris Mahoney played outstandingly in net for Cohasset.

The team, now 5-7-1, has won 4 of their last six games, their only losses to Duxbury and Rockland. Their season closed Tuesday with a match against Hanover.

Booster Sports Banquet to be held Nov. 9

Tuesday, Nov.9 has been set aside for the Booster Club's Sports Banquet to be held in the high school cafeteria at 7 p.m. Recognition of athletes is the highlight of the evening with "Spirit" trophies to be awarded to one member of each varsity team.

Parents are encouraged to attend for a $4 per person fee. Because of limited seating, only parents can be accomodated.

Prepaid reservations should be sent to the Cohasset Boosters Club, P.O. Box 511, Cohasset, Ma. 02025 by Nov. 6 or payment may be made at the door.

Seahawk hockey team wins thrice

In games reported for the week of Oct. 24, the Seahawks Youth Hockey Teams emerged victorious in three of the five contests.

Coach Carney White's Pee Wee A's trounced Neponset 6-1 in a game that saw goalie Scott MacKay lose his bid for a shutout with just 21 seconds left in the contest.

Craig Mulcahey (2), James Misakian, Rickie Chase, Darin Gold and Andy Thoams dented the nets for the Seahwaks while Gold (2), Todd Fitzpatrick, Jamie Hoffman and John Zimmer had assists.

Coach Frank McGovern's Pee Wee B's edged Neponset 4-3 to register their first triumph of the season. William Hingston, Jason Clark, Paul Norton and Steve Boardman all scored while Terence Shea and Pat Glennon supplied the ammunition.

The Hobomock PeeWee B's also were victorious as they shaded Bridgewater-Taunton 5 4. Steve Elmes with a "hat trick" and Billy Hingston with a pair of goals led the offense while Hingston (2), Elms, Cimetti and Meers were credited with assists.

Jim Consalvi's Pee Wee C's lost to Middleboro 3-1 despite the outstanding cageminding of Andy Nawn. Christopher Gong scored the lone Seahawk goal with assists going to Karl Christ and Adam Belmarsh.

Coach Mike Dundon's Squirt B's suffered a 5-0 shutout to a powerful Quincy team.

At the Rec Center...

BASKETBALL LEAGUE

There will be four divisions of boys, grades 2-9 and three divisions of girls, grades 2-8.

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct basketball league registration Saturday, Nov. 6, from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m., at the Town Hall. Both A and B division soccer players may register before their soccer games.

The fee will be $6 per person and a 50 percent discount for two or more children from the same family is offered.

Larry Shultz will be the Recreation Department basketball league coordinator again this year.

Telephone registrations will not be accepted. Enrollment may be limited.

HOLISTIC HEALTH SEMINAR

The Rec. Dept. will sponsor a free seminar offered by Mark Mincolla of Holistic Health Inc. Wednesday, Nov. 17 at 7 p.m. at Town Hall. Mincolla will explore the importance of optimal nutrition as a valuable tool in preventing disease, the proper use of vitamins and food supplements, and the best ways to improve your family's over-all nutrition, i.e. how to substitute healthful foods for empty calories and how to maximize the nutritional dollar in the market place.

The most updated forms of laboratory nutritional therapies will also be discussed. Pre-registrations will be required. Call the recreation office at 383-6791.

LET US DO YOUR HOLIDAY COOKING

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

My kitchen is beginning to seem more and more inviting as the November days wax shorter and chillier. Summer days that lure one outdoors are behind and I'm left with closets needing to be tidied, windows waiting to be washed and a hodgepodge of recipes in such a jumble that it sometimes takes longer to find one than prepare it. My pile of torn pages ripped from magazines and newspapers has been building so long that recipes that read "continued on page so and so" are a real challenge. And so it was that I had to chuckle when the evening mail brought a batch of clippings from yet another of our fabulous cooks. Millie Carr writes: "tried and true as usual." Sometimes I wonder if she ever serves the same meal twice; surely this one would deserve an encore.

MEAT LOAF SOUFFLE

1½ lbs. ground beef
1 egg, beaten
1/2 c. dry bread crumbs
1/2 c. chopped onion
1/2 c. milk
1½ tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1 pkg. (4 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese
2 tomatoes, sliced

Combine first seven ingredients. Press lightly into a 9x9" baking dish. Bake at 350 for 25 min. Drain off fat. Top with cheese and tomato. Spread evenly with souffle topping. Bake at 350 for 30 to 40 min., or until topping is golden brown. Let stand 5 min. before serving. Serves 8.

SOUFFLE TOPPING

1 c. dairy sour cream
3/4 c. instant-type flour
3 eggs, separated
1/2 tsp. salt & pinch of pepper

Combine sour cream, flour, egg yolks, salt and pepper. Beat until thick and creamy. Beat whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into sour cream mixture, blending well.

How pleasant to open my kitchen drawer beside the stove since I took the time to paste my recipes in a loose-leaf notebook. Now I'll have no trouble finding another of Millie's recipes that I look forward to trying out, called

1¼ c. sugar
2 eggs
1/2 c. flour
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1 c. pitted dates, cut up
1 c. chopped pecans

Grease 8" square pan. Set aside. Mix at medium speed, 1 c. sugar and eggs. Add flour, baking powder and salt. Fold in dates and pecans. Spoon batter into pan and bake for 30 min. Remove from oven (will look like a cake) and stir with wooden spoon right in the pan. Let cool about one hour. Roll into 1" balls and then roll in remaining sugar. Yield: 40 cookies.

Wondering what to do with your left-over Halloween jack-o-lantern? Gerry Stephens to the rescue. Here's a recipe she "clipped" from a Boston paper and was good enough to drop off at the house the other day.

SQUASH APPLE CASSEROLE

2½ c. fresh squash or pumpkin, cut in 1" chunks
1½ c. cooking apples, pared, cut in 1½" slices
1/4 c. butter
1/4 c. brown sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 c. walnuts, pecans, or chestnuts, coarsely chopped
Salt to taste.

Prepare square (or pumpkin) and apples. Melt 3T of butter; combine with brown sugar, cinnamon, nuts and salt. Place a layer of squash (or pumpkin) in 2 qt. casserole dish; drizzle with butter and sugar mixture. Top with a layer of apples and drizzle with butter and sugar mixture. Repeat until all ingredients are used. Dot with remaining butter. Cover casserole and bake in 350 degree oven for 45 min., or until tender. Serves four.

ANNOUNCING
An Exciting New Place
To Live in Hingham...
The MEADOWS
FURNISHED MODELS
NOW OPEN!
You'll love living at The Meadows, a superb new community of attached single family homes now being built by The Green Company in Hingham. Expert construction crews have completed the first group of two and three bedroom homes, and the exciting furnished models are now ready for your visit.
Our pride in the design and construction of The Meadows is well justified as you'll see when you visit. There's a wonderful spaciousness to the homes . . . an exceptional flow between rooms achieved through the use of large foyer areas, vaulted ceilings, expansive glass with views to the out-of-doors, and rooms opening into each other yet subtly separated by custom dividers.
There are many gracious details: tray ceilings; large country kitchens with sunny breakfast bays—even one designed as a greenhouse; walk-in bay windows; and exceptional master suites, some including secluded fireplaced sitting rooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights.
The combination of location, space and amenities make these homes an exceptional value at $153,000 to $210,000. We suggest a visit soon for early selection. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, keep left to our entrance, or call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

School Committee briefs...

FALL CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS

The School Committee will be attending the Massachusetts Association of School Committees fall conference this week. They considered 16 resolutions, which could be filed for legislation this year.

The following will be the committee's recommendations.

The committee wants more information about a $1,000 minimum per student reimbursement proposal and a plan to equalize educational opportunities for students regardless of wealth of a community.

The committee supports guaranteeing local aid in proportion to an increase in state revenue and local aid delivered to the towns in a more timely and efficient manner.

The committee opposes a plan to separate Chapter 766 or special needs funding, but supports an improved public bidding law which would eliminate cumbersome paperwork requirements. Several local roofing companies decided not to bid for a high school auditorium roof repair because of the paperwork requirements.

Others include prohibiting a retroactive tuition increase; supporting committee membership in the state high school athletic association board of directors; and opposing a plan to prohibit administrators and school managers from admission to the same union covering school teachers.

The committee also supports a plan to develop strategy to improve minority staff representation; retaining the local option of providing a late bus; and to extend the notification of non-teacher tenured teacher layoffs from April 15 to June 15.

The committee wants more information on a plan proposed by the Rockland School Committee to eliminate committee liability when a school system allows home teaching by parents.

SOUTH SHORE LEAGUE REALIGNMENT

The School Committees support the administration's proposal to attempt to realign the interscholastic competition to schools of comparative sizes.

Scituate and Whitman-Hanson plan to apply for admission to the South Shore League from the Old Colony League. It is possible that Bourne, Old Rochester and Wareham could also apply. This could mean a shift to a two division setup composed of large and small schools.

Cohasset might be included in the small division and compete against Abington, East Bridgewater, Hull and Holbrook.

High School Principal Richard Streeter said considerations of a league realignment include safety, rivalries, transportation costs and tournament eligibility. School principals and athletic directors will meet Nov. 8 to make the decision.

PUBLIC COMMUNICATIONS

The School Committee has amended its public input policy. At the beginning of the future meetings, the committee will allow 10 minutes for public comments concerning any non-agenda items.

Residents are urged to inform School Supt. Eugene Crowell of any agenda item they would like discussed by Thursday prior to the following week's meeting.

The committee amended its policy to improve committee communication and to provide for a more efficient meeting. The committee will still allow resident input on agenda items.

'Carousel' succeeds in debut

By Patricia Desmond

Carousel whirled with laughter, fine music and applause during its Hingham debut last weekend.

Anyone who missed the opening shows will have a chance to come to the Hingham High School at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 5 and 6, for the production by the Hingham Civic Music Theatre.

The performances were the quality that rates a standing ovation from any reviewer.

Sylvia Hawe, as Nettie Fowler, did a particularly strong rendition of the inspirational "When You Walk Through a Storm Hold Your Chin Up High" which is actually titled "You'll Never Walk Alone."

The real surprise, however, was that no one in the cast had an ordinary voice. Each player showed the sort of professionalism that's expected of city theatre.

Billy — Richard Jensen — was indeed a rogue who could win hearts. Julie — Jeanne Scammell — was sweet with a true voice. Donna Milani Luther as Carrie seemed as if she could scarcely keep from bursting through her songs.

Bill Morgan as Jigger did the villian's part well with deep and throaty song and a touch of raucous humor.

Norman Shaw as Enoch probably should have had an off-key tune just to fit the character. But it wouldn't have made as good listening.

All in all the production was superior. Congratulations to director Violet Villani, music director, Sal Bartolotti, choreographer Joan Kenney and everyone else who helped make the production a success.

Tickets can be had at the Hingham Square Bookshop, the Hingham Library or at the door.

It's worth the time the cast put into it.

School aid opponents

Selectmen joined the School Committee and the Parent School Organization in opposing a ballot question allowing private school students to receive public aid. Also opposing the question were the League of Women Voters. Opponents said passage of the question could cause financial problems for the town and threaten the quality of education in Cohasset.

CCC offers holiday decorating & workshops

Holiday decorating and gift workshops are scheduled at the Cohasset Community Center.

Mary Struzzerio, the Center's quilting instructor, has some new ideas. First she has a new technique for appliquing strips of fabric to make a design taken from the Book of Kells. The Celtic Design workshop will be held Thursday, Nov. 4 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

A workshop featuring the Log Cabin pattern for creating a Christmas tree wall hanging will be offered on Thursday, Nov. 11, and 18 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

A Wreath Making Workshop is scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 18 from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Bring pine cones; the instructor, Martha Gjesteby, will provide the frame and expertise.

Call the Center for more details and information, 383-0088.

Great potential for education

The benefits of cable TV

When cable television becomes a reality in Cohasset — between January 1984 and September 1985 — the schools will be a major beneficiary.

Dr. John Packard, school department media director and liaison to the Cohasset Cable Advisory Committee, told the school committee Monday cable offers a great potential for education.

He advised the committee that plans should begin to form a citizens' advisory committee to oversee the cable program in the schools and coordinate its function with the community.

Packard said since the schools will most likely be one of the major users and producers of cable TV, a group should oversee the systems implementation.

"Perhaps it would be wise to include representation from administration, school teachers, media personnel, students and parents. The advisory group would work with the committee."

The committee agreed and Dick Conley, school board member added it might be advantageous to have this committee formed soon to help Packard with the specifications for the school system.

Packard, at the committee's request, serves on the Cable Advisory Committee's Community Programming, and is helping to prepare the draft of specifications. The draft should be completed sometime during the winter.

Preliminary applications have been submitted to the town by four companies, American Cablesystems, Campbell CATV Systems Associates, Greater South Shore Cablevision and United Cablevision. Amended proposals will be returned by Jan. 31. Selectmen will make a final decision in mid April.

Packard was praised by the committee for his extensive report, "Potential of Cable Television for the Cohasset Public Schols — Some Preliminary Considerations."

Some of the potentials for the school department include better television reception; more educational channels; two-way audio and visual communication between schools and other public agencies such as the library; a vehicle to bring educational sessions and retransmitted educational programs into subscriber homes; a chance to exchange educational programs with other communities and from the state department of education.

Another opportunity would include production of the school department's own programs. Instructional tapes, transmission of public meetings, budget hearing, teacher training or student projects could be videotaped, produced live and sent out over cable to the schools or homes.

Packard is recommending a cable connection to each school. By running a cable to a number of designated locations in each school this could possibly include one per grade level in the primary and intermediate schools and one per department in the junior or senior high and wires to all classrooms.

Future considerations could include a provision for telephone or televised call-in response to programs and meetings where individuals could interact with participants.

Others include data processing channels so individuals' computers could be linked with a central unit and converters to connect schools with individual homes sohomebound students could be tutored and give audio responses back to the school.

"A certain amount of time, staffing and funding of many of the functions can, through negotiation, be assumed by the cable company. However, planning and preparation by school staff will still be necessary to program effective programs even if they are produced and paid for by the cable company," Packard said.

He recommended the Cable Advisory Committee should ask the cable firm for substantial funds to provide the schools with reception, recording, playback, monitoring and retransmission capabilities and a videotape supply; a cable connection at each school and cable laid to several key classrooms in each building; access, on occasion, to the subscriber's network and an agreement that all company-provided equipment will be maintained and repaired by the company at their expense throughout the life of the franchise.

Other provisions recommended by Packard include adequate funding for local production by the company of school activities and public meetings; equipment needed to establish inter-school transmission for school grade cards, banks and other agencies and adequate funding to provide connection to any security and/or energy management system.

SCHOOL PREPARATIONS

To ensure effective use of cable television, the school department should establish a group which will select, schedule and arrange the transmission of public meetings, educational activities and be willing to give the cable company permission to transmit live or videotaped programs of some sporting events or meetings.

This includes setting up guidelines for granting permission and the specifications of those who should recommend what activities should be broadcast.

Packard said most of the four companies agree a mobile, van and/or studio and a part-time company paid staff technician should be provided and the companies agree student training is important.

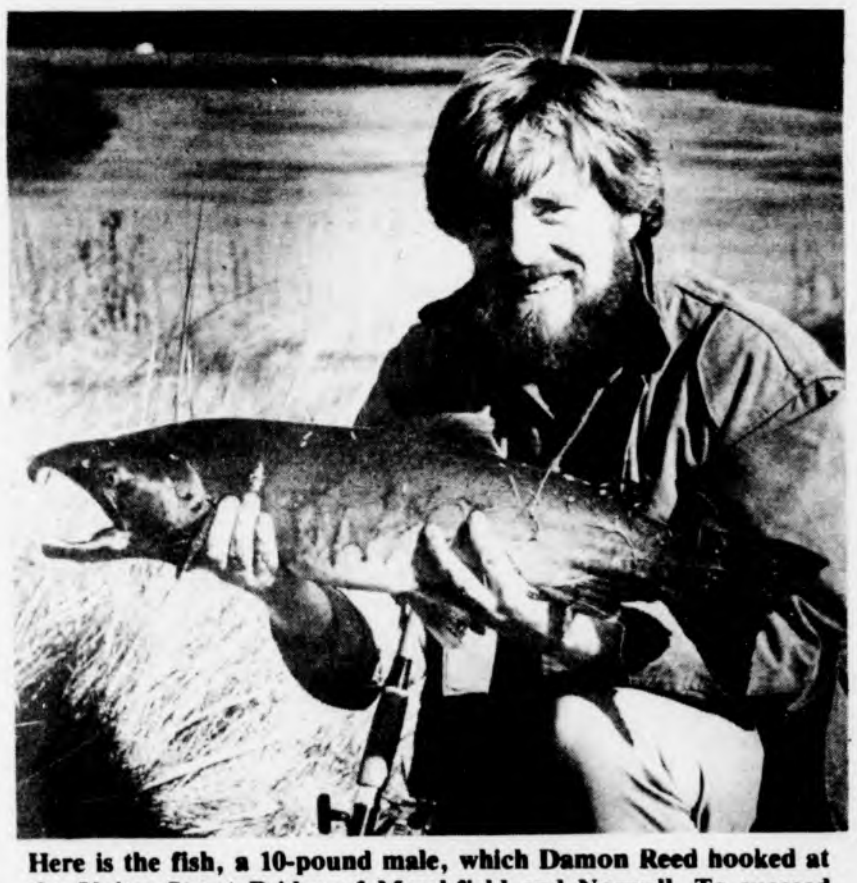
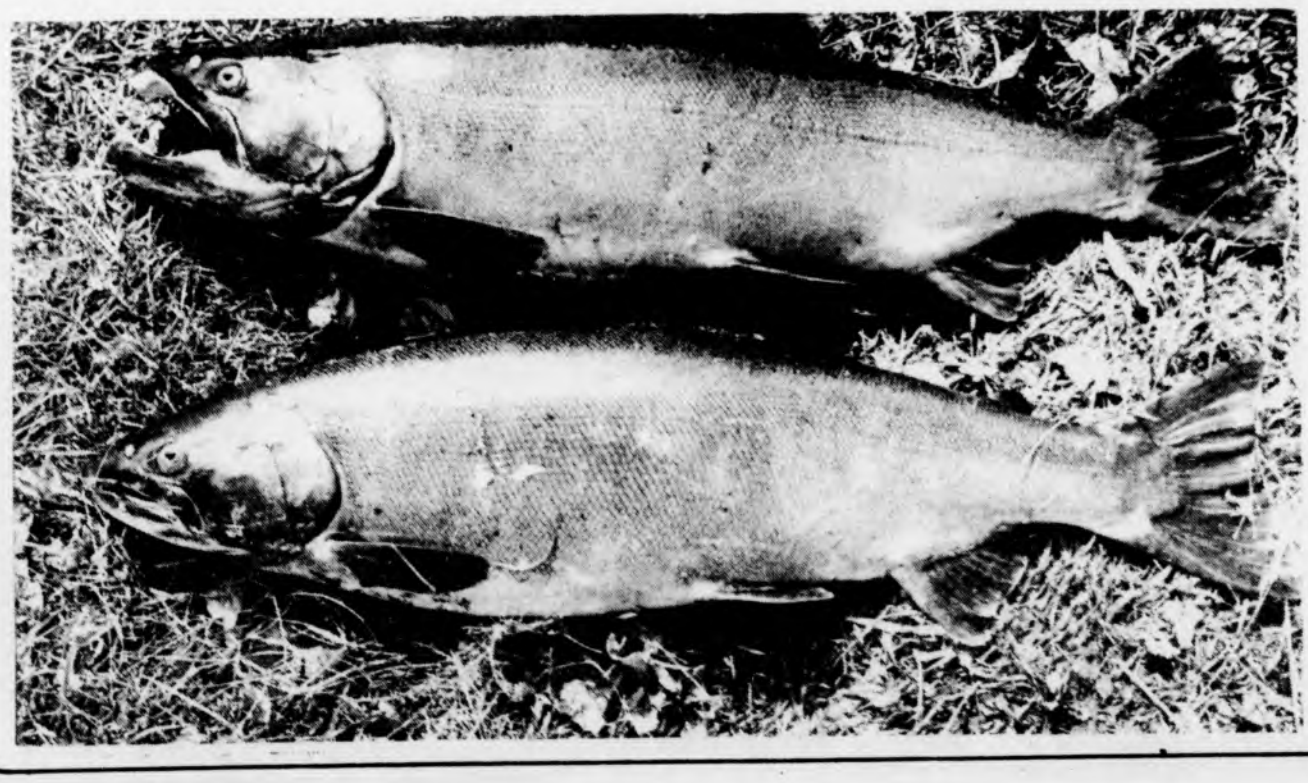
The Coho Salmon return



(The North River is home)

Damon Reed battles a coho salmon from the banks of the North River while Bob Anzalone prepares to gaff the fish and bring it to shore. Coho in the North River are tough to catch because they're returning to spawn and aren't in the mood to feed.



Rick Miszkin hoists a handsome 10-pound male coho (females don't have the hooked snout) which he caught on a spoon at the old Washington Street Bridge. The coho salmon is a western pacific game fish which has been stocked in the North River for the past several years.

Here is the fish, a 10-pound male, which Damon Reed hooked at the Union Street Bridge of Marshfield and Norwell. To succeed with the coho, you must be proficient, lucky and patient.

Workers from the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife prepare a fish trap at Indian Head Falls in Hanover. Most coho salmon that are caught end up in the nets and are transferred to a hatchery where they'll be used to produce more fish.

Here are a couple of handsome fish taken in the state fish trap. The male with the hooked snout is on top. Coho salmon are stocked in the North River (their only home on the East Coast) and after three years return "home" to spawn and die.

Dramatic Club opens 'Scenes From American Life'

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's 1982 Fall show, Nov. 11-13, will be the Playwright A.R. Gurney Jr.'s modern social commentary "Scenes From American Life."

This unusual two-act play will be directed by Ellen Kelly of Weymouth. Production Manager will be Jane A. Marshall of Cohasset and the Stage Manager will be Wayne Miessner of Scituate.

The play's 36 short vignette scenes will be casted by 25 actors and actresses including veterans of previous Cohasset productions and newcomers to the Dramatic Club. Many cast members have appeared with other South Shore and area theatrical groups. In "Scenes From American Life" the cast members will play different roles in the various scenarios or vignettes.

The cast for the Fall show includes:

Stephen Lee of Brockton, whose extensive background includes community and stock theater as well as choreographic and directing experience; Charles Hoffman of Cohasset who appeared in the 1978 Cohasset High School production of "Oklahoma" and now attends the University of Massachusetts in Boston.

Julia Wood Jordan of Cohasset whose dramatic experience includes the Cohasset Club's recent "A Man For All Seasons" and "Strange Bedfellows," last season's winter and spring shows; Susan Harrington of Cohasset, who has appeared with Curtain Call Theater, acted in the Cohasset production of "Send Me No Flowers" and is a frequent backstage worker with the Dramatic Club, and George Donovan of Hull, another familiar figure in Dramatic Club activities.

Others include Harry Heineman of Scituate, whose last season's credits include appearances in the Club's "Table Manners" at the Town Hall and also at the Brandeis Drama Festival; and Joe Coyle of Scituate, whose dramatic debut occurred in last spring's Club production of "Strange Bedfellows."

Betty Meissner of Scituate who has been onstage at the Town Hall numerous times, most recently in the Club's "Night Must Fall" and "Strange Bedfellows;" Bob Julian of Cohasset, a Club veteran recently seen in "A Man For All Seasons;" Audrey Abrams of Randolph, whose career in theater includes summer stock, theater group, television and motion pictures (the last category includes roles in "Walk East On Beacon Street" and "The Great Brink's Robbery.")

Denise Ripley of Cohasset, a longtime member of the Dramatic Club and most recently the Director of last spring's "Strange Bedfellows;" Scott Ketcham of Cohasset, the Scenery Designer for the play also appearing onstage as an actor following a role in last year's "A Man For All Seasons."

Polly DiBona of Scituate, whose experience includes community theater and radio. She is a radio drama reader for the Talking Information Center for the Blind.

Additional cast members of "Scenes From American Life" include: Lisa Fichtner of Cohasset, an experienced actress with the Boston College Dramatics Society, the Young At Heart Theater in Hingham and with the Cohasset Club in "Night Must Fall," Flo Kelley of Cohasset, another veteran Club member seen most recently in "Strange Bedfellows;" and Claire Berman of Hull, active with the Hingham Civic Music Theater, the Company of Wayts and Players of Hingham, the Unicorn Singers and the Broad Cove Chorale, and is a teacher at the Cohasset Community Center.

Virginia Dowling of Weymouth who has studied drama at the South Shore Conservatory of Music and appeared there as a Guest Adult Performer with the young person's dramatic group named the Shoestring Players.

Cast members Matt Kuhn, Gerald McNabb and Beth Perry are students at Cohasset High School and all appeared in the Dramatic Club's production of "Strange Bedfellows." Others are: Eddie Fee of Hingham, Jane Turner of Weymouth, Cheryl Peters of Marshfield, and Sarah Lualdi and Diana Moe, both of Cohasset. The play will be presented at the Cohasset Town Hall. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Can you identify this elusive Cohasset quarterback as he evades a Norwell would-be tackler? For a hint, the name of this player also is found on another Mariner page. (Derr photo)

Register now for Art Center monoprint workshop

Enroll in advance for the Monoprint Workshop at the South Shore Art Center and plan to spend a delightful day learning how to create handsome monoprints that you can use in your own home or give as a special Christmas present.

Louise Kalish, well-known artist and teacher, will instruct the simple techniques of this quick and direct print process; beginners are welcome and more advanced artists will find ideas for enlarging the scope of their personal imagery.

This offering is for one day only, Saturday, Nov. 6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with a lunch break. Participants are responsible for their own supplies and should call the Art Center office at 383-9548 for the list; registration may be made in person at 103 Ripley Road or by mail.

Furnishing 10 rooms for $1900

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Married women residents of the Town should be duly warned.

Upon receiving your Mariner this week, you should immediately clip and hide this article...as it will do no good to have your spouse realize what Thompson Hughes of Highland Avenue did with $1959.06 in just six Saturday mornings.

Thompson Hughes, who would much prefer to be recognized for her artistic talents, and not her great bargain-hunting adventures, did a reverse pioneer bit when she came East with her husband John, 12 year-old Justin and nine year-old Cole just over a year ago.

Before starting out from Kansas City, Missouri, each family member was allowed to choose necessary items to make the trip East in their U-Haul.

Thompson got to bring along her paints and some easels...the plants had to stay home. She also retained her microwave oven, a pizza-cutter, flour sifter, bread knife, two small paring knives, lettuce tupperware container, etc.

There was not a little argument when John decided he had to have his office furniture. And presumably, the kids chose Abigail, their English sheepdog, and Casey the cat.

By now you should be getting the picture.

When Thompson and John decided to lease their lovely 10-room colonial home on the corner of Highland Avenue and Beach Street, they had their necessities with them and not much more — no beds, no mattresses, no household furniture...and a very small budget with which to produce these items.

It is not that Dr. John Hughes has ever been a poor provider. But he is the reason they came East. After years of running a successful dentistry practice in Kansas City he decided it was time to specialize. So it was back to school at B.U. for a special course and back to those school days of no cash flow.

Getting on with our story, Thompson told John she figured she could furnish the entire 10-room house for aproximately $1,500. And that became her goal. "As it turned out I spent $1,900...but I still did pretty well."

Thompson had six Saturday mornings to accomplish this feat...and John allowed her the extra attraction of his strong back for lifting only two or three hours on Saturdays. "It was really difficult. It took creative energy. And I made some, but not many mistakes. I picked up one couch which was so awful that even the Salvation Army wouldn't take it as a donation. It ended up at the dump."

"You know how some people have a thing abut buying too many shoes, or scarves. Well, I have a thing about couches."

In every other respect, Thompson was organized with lists and lists of items she knew she needed and prices she knew she had to abide by.

Justin and Cole entered into the spirit of the challenge and looked for donations and inexpensive items themselves. Shortly after the family had attained their goal of furnishing their 10-room home, Cole was out getting donations from the Village Fair ladies...telling everyone: "We have no furniture and my father's in school." The ladies responded generously. Thompson was a little embarrassed.

She said new and good friends helped immensely, friends such as Claffey Williams and Olivia Linsley, who invited Thompson to take what she could use from their attics.

When I sat down on a chair in the livingroom I felt I recognized it. It wasn't until we were into the interview that Thompson told me that particular chair had been in Judy Knox's sewing room. Ah yes, I knew it well.

Thompson knows where everything in her home came from, the particular moving sale, flea market or

Is three-to-five-to-three legal?

Confusion surrounds selectmen article

Confusion has enveloped the status of a Town Meeting article to repeal a new by-law calling for a five-member board of selectmen.

Selectmen last week agreed to sponsor an article for the Nov. 29 town meeting that would re-establish a three-member board of selectmen.

At the August Town Meeting, voters approved a change to the bylaws increasing the selectmen from three to five members.

The question now is whether the August vote can be repealed before it (the five-member board) is even put into effect.

Selectman Mary Jane MacArthur last week said the board has submitted the warrant article to Town Counsel Blake Thaxter for his review. The board has not received a final verdict on the legality of the article and selectmen do not know when the review will be completed.

If town counsel determines the article was not proper for submission into the town meeting warrant, it could be withdrawn, MacArthur said.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson said Tuesday no decision has been reached but a final decision would be made before Friday, Nov. 19.

Over two months ago, voters rejected selectmen's recommendation and approved expansion of the board from three to five members by a 217 to 196 margin.

The change was to take effect next spring with the election of two new selectmen.

The move for a larger board had been sponsored by a citizen group led by Tanna Kasperowicz and Police Sgt. Richard Barrows.

Kasperowicz said three or four attorneys have told her citizens' group the article is illegal because it violates state statute.

According to state statute, if the town votes to increase or decrease the size of a board, the vote is in effect until the act is accomplished.

Kasperowicz said the move to rescind could not be accomplished until two new selectmen come up for re-election in 1986.

The group also questions whether the article was filed on time. Selectmen voted to submit the article after the warrant had closed.

According to "Town Meeting Times," a handbook on parliamentary procedure, selectmen have the right to sponsor a citizen requested article but must do so before the warrant deadline.

Henderson has agreed to research all three questions.

'Invisible government' bill: $93,825

By Jane Lane

Cohasset paid $93,825 to "an invisible government" in 1982.

Last week the Cohasset Chapter of the League of Women Voters discussed the merits of county government and its affect on local residents.

An indepth review of county programs was presented by chapter members and state government specialists for the Massachusetts LWV, Patricia Facey and Ann Churchill.

Facey said although the League had completed a study of county government in the 1960's, it was determined a second review was necessary. The review centered on the 14 counties in the state, and the specific concerns of Norfolk County in which Cohasset is located.

County government was created in England centuries ago and was brought to this country by the early settlers. Originally counties were responsible for the courts, jails and keeping local land records. The responsibilities have gradually increased since the original county was created in 1643.

Norfolk County operates a hospital, a Registry of Deeds, a jail and house of corrections, and various civil engineering departments which have jurisdiction for several roads. There are eight county-maintained roads in Cohasset, Facey said.

The retirement system for municipal employees in the cities and towns within Norfolk County are handled by the county.

Some counties provide extensive health services, but Norfolk County is limited in this area, she said. There is only one health care facility operated by the county and that is a respiratory care hospital in Braintree.

The Norfolk Agricultural School is considered a fine educational facility according to the league's study. The arborist course which student projects feature at the annual Flower Show in Boston, has always received glowing reviews. There is also a florist culture course which continues to be one of the most popular subjects at the school.

There are three commissioners in Norfolk County, whose duties are quasi-judicial, according to Facey. They hear appeals from local citizens on land taking and property tax assessments. There are currently 723 tax assessment cases from Cohasset before the Norfolk County commissioners. The commissioners also serve as trustees of the hospital and agricultural school, they prepare the county budget and are responsible for all personnel matters within county government.

According to the study, 90 percent of the funds for maintaining county government come from the local property taxes, Facey said. This is a little-known fact, according to the study.

In fiscal year 1982, the total cost of operating Norfolk County was $10,805,214. That amounted to $5,492,150 in assessments to all communities within

New parking ban

Starting Nov. 15, 1982, it shall be unlawful for the driver of any vehicle other than one acting in an emergency, to park on any street for a period of time longer than one hour between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. of any day. This parking ban extends from Nov. 15 to March 15, inclusive.

Cohasset's week ...

Stroll plans underway

Plans are underway for the Cohasset Christmas Stroll. Merchants have begun arranging entertainment and activities for the Stroll, which will take place on the evening of December 3.

"Enchanted Village" will be the theme and Santa will arrive to hear childrens' requests; carollers will perform.

Shopkeepers will remain open through 9 p.m. and will offer gift suggestions and specially priced items.

Anyone interested in volunteering their time or with ideas for additional activities that would add to the fanfare, call Ellen Morrissey at Tides Inn, 383-9623 or Tina Watson at Cohasset Hardware, 383-0185.

Medi Mart to open

Medi Mart Drug Stores will open its 49th store, at Cushing Plaza, 739 Chief Justice Cushing Highway Monday, Nov. 15 at 9:30 a.m.

Community leaders will join Medi Mart executives in a ribbon-cutting ceremony to officially open the 12,629 square foot store.

This newest Medi Mart, employing 27 area residents, will incorporate pharmacy services and general merchandise into the one-stop shopping convenience.

The Cohasset Medi Mart will feature: a nature center, providing an assortment of natural products including vitamins, snacks and candy; a cosmetic/fragrance center containing a full line of cosmetics and brand name fragrances; an assortment of mugs, gifts, toys, casual wear shoes and kitchen items; a family reading center offering a large selection of books and magazines; and a complete selection of Hallmark cards, wrap and party goods.

Linda Kalns, store/pharmacy manager and Robert Amitrano, staff pharmacist will be available to Cohasset customers with information and guidance about prescriptions and generic alternatives for brand name drugs.

The Medi Mart Drug Store will play an active role in the health of the community through their "Good Neighbor Program" which includes these services:

Health screenings for blood pressure, diabetes, lung functioning and hearing impairment; the "Vial for Life" program, providing emergency and rescue squads with time-saving information; the "Consumer Guides to Prescription and Non-prescription Product Information;" and the "Poison Prevention" program providing customers with helpful, year-round information on poisonous substances and guidance on what to do in an emergency.

The Cohasset Medi Mart will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays.

Assisting Kalns will be the management team of Carl Zajac, merchandise manager and David Fisher and Jeff Priesing, assistant managers.

Fuel assistance

Cohasset residents can apply for fuel assistance on Tuesdays 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Scituate Council on Aging, 50 Branch St., or on Wednesdays 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Hull Town Hall, 253 Atlantic Ave.

Applicants are required to have documentation of income for the previous 90 days and primary source of heat bills after October 1, 1982.

Town meeting article

A group of residents have dropped a plan to seek a special town meeting article to return the police chief's position back to Civil Service.

The article will be on the municipal election in April.

Voters agreed to place both the police and fire chief under selectmen. But under state law, residents can take either of two routes to return the position to Civil Service.

This includes approving a town meeting article requiring selectmen to file special legislation seeking the change or passing a ballot question during a municipal election.

Sgt. Richard Barrows is one of the group members. He said the group is hesitant to go to the legislative route because the Legislature rejected a revolving fund for the Cohasset's Recreation Department after a town meeting approval.

Barrows estimated it would take about five percent of the registered vote to place the question on the municipal ballot next spring.

The move to take the chief's position out of control by selectmen came when selectmen bypassed Lt. Charles Stockbridge and Barrows when they named Ptl. Joseph Kealey police chief.

Cohasset Harbor car

If you passed the end of Parker Avenue Monday afternoon and saw a car floating in Cohasset Harbor, you were right. You eyes were not playing tricks.

Police reported a 1980 Oldsmobile wagon, left unattended, had rolled past the boat ramp and into the water. No injuries were reported. A local diver and a wrecker removed the car from the water.

Mussel permit limit

Selectmen have decided to limit the number of permits and the amount of mussels to be taken from Little Harbor on a daily basis until a state biologist has checked the area.

Five mussel permits will be issued this year to Cohasset residents.

Selectmen want the biologist to check if it is safe to take a large number of mussels from Little Harbor without disturbing the ecological balance.

Mussel fishing will be allowed until Jan. 30 for the five residents but the catch is limited to 30 bushels daily. Scituate selectmen have banned limited mussel permits as of Jan. 1, 1983 because of low mussel supply in the North and South Rivers.

Norfolk County. Cohasset paid $93,825 to the county in 1982, or $9.05 per capita.

According to the 1980 census, there was a total population of 606,587 in Norfolk County. That was down 15,000 persons from 1970.

In Massachusetts, $88 million was raised from property valuations of the 14 counties. The total assessments charged to the cities and towns totaled $75 million. The remaining costs were raised from fees, dog license revenues or federal or state grants.

The amount each community pays is determined by the local population. The commissioners prepare the budgets and go before the state legislature for its appropriation. The cities and towns are responsible for paying that appropriation.

For about six years, there was an advisory board comprised of representatives from each city and town, which reviewed the budget, but had no authority over it.

In 1981, state law granted the advisory board new authority over the county budget, thus giving the local communities some direct representation within the budget preparation.

The advisory board is comprised of one representative from each community. Selectman Rocco Laugelle represents Cohasset on the Norfolk County Advisory Board. His vote on the board is weighted in terms of Cohasset's assessment to the county. The higher the community's assessment to the county, the more weight the representative's vote carries.

The advisory board now has a say in the budget and what programs will be altered, decreased, increased, deleted or included within the annual budget. The goal is to have every advisory board member actively participate in the budget process and to report to his community on the actions of the advisory board.

What programs are necessary and cost-effective, and what programs are not being supplied by smaller cities and towns but could be offered by a county, are some questions which should be studied by the advisory board, the league members suggested.

A review of the more prominent county governments in New Hampshire, Maine and in the south and west were also highlighted in the study. In general, county government in Massachusetts has been labeled "the invisible government." Most people don't know who their county commissioners are and what programs are maintained by the county, Facey said.

"We feel, particularly since Prop 2½, that we shouldn't have a large portion of our budget — not knowing what the money is being used towards. We should know more about county government and what is available from the county for the local citizens," Facey said.

Confusion surrounds article...

Lucia Woods of 231 Jerusalem Road asked selectmen to draw up an article rescinding the Aug. 30 special town meeting article.

She told selectmen she would not have had enough time to gather the required signatures by the Nov. 3 deadline. Her personal attorney advised her not to submit the article but had learned from the Attorney General's office that the article could be re-submitted at another special town meeting. She requested selectmen insert the article as their own in the warrant.

Woods said it was wrong to overturn a form of government which had served the town for over 200 years at a special town meeting during the summer.

She said a five-member board sometimes has trouble reaching a quorum.

Board Chairman Henry Ainslie Jr. and Selectman Mary Jane MacArthur said selectmen have the right to consider any article up until the special town meeting.

Over the weekend the citizens group asked MacArthur to withdraw the article.

Kasperowicz said her group does not want to embarrass selectmen, but they want the article withdrawn. If it isn't she said the group may file a taxpayer's suit against the town.

She disputed Wood's contention that not enough residents had voted on the issue. She said the turnout for the August town meeting was the largest in a decade.

According to the town clerk's records, 573 voters attended the meeting and the vote was taken at 11:30 p.m.

yard sale. "The altar rug in the upstairs hall is from the Congregational Church...see the candle wax stains on it?"

She is also particularly proud of an ice crusher she got for $4; "the dinghy came with the house, the wooden oars were donated by a friend;" two children's life vests came from a Zayre's sale..."and I splurged on redwood porch furniture with yellow pads, a chaise and two chairs with a small table at a Zayre's sale for only $99.

John complained at the price, being so used to $8 and $10 expenditures for chairs and couches. But I said, look, we're going to live on the porch this summer, we'll really enjoy this furniture."

On porch and patio and beach supplies she had a budget of $228.80. On the kitchen...over 150 items, she spent $415.79.

Thirty-one furniture items cost $570. Accessories, lamps, rugs, pads: $229.02...this figure represents 48 items costing from 25 cents to a high of $40 for the 9 ft. x 14 ft. beige wool rug in the boys' room which she got at the Cohasset Village Fair sale.

Approximately 150 decorative items (baskets, tin trays, candles, seagull feathers (found on beach) cost $84.86. Twenty-four linens, $84.

"The beautiful white and blue quilted twin bedspread in the guest room was purchased for $1 at a yard sale."

Cleaning supplies (lots of good stuff from a K-Mart sale) were $270.80. On this list the most expensive item was a washing machine (through an ad) for $100. It works just fine."

Garage and tools: $37.93.

Miscellaneous: $28.86. This included an antique bird cage and stand, Olivia Linsley supplied the parakeet.

"A man selling a vanity stool at the Greek Orthodox Church Sale said, '$2, but for you, if you smile, $1.' I smiled and got it for $1."

And while Thompson is proud of all her "buys" she is most smug about the king bed and bedding she got from a family because they said, "there are too many children in bed with us every night." Thompson pulled that one off for $15 complete.

"Lots of people said go to the dump, you'll find good stuff there. I never could quite do it." Aside from the large hand-printed listings which Thompson supplied me for this article, she had a listing of tips she picked up:

1. The Salvation Army in Boston has high prices.
2. When you're shopping for bargains, you have to be careful not to indulge in goodies you don't need. I did buy a sheepskin for $14. I had to have it.

The secret of this picture is that Thompson Hughes furnished this room and the rest of her Highland Avenue home for $1900 from "yard" and other sales. (Greg Derr photo)

3. List what you feel you really need in each room. I itemized everything. Loved scratching off the items on the list as I discovered them.
4. Seconds stores have good deals on towels and linens, but I didn't do this.
5. Pick the sales that list items on your list and head right to them! At start of sale don't get sidetracked. The first sale on Saturday morning would always be the jackpot.
6. Do organize your route and plan of attack.
7. Lamps are very inexpensive everywhere...just wire or switch shade and clean, add bulb.
8. Old wooden church chairs ($2 each) come in handy for parties, etc.
9. Friends and even strangers really do get on the bandwagon and pitch in. Ruth Pratt came by one day with a new six pack of tumblers she thought "we needed."
10. Our telephone cord extension cost only $2 vs. phone store prices.
11. Remember. Estate sales handled by a third party always mean higher prices.
12. A lot of things which don't look very good at first just need some scrubbing. It pays to take time to fix things.
13. Raid friends' attics when invited...most times they are happy to get rid of the stuff.
14. I got 75 place settings of white ironstone restaurant china for $37. When we move I will break into sets and re-sell.

"I feel very satisfied that we accomplished this feat, made a very positive experience out of it, and feel a certain amount of pride...we have a couch in storage in Kansas City that cost $2,200 six years ago and we furnished the whole house for less than that!"

Thompson's ingenuity doesn't end here. She figures she should be able to double or possibly triple her investment in a year if she has to have an estate sale and re-sell everything.

Any other woman might have turned this into a divorce. Thompson transformed it into an exciting adventure for all of us.

And now, reader. Tuck this article away somewhere safe.

Barry Buckley

☐Barry Buckley, a 1979 CHS graduate, plays the offensive line on the University of Maine, Orono, football team.

The six-foot, 255-pound senior is an offensive guard and one of the reasons UMO is ranked number one in the nation among Division 1-AA teams in rushing offense.

Head coach Ron Rogerson has only praise when talking about "Buck's" performance this fall. "Barry Buckley is a tremendous team player and always gives a total effort both in practice and during the game," Rogerson says. "He's one of the hardest working players I have ever coached."

The Black Bears are 6-3.

In high school Buck threw the shot in track and played middle linebacker and fullback on the football team. In his senior year he earned All-South Shore and All-Scholastic honors as a linebacker.

After UMO the political science major would like to try out with an NFL team or maybe the USFL.

When he's not blocking defenders, Buck enjoys lifting weights. He can benchpress 450 pounds and in the full squat can lift 750 pounds.

Even though Barry Buckley hangs up his uniform for the last time for the Black Bears after this campaign the name Buckley will show up on the Maine football roster for three more years.

Barry's younger bother Paul is a freshman this year and also an offensive guard. At 6 foot 1 and 230 pounds the younger Buck is anxious to take his brother's spot in the lineup.

The two Bucks are the sons of John F., Jr., and Blanche Buckley.

☐John Ayer, a student at Colby College (Waterville, Maine), has been named a Charles A. Dana scholar in recognition of superior academic achievement and leadership qualities.

A junior majoring in government, Ayer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Ayer of Bayberry Lane. He is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Tickets for the tribute to Gerard Keating are going fast. Be sure to call one of the committee members, many of whom are meeting this week to organize a skit in his honor. The same people put Randy Feola's "life" together in a mini "roast"...anyone who attended surely remembers how much fun that was. It will be a special night for a special gentelman who has done so much for our town.

☐I received a note from Robin Schubier, asking that Caroline Stouffer's campaign and the South Shore Labor Council be thanked for providing "tired and cold campaign workers on the Cohasset Common a warm cup of coffee and donuts. Democratic and Republicanworkers alike welcomed the non-partisan coffee van as it arrived on the Cohasset Common election day."

☐Navy Ensign Edward Carroll, son of Charles and Lorraine Carroll of 216 So. Main St., has graduated from the Navy's AIC (Aviation Indoctrination Course). The six-week course was given at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., and included basic aerodynamics, aviation physiology and engineering.

☐Happy Birthday to Sara Froio, a freshman at Johnson and Wales. Usually her birthday is a "Big Bash" — hope she gets a nice party there. Many happy returns, Sara, and always stay as sweet as you are.

☐While on the subject of birthdays, plans are already under way for a seventieth birthday party that will take place in June. Watch for details, there should be many more to follow...

☐King Jewelers now has a complete laboratory for gem identification and jewelry appraisals and a graduate gemologist to run it.

Victoria J. King, daughter of June and Forrest King, Cushing Plaza, graduated from the Gemological Institute of America, Santa Monica, CA, where she received degrees in diamond grading, colored stones and gem identification.

☐Lance Norris, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Norris of 21 Beach Street, recently appeared in "Private Wars" at Whitman College in Walla Walla, Washington.

☐I recently drove by the Cohasset Common and had to stop and watch some families playing football...they looked like they were having such a good time (especially the parents). I asked Lucy Marsac if it was as enjoyable as it looked and she said that it was, but that "she was exhausted."

☐Maura Charlton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Charlton of 23 Forest Notch is being commended in the 1983 National Merit Scholarship Program. Maura is a senior at Notre Dame Academy and one of seven seniors receiving the commendations.

☐Does anyone know the whereabouts of Dottie Sawchuck? A member of the CHS Class of 1962, she is the only one left on the list that cannot be traced. An address list is being compiled to reach all members before Christmas and would love to add her name...please call me if you can be of help.

☐Harrington's opened this weekend and had a great crowd. Congratulations, hope it's a huge success.

☐Joe Dolan's wife Marie reports that Joe is recovering nicely at home after recent surgery for a hip replacement.

☐Be sure to take advantage of the South Shore Art Center's "Holiday Shoppe" if you need new ideas for holiday decorations. A wreath workshop with Karen Crockett of Karen's Designs, Rutland, Vt., will be held Nov. 13 from 12:30-2:30 and a dried material workshop will be given by Marion Bush on Nov. 19 from 12:30-2:30.

Everyone is invited but a count is needed to order supplies so call the office at 383-9548 for reservations and details.

☐Remember the Fall Flea Market, sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School, Nov. 20, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church. Call 383-0142 for details and table reservations.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln is a 'B.T.' Townie

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Newly appointed Cohasset Fire Chief Roger Lincoln is not just a "townie" (one who has lived in Cohasset since birth). He is a "B.T." (Before Townie).

Lincoln says he grew up at 456 Beechwood Street and remembers only that his grandparents lived in Cohasset; his mother was a Stoddard and Lot Bates and Burtram Pratt are among his many cousins.

However, Pratt, author of the "Narrative History of Cohasset," says that Lincoln is 11th generation. He is a direct descendent of Samuel Lincoln the weaver, known also as "mariner."

Samuel Lincoln emigrated from Hingham, England to New Hingham in 1637. He was one of the original shareholders in the 1669 division of Hingham's Second Precinct (Cohasset). He held his two parcels jointly with Thomas Lincoln, also a weaver. Their lands stretched from Little Harbor, Jerusalem Road, to Forest Avenue, and they were also "proprietors" of another parcel in Beechwood, where the new reservoir is presently situated.

Ancester Daniel Lincoln, son of Samuel, is the first person found in the Hingham records designated as a Cohasset resident. Lincoln built a house, probably when he married in 1677, one-quarter mile from Little Harbor, where the house of Gorham L. Bates (1711) now stands. This house was erected before 1685 when North Main Street, formerly the highway and stage coach route to Plymouth known as "Country Way," was laid out. Daniel Lincoln (1652-1732) was a farmer, and a large landowner interested in the iron mills.

Chief Roger Lincoln is literally "First Family."

The yellow engines were pulled out in front of the fire station and inside the firemen were swabbing the floors as Captain Mark Trask politely greeted me and escorted me to the Chief's office. Tuesday and Saturday are "wash days" at the station.

Lincoln is a clean-cut, dark-haired, 35 year-old man with a quiet but articulate voice. He lives on Brewster Road with his wife Gretchen, a shift supervisor for Friendly Ice Cream in Weymouth, and their two boys, Richard, 14, and Brett, 12, who both attend Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School.

After Lincoln graduated from Cohasset High in 1965, he worked for Clarence Patrolia, plumber and gas fitter, whose shop was formerly at 93 Ripley Road where Carousel Antiques is now located.

Lincoln keeps a low profile. At the last town meeting when the applicants for chief were discussed, John Russell Chase of Red Gate Lane addressed the meeting and stated that although a resident of Cohasset for over 25 years, he did not know Roger Lincoln.

Although an inhabitant of Cohasset for 42 years, I confessed to Lincoln that I did not remember ever previously meeting him. He assured me that he had worked both in Chase's residence and mine assisting Rene Chaisson in his former part-time job as plumber's helper.

Lincoln passed the civil service exam for firefighter in 1968 and was appointed permanent firefighter in April 1969. He took the fire captain civil service exam in 1976 and was the only local person to pass the exam. He was then appointed permanent fire captain July 1, 1976.

Lincoln is proud of the Cohasset Fire Department and believes they give good service, citing the praise townspeople give their ambulance service. He feels the effect of a new chief is that "any new administrator has his own ideas of operation, and I am no exception. It is a matter of different ideas and putting your ideas into effect."

Although the selectmen have not yet signed his new contract, Lincoln expects that his salary will rise from his acting chief's pay of a little over $22,000 to approximately $28,000.

The new chief says that because Cohasset is only 10 miles square and has a population of 7,800 there are fewer house fires than in more congested towns. However, he warns "they eventually do have fires."

Cohasset closed two fire stations in 1980, leaving only the central station on Elm Street. Beechwood closed when the new pumper couldn't fit into the small single engine building and Proposition 2½ lead to the closing of West Corner.

Lincoln says managing with one station is "not the best situation," since the central station is not at the geographic center of town. He admits that building a station on Sohier Street might have, in hindsight, been a wiser choice. However, he gives the impression that he will manage.

According to Town Accountant, William Signorelli, overtime in the Cohasset Fire Department has exceeded $25,000 since the new fiscal year began July 1. Although the department has an authorized manning of 24 men, it is down to 21. Lincoln says it takes six men in each of four work groups with a 42 hour work week to man the station 24 hours per day, seven days a week.

Officials explain that the difficulties of obtaining certified EMTs from civil service lists has caused the overtime. Cohasset obtained only one man from the last list. It costs approximately $1,600 to train a firefighter to be an EMT qualified for amublance duty. Lincoln says civil service "has served me well personally," but he is "frustrated" with the difficulties of replacing firemen.

Cohasset's equipment consists of a 1974 and a 1980 pumper, a 1978 ladder truck, one 28 year-old engine, one 21 year-old engine, a 27 year-old forest truck and a 1976 ambulance. Lincoln plans to ask for a new ambulance at the next annual town meeting, or at least to have the chassis replaced. He also expects to retire the forest truck in the next few years.

Lincoln says he has often been asked why the department sends both an ambulance and a fire engine on every call for ambulance transportation. He explains this gives more manpower to lift stretcher patients, especially when they must negotiate stair railinigs in split level houses or when the patient weighs a lot. Two men on the ambulance plus two on the engine give a total of four men and one of these is always an officer in charge. The engine also carries additional oxygen and medical supplies.

Conversely, he says he has been queried as to why the department sends the ambulance to fires, where no person has been injured. Again there are extra hands, and in case a firefighter is injured fighting the blaze transportation to the hospital is at hand.

Cohasset Village Fair plans are underway

By J.A. Marshall

Many chairmen of the Cohasset Village Fair met in the St. Anthony's Rectory Nov. 9 to plan the Fair.

Although workshops and meetings have been held throughout the year to organize the events for the Dec. 4 event, this was the first time all chairmen met together. The host church for this annual Christmas Fair is St. Anthony's.

Those wishing to help on a specific table, the dinner, creative workshops for the Boutique or Children's Tables or have items for donation to the attic treasures and plant table, food table, or secret room, call the central committee members. These include:

Sharon Becker, 383-1971 or Jean Manganoro, 383-9337, St Anthony's; Carol Sandblom, 383-1812 or Ruth Nedrow, 383-9292, Congregational; Ayn DuVoisin, 545-6821 or Marcia Ludlow, 383-0259, St. Stevens; Jeanne Syrmopoulos, 383-9071 or Eve Sedell, 545-6963, Panagia Church; Betty Van Slyck, 383-1561 or Sue Terry, 383-0789, Unitarian Church.

By hanging an oriental "prayer rug" on a wall, their ornate patterns and rich colors can be brought to eye level. The relatively small size allows these crafted masterpieces to be owned and displayed without the expense of buying a room-size area rug. When hanging a rug, however, be careful. They were originally intended to lie flat on the floor. Improperly hanging them can introduce stresses that may diminish their value. Try fastening a 2 inch x 2 inch piece of wood to the wall, cut to the width of the rug. Fasten the rug to the wood with even tension fabric fasteners. The rug will appear to float off the wall.

For the small price of a can of paint you can really make a decorating impact on your walls within the space of a day. Here at BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE we can mix and match thousands of different shades and hues so you can get the perfect shade. You will find us in N. Scituate at 763 Country Way where we are open MON-WED 8-6, THURS & FRI 8-8:30 SAT 8-5 and our phone is 545-3624. We know you'll appreciate your friendly staff and prices.

DECORATING TIP:
Oriental prayer rugs are excellent in introducing color accents to a room.

Three, five & three

We are working on a self-improvement resolution for the latter part of the decade according to which we praise the selectmen for two consecutive weeks. Alas, this is not to be the occasion of such idolatry.

Having applauded the handling of fire chief-elect Roger Lincoln a week ago, we regrettably must take the selectmen to task this week for their action in approving a measure for the next Special Town Meeting that would nullify the vote at the last Special Town Meeting that increased the board of selectmen from three to five.

As voters will recall, the town in August approved the measure that would increase the board at the next town election. The measure, which the Mariner unequivocally opposed, passed in large part due to widespread dissatisfaction with the present three: Mr. Ainslie, Mr. Laugelle and Mrs. McArthur.

As we say, the measure passed in spite of our windy opposition, and it is now the law of the town. But suddenly along come a small group of citizens desiring to head off the new bylaw at the proverbial pass. All that the said new group of citizens needed to get their repeal measure into the warrant at the next Special Town Meeting was the requisite number of signatures. Due to bungled legal advice they failed to so collect their signatures, and their repeal thus apparently died.

But then along came the Cisco Kid, Gabby Hayes and Annie Oakley, or our selectmen if you will. Never happy with the expansion of their preserve , the members of the board gratuitously offered to submit the fallen repeal article as their own selectmen's article. Such was their legal right...as .egal as it was inappropriate. This is an issue selectmen should have stayed out of altogether.

Government eventually comes down to deciding. Deciding must be the result of proper process. And if government is to work. all opinions prior to any decision must unite behind the decision that has been made.

That is why we at the Mariner, who opposed the August decision to expand the board of selectmen from three to five, call upon everyone to support the coming five man board and to oppose rear-guard actions to alter what a majority of our people have decided.

Lincoln appointed

Selectmen voted 2-0-1 (Mary Jane McArthur abstaining) to appoint Roger Lincoln Chief of the Fire Department, subject to negotiating a mutually agreeable contract and his passing a physical examination.

McArthur wants a provision if the Chief is unable to perform his duties for 72 hours or more due to illness, disability or absence including vacations or training sessions, that the Selectmen should designate the Acting Chief.

William Protulis, president of the Firefighters Local 2804, questioned whether the Chief should not be consulted on this. McKArthur said she "felt strongly that she should abstain" and said she had already discussed her feelings with the new chief.

Oh my stars . . . the future

By Claire McDonough

Last week a nice lady phoned and asked for help.

"I'm a Cancer," she told me, "and I haven't been able to sleep in a week. I wake up at 2:30 in the morning, and I just can't drop off again."

Naturally I trotted over to Madame Zolar's chic little ashram on Third Cliff and explained the Moon Child's dilemma.

"Well of course," Madame said in a patronizing tone, "with all the planets in allignment, and the moon as close to earth as it ever gets, what do you expect? Particularly for water signs like Pisces, Cancer and Scorpio?"

"Of course!" I hit my forehead with the heel of my hand. "How stupid of me not to have thought of that. So long as I'm here, can you give me any advice to help people through these trying times?"

Madame graciously consented and I carefully wrote down her words of wisdom for all you zodiophiles out there.

ARIES (March 21 - April 20): Rejoice! The natives of all the other signs will be so groggy from lack of sleep that they will not be able to resist your domineering ways. This is your big chance to settle a long-standing grudge with a Scorpio.

TAURUS (April 21 - May 20): During the next week you will tend to be lethargic, slow moving, and somewhat dull witted. In short, it's business as usual for Taureans. People will be more willing than usual to listen to your dull, endless monologues. Call your friends at bedtime. You may help them catch a few hours sleep.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Good news for all you astro twins. Although you are always skilled conpersons and swindlers, you will find the next four weeks particularly fruitful. Cancers are your best bet as victims.

CANCER (June 21 - July 23): For heaven's sake, stay away from Geminis! Do not give them any money to invest, and don't believe them if they try to sell you stock in sleeping aids. You have a 20 year backlog of sleep anyway, and so should weather this month better than most.

LEO (July 24 - August 22): Things are not that bad for you lions and lionesses. Although you will not receive all the homage you think you deserve (there isn't all the homage you think you deserve!) people will generally be cooperative. Enjoy it while it lasts, and expect a revolution next month.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22): Remember all the herbal tea stock you invested in last month? This is your big chance — sell it to a Cancer. Also, while other people are groggy and semi-comatose, you will have the opportunity to throw out their basketball cards and clean up their messes.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 21): This is your month. You will blend right in with the general confusion and indecision that everyone else is experiencing. You will not appear any more unbalanced than any of the other signs.

SCORPIO (October 22 - November 21): An Aries native will attempt to settle a long standing grudge. He will succeed. However, although it will take you 27 years, eight months, 12 days you will cut him off in traffic, blackball him at the club, and keep his son out of Harvard.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 20): Congratulations! Not only will you beat that fraud rap you've been worrying about, the Captain Marvel Decoder Ring you ordered in 1957 will arrive this week.

CAPRICORN (December 21 - January 20): Your dull, unimaginative, boring personality will be welcome this month. Take this opportunity to show everyone the slides you took last summer during your vacation to South Akron, Ohio.

AQUARIUS (January 21 - February 18): You will be your usual zany, irrepressible self this month. If you're lucky, the arresting officer will be a Capricorn. Express interest in his slides of South Akron, Ohio.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20): Madame Zolar said that it would not be necessary for me to tell you about the septic problems and sump pump failures you will experience this month, as you will probably sleep through them and will not wake long enough to read this, anyway.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Pay no attention to the unscrupulous newspaper astrologer. She knows perfectly well that sun sign astrology is as inaccurate as Taurus, and only writes it because of the high salary the Mariner pays her.

A ramp for the Town Hall

Letters

[This is a copy of a letter sent to selectmen and to the Mariner].

To the Selectmen:

I am writing to you because I feel a situation has existed in our town which has needed rectification for quite some time. It is the fact that despite the many regulations regarding equal access to all public buildings, by all citizens, the Town Hall of the community I was born in remains virtually off limits to myself and other disabled people in Cohasset.

But this is not because we are disabled. It is because you haven't at least installed a ramp to the main floor. I realize that providing access to the second floor of the current facility would require a great amount of time, planning and expense.

However, a ramp would be relatively inexpensive and would enable all of Cohasset's citizens to attend the many functions held at the Town Hall.

In addition the Town Clerk requires absentee ballots be mailed to him for tallying. This means that disabled people in Cohasset must pay for the right to vote in any election. I hope you, as Board of Selectmen members, will take the initiative and correct these problems.

Dissension on the Board of Selectmen

To the Editor:

I am gravely concerned about the role of Cohasset selectmen, their duties and day-to-day performance in carrying out responsible leadership and governmental directives on behalf of the residents of Cohasset.

Obviously, there is a great deal of polarization that currently exists within our community and it must be dealt with now, before the condition worsens and becomes acute.

I speak with authority on this matter, having lived through it a few short years ago. Our school system had, internally, plunged to an all-time low. Morale among the teaching staff was non-existent.

The principal of our high school was removed from his position, outstanding educators left the system, the student body went on strike and received tremendous media coverage, including live television.

During the above same period of time, I sought the office of a school committee member, was elected and served the committee for a period of six years, five of which I served as its elected chairman.

I am not a stranger to the wrath of individuals, because I was threatened with law suits, personal injury, obscene phone calls at all hours and vulgar letters.

In spite of all this adversity and with complete and total cooperation of a new, sensitive and outstanding board of school committee members, we worked together tirelessly, to restore confidence, direction, and a new sense of educational well-being into our school system, which to this day exemplifies what courage, direction, moral attitudes, and a profound sense of elective responsibility is really all about.

It is common knowledge there is dissension among our present board of selectmen. Numerous motions and votes have had to be re-introduced and voted upon. We have witnessed the resignations of several department heads. We have seen selectmen vacillate in their appointment of others.

And most recently we have noted the selectmen-sponsored article to reduce the members of its board from five to three at the upcoming Nov. 29 town meeting.

That selectmen-sponsored article follows a special town meeting vote of Aug. 30, a town meeting which is on record as being the fourth largest attended special or annual town meeting in the last 11 years, at which time voters elected by ballot to expand the board of selectmen.

Last week selectmen agreed to sponsor an article to reduce themselves when petitioners were unable to act within the town by-laws and gather the appropriate number of signatures in order to introduce this article to voters themselves.

I personally feel that our board of selectmen, by

Murray 'humbled' by her victory

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is humbled by the voter support for her despite the tide of Democratic victories in the Nov. 2 general election.

Murray, a three-term Republican legislator, beat former state Rep. Caroline Stouffer with 61 percent of the vote, 9,670 votes to Stouffer's 6,176.

About 71 percent of 4,950 eligible voters cast ballots in Cohasset. In the state rep. race Murray overwhelmed Stouffer, 2,652 to 809. She topped Hingham, 5,375 to 3,335 but lost in Hull by about 500 votes, 1,643 to 2,032 votes for Stouffer.

However, to Murray, her results in Hull, a traditional Democratic town, were a moral victory.

"I am very humbled and gratified with the voting results. There was both Republican and Democratic interest in voting for me.

"I believe they voted for Mary Jeanette Murray the person and not Mary Jeanette Murray the Republican," she said.

She added people realized her voting records and legislative accomplishments were done "from what's good for the majority of people I represent."

Although many good consumer bills are introduced in the Legislature, two years later the bill is amended so many times, it is an entirely different bill and one which defeats my earlier support, Murray said.

During the campaign Murray stressed her personal involvement in solving residents' problems and her accessibility. "They (the voters) remembered the things I was able to do for the district and more especially for individuals," Murray said.

She also pointed to her efforts to get money for pier repairs in Hull, a tidal gate at Straight's Pond and continued support for more local aid.

In a telephone interview with the Mariner Murray listed her objectives for the next two-year term. They include: money in lieu of taxes for Wompatuck State Park regarding state-owned land in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate; continued support for Cohasset to receive its share of grant money regardless of housing figures; traffic lights at the Osgood School, improved safety and traffic flow at Muzzi's Corner in Hingham, more local aid, and support for the new commuter boat to Boston by Charles English which will begin in December.

Rep. Murray

Murray plans to oppose any state Department of Public Works plan to have Cohasset or Hingham take over the snow plowing of Rte. 3A or Rte. 228 in Hingham.

She wants the state to remove Cohasset from paying any Cohasset reimbursement as MBTA assessment because it has no direct transportation service.

Selectmen briefs...

CIVIL SERVICE DIFFICULTIES

Executive Secretary Arthur Clark discussed with selectmen the difficulties in obtaining certified EMT firefighters for the fire department from Civil Service. Selectmen noted the department currently has 11 EMTs, but only nine are available for work. They were only able to get one EMT from the last Civil Service list. It costs $1600 to train an EMT.

Clark complained that although he had sent the form to obtain another EMT list, another identical form was sent to him to return. This problem has occurred previously.

Selectmen asked him to fill out the form again, but mark it "second response." Clark said such duplicate paper work caused weeks of lost time in securing personnel. If the town cannot obtain EMT firefighters, they will have to choose from the list of firefighters laid off under Proposition 2½.

GREENHOUSE RESTAURANT CHANGES MGT.

Selectmen voted to approve the change of manager at the Greenhouse Restaurant, Inc. to Stephen D. Harrington of Marshfield. The restaurant is called "Harrington's." It is expected that Harrington may seek approval of the new ownership within the next month.

GRIEVANCES

Selectmen acknowledged receipt of three grievances. They planned to meet with Personnel Board Chairman Clifford Mitman or his representative Tuesday, Nov. 9, before the meeting with the Advisory Board. The grievances concern Brian Noonan, John Boswell and Richard Fairbairn. A grievance concerning James Lee Gurry was received previously. According to Selectmen's secretary, Margaret Ramsay, no reply from Town Counsel had been returned regarding the latter.

STORM WINDOWS FOR GOV'T ISLAND HOUSE

Selectmen voted to purchase four storm windows for the Government Island House, subject to available funds. The duplex house is owned by the town, but rented out.

HONORING VETERANS

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested decorating veterans' graves with flags for the coming Veterans' Holiday. Under Prop 2½ only $500 has been budgeted for both Veterans' Day and Memorial Day celebrations.

Laugelle estimated it might cost $200 for 250 flags. McArthur said she did not disagree, but did not think they could obtain any "emergency" transfers to this account.

Laugelle added several bronze letters need to be replaced at Memorial Park.

EXECUTIVE SESSION WITH SMALL

Selectmen voted to go into executive session with Patrolman John Small at his request to discuss his performance in his probationary period. Small was accompanied by his grandfather. Selectmen also discussed holding an executive session Saturday, Nov. 6 in the town counsel's office. Participants included selectmen, Sewer Commissioners, Board of Health and Town Counsel. The subject, said Mary Jane McArthur, concerns litigation.

ACTING POLICE CHIEF CONTRACT

Selectmen approved a contract for Acting Police Chief Joseph M. Kealey, retroactive, subject to working out an agreement for his vacation and review by Town Counsel.

HISTORIC DISTRICT COMMISSION APPOINTEE

unanimously agreeing to sponsor the article themselves, were engaging in a wreckless affront to the residents of the town, showing a grave moral and political insensitivity. Consider this. Why should any other individual or group be denied the same privilege in the future?

I respectfully request that the Cohasset Board of Selectmen make a strong effort to get their elective governmental act together in a more meaningful and responsible manner in order that government of, by and for the people will not vanish from our Town, if only temporarily.

Henry Dormitzer's new project: 'The Spirit of Massachusetts'

By Laura Doherty

Henry Dormitzer has had a liftime fascination of the sea. His wife laughingly remarks that he has salt water in his veins.

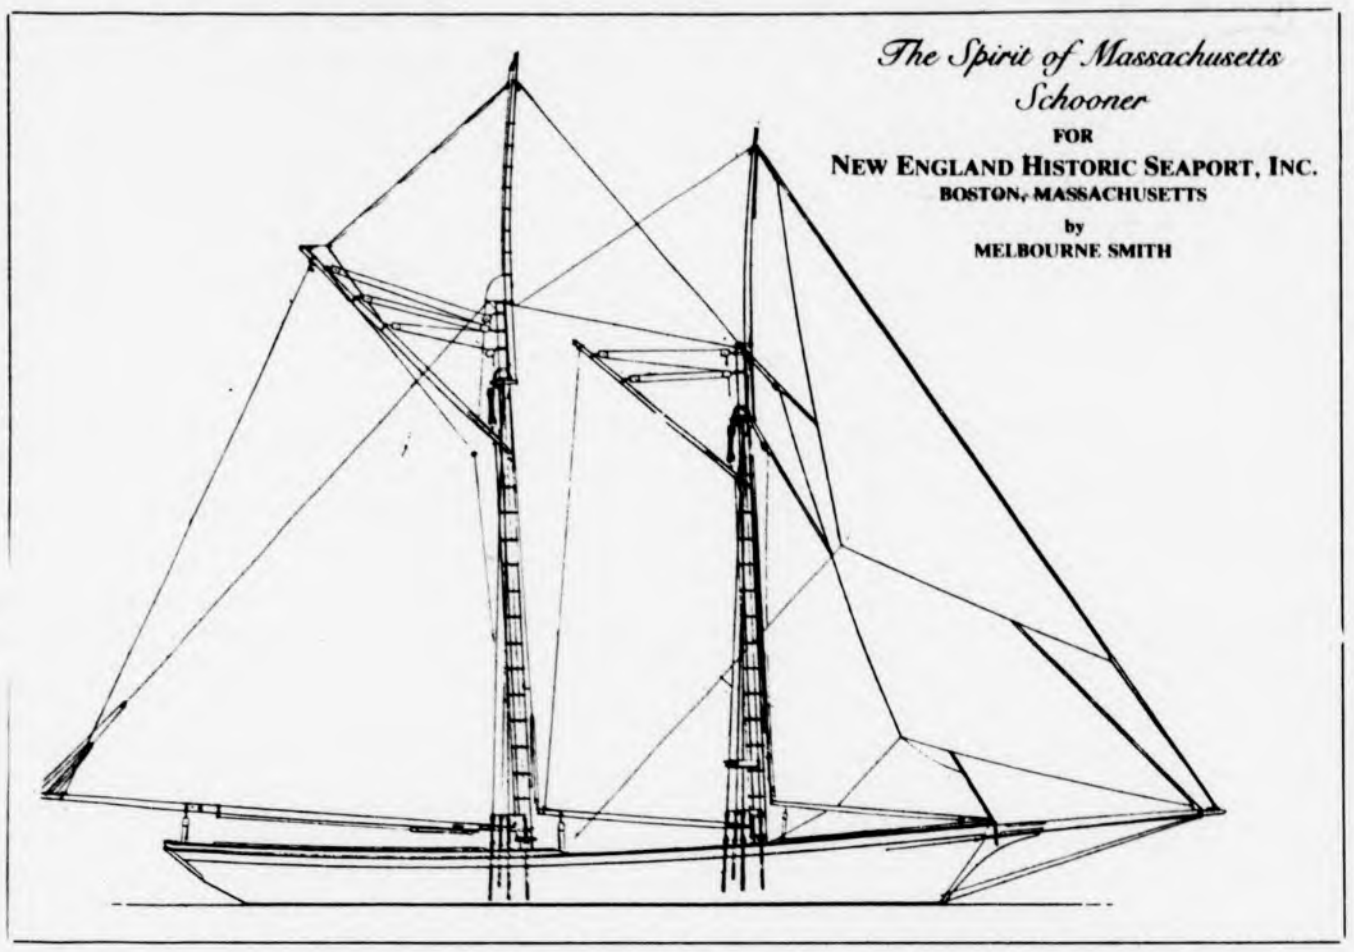
For years he has collected memorabilia. An oil painting of ships in the fog of Gloucester Harbor occupies a position of importance in his living room. If he wanted to, he could set sail from his property on South Main Street which runs to the water's edge.

Although unable to realize his dream of attending Annapolis, Henry Dormitzer has made many important contributions to Massachusetts maritime history. Through his efforts, the tall ships have visited Boston three times and now he is busy arranging their return in 1984.

Dormitzer notes that few people remember the first visit of the Tall Ships in 1964. At that time, he was an officer of the Boston Yacht Club, sponsor for the visit. A few of the ships attending the New York World Fair did come to Boston but there was minimal coverage by the media, he says. "None of us had ever seen them before," Dormitzer recalls of their "impressive sight." As co-chairman of the event, he became deeply involved and became acquainted with the ship's captains.

Later, searching for interesting activity for the Bicentennial in 1976, Dormitzer and his committee again arranged for a visit of the Tall Ships which proved to be the most popular event of the celebration. Scared at first on how "to pull it all off," they began making arrangements for everything from pollution problems to tugboats.

Fundraising was very important and, according to Mrs. Dormitzer, her husband is "the one who goes out and raises the money." Luckily, he has discovered that there are a lot of sailors on the boards of large corporations. "There's a built-in constituency," he says, "and I ask them to ask their friends."



He has become accustomed to talking before groups and usually brings movies and slides along. Making television appearances is easier now, he explains, since he realized that most people are interested in what he says.

Dormitzer underlines the importance of our maritime history. "It is the fundamental background of the whole country."

"Part of this are the square-rigged clipperships which brought immigrants to our shores and carried on trade and exploration throughout the world. Designed with a straight entry to the sea and sleek bows, they were the fastest ships then known. They were so named he explains, because they clipped all kinds of time from their various runs.

"From 1849-1875, Donald McKay designed and built many of the greatest clippers such as 'The Flying Cloud,' 'Lightning' and 'Sovereign of the Seas' in his East Boston shipyards. They carried passengers to San Francisco during the California gold rush and brought tea from China to the East Coast."

It is to honor McKay and our history that the Donald McKay festival will be held in June of 1984. Tall Ships from all over the world have been invited to participate and it is anticipated that the event will equal those of 1976 and 1980.

As part of the festival sponsored by the New England Historic Seaport and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, a new Tall Ship "The Spirit of Massachusetts," will be built at the Charlestown Navy Yard with wood and by traditional methods and hand tools. Later, it will be used as a training vessel and to promote good will for the state.

Melbourne Smith, famous for his "Pride of Baltimore" Tall Ship, has designed "The Spirit of Massachusetts" and will supervise its construction. Through the efforts of Dormitzer and his committee, a United States law establishing a new class of sailing school ship was recently passed by Congress and signed by the President.

Dormitzer describes his involvement in this "most ambitious undertaking" with "courage is the word." It won't all be easy. "Sure you stumble, but you pick yourself up, maybe walk back a little and reconstruct, but in the end you go forward," he says. Because of the past success of the Tall Ships, he foresees a lot of support from many organizations.

School children will be able to visit the site of "The Spirit of Massachusetts." Teachers from many towns including Cohasset have just finished completing a survey which will be used in developing a curriculum. Dormitzer has been greatly impressed with the enthusiasm of educators for stimulating an interest in maritime history and education.

Report has it that Henry Dormitzer is retired. But what he calls his "interesting avocation" often calls for a 12-hour workday. His experience as president and founder of his own manufacturing electronic company has been very valuable in working with people who, whether in business or sailing, he describes as "an unusual group of human beings dedicated to the things they do."

His work involves working closely with the heads of governments and businesses. Negotiations are carried on in a friendly way, he says, with most countries anxious to show their flags in foreign ports and to provide an opportunity to know each other. Some countries are more formal in their negotiations and one luncheon he attended included five different courses and lasted over three hours.

Dormitzer is now finding ways to raise the million and a half dollars necessary for the project. He will visit corporations and organizations and develop ideas such as perquisites which, for a $1,000 donation, even a "landlubber can become an admiral in the Seaport Navy."

Dormitzer's life is a busy one — his wife wonders if they'll ever get to some of the other projects they'd planned. But he does it he says, for "the pleasure and satisfaction of seeing others enjoying themselves." Obviously, from the many awards and certificates displayed in his home, his efforts are appreciated. For Henry Dormitzer has shown, as one award says, "Public sentiment is everything. Without it nothing can succeed."

HIGH SCHOOL

Spelling words to be learned this week are: opinion, opportunity, original and paid.

PSO

The PSO will present a special "Forum on Schools and Finances," Thursday, Nov. 18, in Room 107 at the high school.

This will be a roundtable discussion among representatives of the school committee, selectmen, administrators, teachers and PSO. This will be an opportunity for parent concerns to be heard as next year's budget is in preparation. Please come. Refreshments served.

METCO

On Sunday, Nov. 14 there will be a METCO dinner for Cohasset Metco Host Families and Metco students and their families from 4-6 p.m., in the high school cafeteria.

Music teacher Bryan Marks will provide entertainment with the CHS chorus and a small preview performance by the cast of "Grease."

A $6 donation per Cohasset family will be requested to cover the cost of the main dishes. Salads (A-J) and desserts (K-2) will be donated. For more information call Jane Ellis at 383-0767.

Early release day

Thursday, Nov. 18 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School, 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee in order to allow staff members at the Junior/Senior High School to take part in Curriculum Update Workshops.

The staff members at the Deer Hill School and the Joseph Osgood School will take part in a Health Education Program.

At the Rec Department...

The Recreation Department will sponsor a seminar by Mark Mincolla of Holistic Health, Inc. Mincolla will explore the importance of optimal nutrition as a valuable tool in preventing disease, the proper use of vitamins and food supplements and improving a family's over-all nutrition.

These topics will include how to substitute healthful foods for empty calories and how to maximize nutritional dollars in the market place.

Also discussed will be the newest forms of laboratory nutritional therapies.

The program is free. However, pre-registration will be required by calling the Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

LATE BASKETBALL REGISTRATION

Late registration for Boys and Girls Basketball League will be accepted, as space permits, by calling the Recreation office between 7 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., at 383-6791.

PSO sponsors schools and financing forum

The Cohasset Parent School Organization will sponsor a special forum on schools and finances Thursday, Nov. 18 at 8 p.m. in Room 107 at the high school.

The format will be a roundtable discussion among representatives of the school committee, administration, PSO, teachers and selectmen.

Edward Atkinson, vice president of the PSO, will moderate the discussion.

The forum will hear and discuss parents' comments and questions about the schools. This coincides with preparation of the 1983-1984 budget by the administration.

Attending will be Diana Kornet, chairman of the school committee, Eugene Crowell, superintendent of schools, Tom O'Neil, president of the Cohasset Teachers Association, and Nancy Sandell and Karin Bartow representing the PSO executive board.

Questions and comments will be accepted from the audience in written form.

In addition, the PSO is conducting a random survey of 200 parents to determine levels of satisfaction and of concern with the Cohasset school system.

Telephone surveys will be completed and collated by Monday, Nov. 15.

Parents who may not be contacted by telephone are invited to call Nancy Sandell at 383-0486 or Karin Bartow at 383-0572 with their comments. Refreshments will be served.

Deer Hill Student Leaders Corp are gym assistants

By Mike Berger

Dennis Kuntz, Deer Hill School physical education teacher, likes watching sports on television but is upset about increasing violence in sports, especially its apparent importance in hockey.

He also sees youth growing up with several misconceptions about sports, violence and the "rules of the game."

Kuntz agrees with Cohasset Health Coordinator Mike Gill that health education is about the most important subject taught in schools today.

This year Kuntz introduced the Student Leaders Corp at Deer Hill as an extension of Cohasset's public schools' emphasis on health education.

The extension is leadership training and the importance of cooperation and working together with one's peers.

Fifteen boys and girls from grade six are assistant teachers for grade four physical education classes. Their duties include refereeing small group instruction and equipment care.

Students were chosen from these qualifications: athletic ability, knowledge of games and rules, personality of giving and encouraging others, understanding of athletic differences, dependability, setting an example for others, control of temper and emotions, promptness, honesty and enthusiasm.

These students leave their classes once a week to assist Kuntz in his physical education classes. They are responsible for making up the lesson and any homework they miss and must satisfy all academic requirements before continuing in the program.

Athletic abililty, said Kuntz, was not a priority in leader selection.

An average athlete with high cooperation and leadership skills was picked over a "super athlete with an image problem," Kuntz said.

"To be popular is easy. But it takes hard work to be a leader. No one wants to be one these days, it seems. Discipline and order are a priority over popularity," Kuntz said.

With the eight boys and seven girls, Kuntz is able to separate his classes into small groups of eight or nine students. This allows for better controlled games and help for those students "who before may have been lost in the shuffle of big gym classes," Kuntz said.

These leaders learn how to break up a fight and to control a situation where "emotions and tempers are running high."

The girl leaders, he said, love the opportunity. "In fact, at this stage of their lives, they are better vocally than the boys. The boys may be physically stronger but the girls listen better."

The sixth graders are used to assist the fourth grade classes because fourth graders look up to the sixth graders. Likewise, seniors are used to help the seventh and eighth graders at the high school.

The experiment has been successful this fall as students have helped teach soccer, field hockey, touch football and fitness in small groups. "The only problem I have found is sometimes the leaders are a little too friendly. They are finding out order and discipline sometimes don't bring popularity.

"But overall I'm finding the leaders corp is a popular group in the school and something special in the eyes of the children. Some are envious and have asked, 'Why wasn't I picked?'

"I explained to them that their cooperation or skills could be improved," Kuntz said.

Besides sportsmanship, Kuntz stresses in his classes the athletes "cannot take cheap shots" at their opponents and must learn the rules of the game.

There are many youths starting out who argue that touch football has five downs instead of four or that it's ok to take three steps without bouncing the ball in basketball.

Kuntz has a contest for all of the students where the student who has the highest average on quizzes on the rules of the game in various sports receives a piece of athletic equipment at the end of the year.

Kuntz also instructs his leaders on first aid and how to react in an emergency situation.

If the leader finds a student is hurt, he or she is told not to panic. "Leave the student where he is and immediately get help," Kuntz said.

He also instructs both leaders and students about athletic injuries, conditioning and food and nutrition.

"Mike (Gill) and I both agree, all of this is good social, mental, health and group association. Every one of the leaders are good players but they also must be in good condition and serve as good role models.

Season ends for soccer & field hockey teams

By Alana O'Brien

GIRLS SOCCER

The girls soccer team traveled to Duxbury Nov. 3 and were defeated 5-1 in their season's last game.

Cohasset, having tied the Dragons earlier in the season, played hard but because of poor weather were unable to keep up with Duxbury.

In their second to last game they kept league opponent Abington out of the league tournament by tieing them 1-1.

Abington scored their goal midway through the second quarter while Cohasset's goal was scored with 11 minutes to play in the game.

Forward Janet DiGirolamo netted the goal for Cohasset with an assist from halfback Kim Wittet.

Captains Amy Duncombe and Ginger Rolff played a strong game for Cohasset.

Four of the team's players were named to the South Shore League All-Star team. They were goalie Tracy Keating, forwards Janet DiGerolamo, Sarah Seavey and tri-captain Amy Duncombe.

The girls finished their season 6-9-2.

BOYS SOCCER

Last week the boys soccer team finished up their season with a win over Hanover and a tie with Scituate.

The Skippers defeated the Hanover Indians 3-2 on a foggy day. At one point the other team's goalie could not be seen.

Jim Stallard scored a goal along with David McDonald and Dan Bowen.

Stallard, Scott Duncombe and Mike Mahoney each registered an assist for Cohasset.

Captain Dan Bowen and Mike Desantis played strong games.

Last Wednesday, the boys tied the Scituate Sailors in a non-league contest, 1-1.

The Sailors took the lead at half-time, 1-0 and in the fourth quarter captain Dan Bowen scored off a penalty kick to earn the tie.

The boys ended their season with an even record of 7-7-2.

FIELD HOCKEY

Last Monday the CHS varsity field hockey team wrapped up its season with a match against Norwell which ended in a defeat for Cohasset, 2-1.

Norwell took the lead in the first quarter but Cohasset caught up with the Clippers when Gia Barresi netted a goal in the first half.

After half-time, Norwell scored the last goal of the season to take the win.

Two of the team's players were named to the South Shore League All-Star Team. They were seniors Elizabeth Glasfeld, fullback and tri-captain Gia Barresi.

FOOTBALL

This Sunday the CHS football team was defeated by the Rockland Bulldogs, 36-8 in a rough game.

In the first quarter, the boys worked hard and took the lead, 8-7. Patrick Broderick scored the touchdown off a pass from QB Richie Evans.

In the second quarter the Bulldogs scored another touchdown but the Skippers couldn't create any offense and the score was 15-8 at the half.

After half-time, Rockland came back and scored two more touchdowns which really broke Cohasset down, said Coach John Leone.

Leone said his team played "with a lot of enthusiasm like they always do and never gave up."

However, the Skippers couldn't stop Rockland in the fourth quarter and the Bulldogs scored one more touchdown to make the final score, 36-8.

Leone praised senior David Fahy for a well-played game along with sophomore David Lahive in the defense.

Saturday the boys travel to Abington for what Coach John Leone expects to be a competitive game.

No new leads reported in Kimballs theft

Composites have been made and distributed to area police but no new leads are reported in a theft of nearly $600 at Kimballs-By-The-Sea Motor Inn on Cohasset Harbor Sunday morning.

Two men pried open a sliding door and robbed the clerk at gunpoint, police said.

Police are searching for the men, both in their 20's. No injuries were reported.

A clerk told police he was unaware of the men as they entered a sliding door in the dining room. They approached the front desk with a handgun and told the clerk to hand over all the cash. The guests were unaware of the robbery.

Four Veterans remember 'their wars'

By Jane Lane

There have been four major wars during this century which is not yet complete. Thursday is the one day set aside to honor those who served during the many years of conflict.

There are more than years, however, which separate the soldier of World War I from the combat veteran of Vietnam.

How contrasting are the images recalled by our memories — from the heroes of 1918 confettied by a jubilant, victorious, united nation — to the war-weary Vietnam vet returning home to an unwelcoming, suspicious country.

At the moment, we are at peace with our neighbors, and hopefully, with ourselves. We embrace all our veterans as one, those who were brave and proud enough to serve even when those views were not accepted by all.

Thursday, and throughout each year, we salute our veterans for enduring this challenge and their nation's changing temperament.

Scituate and Cohasset have many veterans to be proud of. The following are just a sample of the men who served their country during war and returned home to serve their community.

WILLIAM MURPHY

William Francis Muprhy was born and brought up in Scituate, on land which is now known as Murphy's Lane. He was a member of the 1916 Scituate High School graduating class, although he is quick to point out that the building is quite different now.

Murphy graduated from the small white structure on Cudworth Road which once served as the rural town's high school.

After graduation, Murphy entered the Coast Guard and was stationed at Surfside Road in Minot. He was there for 14 months when war was declared by the United States.

Not one to delay decisions, Murphy traveled to Bridgewater and registered for the draft. He then took the train to Boston and enlisted in the Navy. He wanted no part of the Army and that was the rationale behind his enlistment in the Navy, he said.

Murphy was sent down to Camp Hingham and was reassigned to various locations throughout the war — all in Massachusetts. "I did what I was told, and went where I was told," he said. It was not his decision to remain in Massachusetts.

He was discharged from Camp Hingham, and his Naval days ended. He went to Boston where work was plentiful, returned to Scituate as a carpenter's apprentice, and in 1925 became a permanent police officer in Scituate.

Sgt. Murphy remained on the force for 35 years on the 6 p.m. to 3 a.m. shift. He retired in 1961.

Murphy remembered his pay days in Navy as meager.

"The pay, although I can't remember the exact amount, was very poor," he said. "I was 17 years old, and all I remember was enlisting. They threw your uniforms at you and if they fit, you were lucky. I remember one instance during inspection — this was during the war — and we were all lined up at Camp Hingham and the captain and the officers came down the line. A hand grasped my shoulder from the back and the captain said he had never seen a pea jacket like the one I was wearing. I told him that was because it wasn't from the Navy — it was my old Coast Guard jacket. The others looked like rags."

Murphy enlisted "because it was the thing to do." Following family tradition, his brother Robert enlisted in the Naval Reserves, and his brother George (who died two years ago) enlisted in the Marines. His father had previously been stationed in the Fourth Cliff Life Saving Station prior to World War I.

EDWARD HORNE

Edward Horne, a member for the past four years of the Scituate Board of Assessors, was a flight officer during World War II. He was a junior at Boston English High School when war was declared by the United States. He didn't wait to finish school, and enlisted in the U.S. Army Air Corps two months into his senior year.

Horne recalled that his mother picked up his diploma while he was in flight school in Texas. Although there were 900 men in his graduating class, about half of them (Attorney General Frank Bellotti was among them) enlisted in the service. It was guaranteed that the young soldiers would receive their diplomas if they had started their last year of high school, Horne said.

His first overseas assignment was with the Eighth Air Force division in the European Theatre as a member of a B-17 bomber. The experienced flight crews were then returned to Kansas to begin intensive training in the new B-29 Super Fortress.

From there Horne was sent to India, in an area which is now Pakistan. He was stationed at Tinian Island, of the Marianna Islands. This was a base for all bombing missions to the Japanese mainland. The island was 1500 miles, or a nine-hour round trip to the mainland. Horne was stationed there for seven months.

His wing was sent to Okinawa which was to be a stepping point in the planned invasion of Japan. There was no invasion after the A-bomb detonation. In Okinawa, Horne was led by General Curtis LeMay, and it was General James Dolittle who was heading the planned invasion of Japan.

After the war ended, Horne went to Suffolk University and obtained his bachelor and law degrees. The G.I. Bill paid his entire tuition for the two degrees. Those were the only veterans' benefits Horne sought after his return to the states.

Horne is grateful for the benefits he did receive, but added that "veterans sacrificed monetarily what they could have been making in the private sector while they were in the service.

"There were many who didn't survive the war, and others who suffered physical damage. There are veterans in the V.A. Hospital who have been hospitalized since the war.

"I feel the country did a decent job of providing for the veterans of World War II, but in recent years, especially under the Reagan administration, we have lost more veterans' benefits. The veterans have suffered a great deal, especially the kids who served during Vietnam. When we got home, we were considered patriots and we were supported. The Vietnam vets did not have this. They came home as unpopular vets. And the tragedy of this whole thing is that 57,709 Vietnam vets didn't come home at all.

"They have become a lost generation — and they have been sold short by everyone. The G.I. Bill is not as adequate and the Reagan administration has done a job on the Veterans Administration," Horne said.

ROBERT JACKSON

Robert Jackson, a U.S. Navy veteran of Vietnam and a Cohasset police officer, said he is proud to have served his country. Yet he is a "little bitter" about what he feels was the lack of support given to his fellow soldiers in Vietnam, and the equal lack of support given to the South Vietnamese in their battle to oppose Communist takeover.

Jackson was a Cohasset High School graduate who felt he had a "debt to pay for my friends killed in Vietnam — that was the reason a lot of us from Cohasset went over there."

The 34 year-old Cohasset native entered the Navy ROTC during his student days at the University of Virginia. He was commissioned a U.S. Navy Ensign in 1970 and saw active duty from 1970 to 1974.

Jackson decided to enlist in Navy ROTC after three high school buddies were killed in Vietnam after being drafted into the Army. His draft number had been 11.

During his second tour of duty, he volunteered for a Vietnamese language school in El Paso, Tex. where he was stationed for a year. In 1971 he was stationed in Vietnam as an advisor to the South Vietnamese Naval Unit to assist the defense unit at Nha Trang Harbor. He stayed there until the cease fire in 1972.

He said he feels confused as to why the majority of the people back home were so upset with their armed forces in Vietnam.

"I felt the country was at war and someone needed our help. I wanted to go and help. I couldn't understand why that upset so many people," he said.

With his G.I. benefits, Jackson received his second bachelor's degree, this one in Law Enforcement from Northeastern University. He became a fulltime police officer in 1979 and he and his wife and three children live in the community.

Although he is grateful for the education and home loan benefits supplied to the veterans, Jackson remains concerned about the lack of investigation into the purported effects of Agent Orange and the alleged carcinogens contained in malaria pills taken by soldiers in Vietnam. He feels these issues have failed to be sufficiently investigated by the government.

WALLACE SPEAR

Another veteran, Wallace Spear of Scituate, is proud of his service during the Korean War.

"At that time, it was not just the United States which was involved in Korea, it was a total United Nations effort," the 49 year-old Scituate resident said. "A lot of different soldiers fought there and I was proud to be a part of it."

Spear, a Scituate native, has been a local firefighter since 1966. After the war's end he was employed as a mechanic for 13 years at Paul Young's Motors, until his appointment to the fire department.

As a 17 year-old Scituate High School student, Spear quit to enlist in the Army. With his father's blessing, Spear and his two brothers served in Korea in what should have been his last year of high school — 1950.

He served as an infantryman in Korea for nine months and was assigned to an intelligence and reconnaisance platoon.

He was stationed in Indian Town Gap Reservations, Pa. for the remainder of his three-year duty.

"I saw enough combat," he noted. "I was up on the front lines more than I care to remember. I was very lucky, however, that I was never wounded. I got a little scratch once, put a bandage on it, and went back out."

Spear married a local girl, Nancy Clapp, 19 years ago.

A past commander of the VFW Satuit Post, Spear has served as a senior vice commander at the district level.

"I am proud of being veteran," Spear said.

U.S. Veterans loans available at 11 percent

Special home mortgage loans for U.S. veterans are available at 11 percent and can be paid off in 15 years.

"This special VA loan requires no money down, and there is never a pre-payment penalty if you retire the note early," said Isabel Dole, executive vice president of the Northern Mortgage Company.

Dole said many veterans who bought homes in the past two years did so when conventional rates were as high as 19 percent. Many veterans want to re-finance those loans at today's rates which the VA now allows them to do with no pre-payment penalty, Dole said.

"Application for VA loans only requires a 'Certificate of Eligibility' which can be obtained through the VA in Boston after a veteran submits his or her honorable discharge papers, known as DD-214," Dole said.

The FHA loans are "almost as good an opportunity as the VA loan in as much as it too is presently pegged at only 12½ percent for 30 years and does not demand a pre-payment penalty if you want to re-finance it some day with a lower rate," Dole said.

"The only major difference between the VA loan and the FHA loan is that the FHA mortgage must be insured and there is a down payment requirement of 3 percent of the first $25,000 you borrow and 5 percent of the balance of the mortgage you seek. And the FHS loan is open to everyone, not just veterans," Dole said.

The Hanover-based Northern Mortgage Company services home loan applications throughout the state and is a subsidiary of the Jack Conway, Realtor Company.

Landfill expansion finish expected soon

If the weather cooperates, work on capping and expanding the town's Cedar Street landfill site may be completed by the end of the year. Sealund Corporation of Marshfield has been doing site work since Sept. 1. The company was awarded the bid for $235,000. The landfill is being expanded by five acres which could lead to another five to seven years of life to the site. Recycling also could extend the landfill's life. Newspapers, magazines, glass (brown, green and white) and aluminum should be brought to the Recycling Center at the landfill.

Coast Guard report for the week

TUESDAY, OCT. 19

Received telephone call from Coast Guard Group Boston reporting a diver in trouble off Plymouth Beach. CG Station Scituate dispatched the CG 41503 and before the arrival of the 41503, Cape Cod Canal Coast Guard informed Scituate CG that the diver was assisted by the Plymouth Fire Dept., and no CG assistance was required so the CG 41503 was recalled back to the Station.

FRIDAY, OCT. 22

Received call on channel 16 (international and distress frequency) from the fishing vessel Pyewacket, a 42 ft. vessel owned and operated by Laurence Deranes reporting he is disabled with a net in his rudder and screw, located off Long Ledge. CG 41503 was dispatched to tow the Pyewacket to Scituate Harbor, and an inspection was conducted and found the Pyewacket to be in compliance with all applicable federal laws.

SATURDAY/SUNDAY, OCT. 23/24

Received a Mayday call on distress channel 16 from the lobster vessel Julia H reporting that a 21 foot outboard lobster boat was capsized near nun no. 4, Eastern channel of Cohasset Harbor, with the owner/operator Peter Grimes missing. Station Scituate dispatched CG 41503, CG Point Allerton dispatched their 41354 and Cape Cod Air Station dispatched a rescue helicopter. Upon arrival on scene CG 41503 found the vessel Julia H rerighted the 21 ft. vessel and there was no one on board. An immediate search of the entire area by the three Coast Guard units revealed no sign of the owner/operator of the 21 ft. boat. Cohasset Harbormaster, Harry Ridder, Scituate Harbor masters Elmer Pooler and Bob Simons, along with Scituate and Cohasset Police Depts. also assisted with the search. By mid-afternoon, members of the Quincy Dive Team arrived and commenced an underwater search. The search was suspended at sunset. The following morning the search commenced at 0900 with CG Stations Scituate 41503 and Point Allerton's 41354 assisting members of the Quincy Dive Team. The CG units served as transportation and diving platforms during the all day search. The Scituate Harbormaster boat, operated by Elmer Pooler, assisted in the search by towing the divers through the area. A thorough air search was conducted by a CG H52A helicopter from Cape Cod. The search was suspended just before sunset with no sightings of Peter Grimes. On 31 Oct. 82 a lobster boat owned and operated by Jack Silva located Peter Grimes' body between can no. 1 and 3 Cohasset Cove entrance and turned it over to the local authorities, his date of birth was 6/5/56.

Brockton Cadets get Bigson building

The Brockton Cadet Squadron of the Civil Air Patrol has been selected by Drexel Gibson of 169 Border Street to haul away his prefabricated building.

The squadron is an auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force comprised of more than 100 youths between 13 and 18 years old from the greater Brockton area.

In September, Gibson offered a 40 by 41-foot house to any non-profit organization or vocational school which would dismantle and cart the structure away.

The house is a prefabricated Hodgson summer cottage containing two bedrooms, two bathrooms, a living-dining room, a kitchen with an electric stove, a water heater and two sinks.

Two weeks ago one unidentified person had accepted Gibson's offer and was to begin taking the cottage apart, but he changed his mind. Gibson had originally hoped a group such as the Boy Scouts or a vocational school would claim the vacant structure.

Sunday night, Gibson made the selection because the Civil Air Cadets were the first to call, the first to show qualifications, capability and prompt action.

The cottage will be used as part of the squadron's training and classroom facility at the New Bedford Airport.

The house will be re-assembled on a 3½ acre training site at the airport. The dismantling of the house will begin in about two weeks.

Gibson also said the squadron is a fine civic rescue organization and has taken part in many land rescue missions including the recent search for a missing Brockton man.

Lt. Colonel Alfred Slaney of Hanson said the squadron is anxious to begin the project.

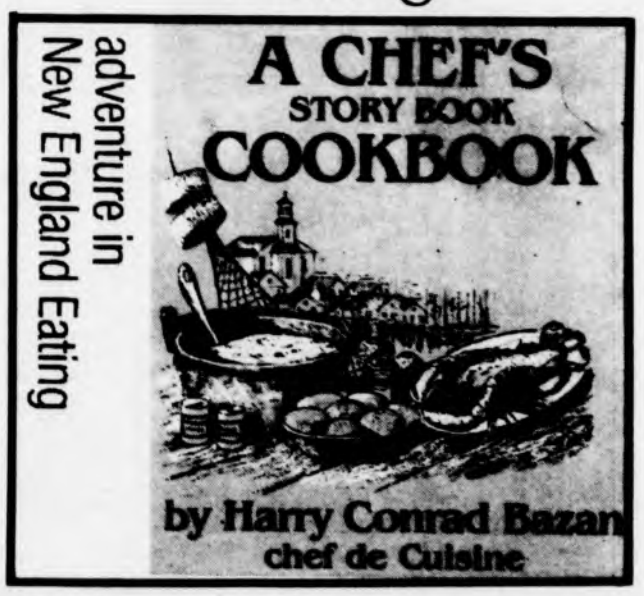
He expects the move will be easy because the cottage is in eight by 10-foot sections. The squadron has a fleet of vehicles to transport the sections to New Bedford.

Why just women?

Anyone who has ever offered their household castaways for sale at a yard, garage, attic, cellar, flea or sidewalk sale, has surely wondered why anyone would buy their broken spinnaker pole, or the bleak oil painting purchased from a struggling artist-friend, or the blue and yellow bookshelves from a college apartment.

A revised holdover from the old barter system of trade (goods-for-cash), the yard sale turns over used, slightly used, damaged or limping goods as predictably as the tides.

Thompson Hughes' adventure of furnishing a house for $2,000 (see story on page one) is an inspiration.



But why Tanna Kasperowicz would caution "married residents" to hide the story from their spouses is as baffling as why the hundreds of New Englanders who hold yard sales get rid of their stuff and for cash too.

Where is it written that only "married women" furnish homes, whether it be from Bloomingdale's, the Salvation Army, or a neighbor's resale shop?

Women — take your articles out of hiding and share them with your spouses.

Honor that belongs to the veteran

By Lois Martin

They were heroes then whether they served on the front lines, graduated from West Point, rose in rank to conduct military campaigns, or stayed privates forever.

Back 40 years ago the serviceman was revered. The New York Times and the Boston Traveler in September 1943, bear bold single-mindedness to the American War effort. And top dog is the serviceman.

Everything in the newspapers stood back apace for World War II. Even debuts, clothing, Fanny Farmer Candy, all news and ads somehow were based on the American battlefield.

PATCHES

The reason I'm so certain of the atmosphere nearly 40 years ago is that a friend, in ripping up linoleum, came across the New York Times and the Boston Traveler of September, 1943. And the papers are an education, a timely one what with Veteran's Day this week.

That was Section 4 of the 'Times,' with War review of the week. Featured on the front page were photos of Lt. Gen. Mark Clark, who was routing Germans from the Naples area and Gen. Harold Alexander, commander of Allied forces on the Italian peninsula.

With the crispness of a cannon shot and the drama of an approaching drum beat the unnamed reporter wrote a long piece of the "Italian Collapse." Italy had surrendered, leaving Germany to hold Hitler's bag of lunacy without Moussolini's support.

WW II is still over my head. We've seen those movies where big military men pushed ships around with little sticks in the Pentagon headquarters. The Times review had a year's update of: when the Japanese were within 30 miles of a base in New Guinea, Mountbatten's campaign across the Indian Ocean, Gen. George Marshall's skill at writing his own report.

That old paper is a small book, a piece of history. It also ran quotations like this one from Sen. Brewster of Maine who had toured battlefronts and declined to make sweeping statements about China: "We can't speak about China with much authority after being here 24 hours. It takes us 48."

And the Times ran tough news questions about the war. Here's one: "If Bulgaria were to follow Italy's example and capitulate to the Allies, she would not make peace with Russia. Why?"

Times readers must have been expert historians in the making if they could answer that. The page where the answers were was not included in the lineoleum of that Brockton house. So I was at a disadvantage.

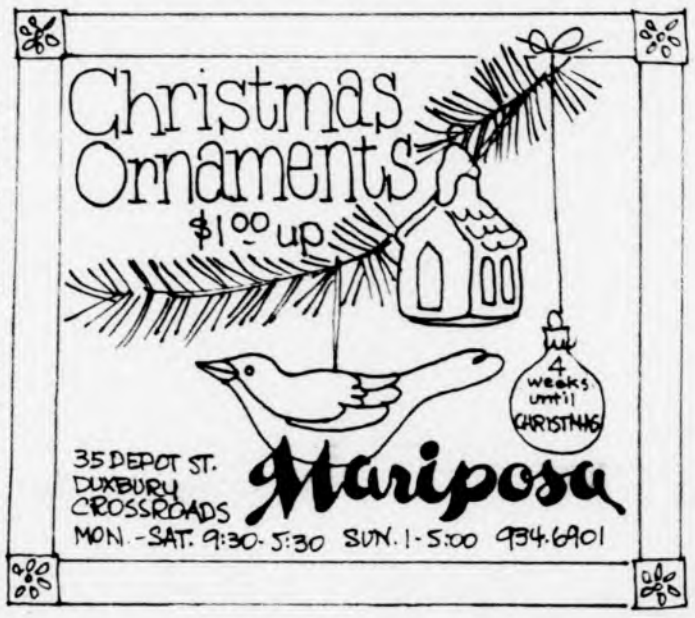
There were political cartoons, of course. One awful one by Tom Little from the Nashville Tennessean showed a hand with a bloody dagger and the words "Nazi Imperialism." Another arm and hand restrained the dagger with words "United Nations' Edge."

A car ad said, "If you are going to need a new car before Victory, buy now and buy a Pontiac." Everything was geared to the war, victory: "When the shooting stops!" for a tool manufacturing firm; "Buy war bonds at the Irving Savings Bank."

Of course the Boston Traveler was more personable, at least compared to the war review of the Times section found under the linoleum. It had one regular feature "War Service," answering all kinds of questions, like whether or not WAVES or WACS would accept a woman with a "troublesome sacroiliac" (Doubt it).

The Traveler listed places where volunteers were needed and an ad "Dogs for Defense Inc."

And the Boston paper had Westbrook Pegler and Drew Pearson on the editorial pages. Leading Pearson's piece that day was this sentence: "Not all of the recurrent problems with interned Japs in western camps have leaked into the newspapers."



The Traveler had magnificent ads, a natural mink at Jordan Marsh for $1595. The movie of the hour seemed to the "The Strange Death of Adolf Hitler." The comics had "The Gumps," "Dick Tracy," "Smitty." But it was WW II that made the world turn as well as tremble 40 years ago. It gave verve for victory, tears for one tragedy after another that came home to roost on the doorsteps of New England.

I've got a daily paper or two here today. I've been checking the front page of the Globe for comparison. It spoke of the election, second chances for politicians. It does not speak of World War II, the serviceman, the War Bonds.

Thank goodness. The less we must say of war the better. We've never had a shortage of war. But we have had cutbacks of people willing to fight for America. The fullchested patriotism of 40 years ago has waned to a more demure than fervored flag salute.

I've concluded that the journalist who wrote that story about Italy's surrender was special, as was the stalwart Patriot who hailed volunteering for victory, the style of Winston Churchill and the same of Westbrook Pegler.

And somehow, most special was the serviceman, the one we remember today as veteran. We've stripped him now of heroism he enjoyed 40 years ago. There should never, though, be a doubt of the honor which belongs to him or her forever.

Newcomers Christmas Fair

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold their annual Christmas Fair on Saturday, Nov. 13 at 9.

This year the Fair will be held at the GAR Hall on Country Way in Scituate, with all proceeds going toward the Club's Scholarship Fund. Christmas crafts, baked goods and much more will be available for sale.

Miss Mass/USA applications

Applications will be accepted for the annual Miss Massachusetts-U.S.A. Pageant which will be held in early March of 1983.

The Miss Massachusetts-U.S.A. Pageant is the Official Preliminary to the Miss U.S.A.-Miss Universe Contest.

There is no talent requirement. All judging is on the basis of poise, personality, and beauty of face and figure. Applicants must be at least 18 years old and under 25 years of age by May 1, 1983, never married, and at least a six month resident of Massachusetts.

All girls interested in competing for the Title of Miss Massachusetts-U.S.A. must write to Miss Massachusetts-U.S.A. Pageant Headquarters, 480 Boylston Street, 2nd Floor, Boston, Mass. 02116, by Nov. 20, 1982. Letters must include a recent snapshot, a brief biography and phone number.

The girl chosen as Miss Massachusetts-U.S.A. will represent the Bay State in the Miss U.S.A. Pageant, nationally televised on CBS-TV in May, 1983.

The winner will be awarded several prizes including wardrobe, jewelry, a scholarship to the Barbizon School of Modeling and cash awards.

Virgin Islands trip

Three glorious trips to Maho Bay, St. John, U.S. Virgin Islands will be sponsored by the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell on Jan. 29 - Feb. 6, March 12-26 and March 19-26.

A vacation at Maho Bay is different. It's elegant camping on a beautiful Caribbean island.

Canvas cottages are cantillevered over thickly wooded hillsides. The cottages are joined by a network of boardwalks designed to protect the delicate flora in its natural setting while providing easy access to all of the grounds and the magnificent beach.

A temperature of 79 degrees, scuba diving, sailing, nature walks, visits to nearby islands, it's a vacation for all — adults, children, naturalists, birders and those who want to "get away."

Brochures are available at the Science Center. Call 659-2449 for further information.

Slides of past trips will be show at 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 5. Trip coordinators, Gwen Ferrini and Brent Jackson, Museum of Science staff members, will be present to answer questions and give details.

'Scenes From American Life' opens Thursday

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's fall show is American playwright A.R. Gurney Jr.'s, "Scenes From American Life." This modern social commentary will be presented at the Town Hall Thursday, Nov. 11 to Saturday, Nov. 13. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Thursday night, senior citizens are invited to attend at no charge, and students will be admitted for $1.

"Scenes From American Life" consists of a series of some 36 short vignettes picturing various aspects of the life and times in modern America.

Play director Ellen Kelly of Weymouth, is an experienced actress and teaches a children's theater program at the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham.

Since 1978 she has directed the Conservatory's young people's dramatic group, "The Shoestring Players."

Ellen Kelly has a remarkable career spanning 15 years as an actress, director, stage manager and teacher of the dramatic arts.

During the late 1960's and early 70's she was a member of the Flat Rock Playhouse in North Carolina and served as a supervisor and coordinator of workshops in drama given for the training of the state's public school teachers.

From 1972 to 1975, Ellen was an artist-in-residence to the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction's Division of Cultural Arts.

Her theatrical experience includes an extended stay in New York while teaching, acting and supervising performing arts activities for a lower east side settlement house. She has been a teacher in the senior dramatic workshop at New York's Carnegie Hall, and for several years was a free-lance stage manager for industrial trade and benefit shows in Manhatten.

Ellen is a graduate of Boston's Emmanuel College and holds a master of arts degree from Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C.

Her debut with the Cohasset Dramatic Club came last winter in the Club's production of "A Man For All Seasons" when she played the role of Lady Alice Moore. Ellen served as stage manager and appeared on stage as the maid Nelly in the Club's spring production of "Strange Bedfellows."

"When I was first approached by the Club to direct this year's opening show I was more than surprised, for it had been in the back of my mind that if I ever suggested a script for production, "Scenes From American Life' would be a top recommendation for doing in a New England community such as Cohasset," said Ellen.

Its characters, comments on life, scenic background and rhythm are close to our own," she said.

"Scenes From American Life" is a bit of John Cheever, had he gotten lost in 'Our Town' and met the cartoonist James Thurber or perhaps Jules Feiffer," said Kelley.

The author Gurney is no stranger to New England, having been a faculty member at MIT. This year his play "The Dining Room" will be presented in Boston by the Huntington Theater Company.

The setting for "Scenes From American Live" is Buffalo, N.Y., only a stone's throw from New England.

Many of the play's characters are Eastern-types, and are not too unlike traditional proper or improper Bostonians.

"Needless to say, I see a lot of New England in the play. But New Yorkers apparently felt they saw themselves protrayed in a recent Buffalo community television production, and Chicagoans 'swore it was right on the mark' in a Windy City production. That is what I call being relevant theater."

"It could be that Cohasset audiences will react the same way; we may, for better or worse, see a bit of ourselves in Gurney's play," said Kelley.

Rev. and Mrs. Constantinos Mendrinos (center) are welcomed at a tea in their honor last week at the Lothrop House sponsored by the Philoptohos Society of the Panagia Church. Rev. Mendrinos is the new permanent Priest to the South Shore. Also pictured, left-to-right, are Eugenia Syrmopoulos and Elizabeth Bournazos. (Greg Derr photo)

ANNOUNCING
An Exciting New Place To Live in Hingham...

The MEADOWS

FURNISHED MODELS NOW OPEN!

You'll love living at The Meadows, a superb new community of attached single family homes now being built by The Green Company in Hingham. Expert construction crews have completed the first group of two and three bedroom homes, and the exciting furnished models are now ready for your visit.

Our pride in the design and construction of The Meadows is well justified as you'll see when you visit. There's a wonderful spaciousness to the homes... an exceptional flow between rooms achieved through the use of large foyer areas, vaulted ceilings, expansive glass with views to the out-of-doors, and rooms opening into each other yet subtly separated by custom dividers.

There are many gracious details: tray ceilings; large country kitchens with sunny breakfast bays—even one designed as a greenhouse; walk-in bay windows; and exceptional master suites, some including secluded fireplaced sitting rooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights.

The combination of location, space and amenities make these homes an exceptional value at $153,000 to $210,000. We suggest a visit soon for early selection. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, keep left to our entrance, or call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

Developed, marketed and managed with pride by Green Hingham, Inc. (An important part of the Green Company family)

Harrington's is open

Preliminary reviews are excellent for the cuisine, atmosphere and service at Harrington's (formerly the Greenhouse). Steve Harrington officiates at the grand opening last week. (Greg Derr photo)

The paintings of Frank Shapleigh

Looking back

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset Historical Society Curator

In the autumn of 1870, a well-known artist and painter of New England landscapes married into a Cohasset family. The painter was Frank Henry Shapleigh of Boston. His bride was Mary A. Studley, daughter of Ezekiel B. and Mary (Pratt) Studley of Cohasset.

Frank H. Shapleigh was born in Boston in 1842, studied art at the Lowell Institute of Drawing, then subsequently journeyed to Paris, France, to receive lessons in the field of landscape painting from a French master.

Returning home, he served during the Civil War with the 45th Massachusetts Regiment and saw action in Southern campaigns.

Following the end of hostilities, Shapleigh began his career in earnest as a New England artist, one that lasted for more than 40 years.

Frank Shapleigh's speciality in the field of landscape painting found fertile ground for development here among New England's mountains and seashores.

This fall, the New Hampshire Historical Society has exhibited a selection of Shapleigh's New England land and seascapes, including one of his oil paintings picturing a familiar Cohasset scene.

Following his marriage, Shapleigh visited and stayed in Cohasset numerous times, and became an acute observer of the natural beauty of our rocky coastline with its dramatic contrast between land and sea.

His Cohasset paintings include several views of Cohasset Harbor and the ocean beyond, showing the harbor and its approaches as they appeared during the late 1800's. The artist was well known for taking long walks along the shore, and from these excursions came a series of paintings depicting the familiar coastline, and the saltmarshes and harbors of Cohasset.

The Cohasset painting exhibited this fall in New Hampshire shows a view of the outer harbor, looking across the sandy spit of Bassing Beach past Whitehead to Minot's Light.

Another of these characteristic views also painted by Frank Shapleigh is on view in the Cohasset Historical Society's Wilson Historical House in Cohasset center.

Another Shapleigh painting is a landscape showing Thomas James' farmhouse at Cohasset center, a 1704 building now known as the "Red Lion Inn."

A third Shapleigh painting on exhibit at the Society's Lothrop House pictures a late 19th century view of the inner harbor or "Cove" looking from the head of the cove past Tower Brothers' Wharf toward Bassing Beach.

Other Shapleigh land and seascapes can be found in various South Shore locations and in New Hampshire, his White Mountains landscapes are well known. He and his wife spent numerous summers at Crawford Notch while Shapleigh painted such characteristic scenes as Franconia Notch, Crawford Notch, Mount Washington, Mount Chocorua and panoramic views of New Hampshire's rural farmhouses and villages.

Among the artist's other Cohasset paintings are those picturing a view of the Harbor from atop Kent's Rocks, Border Street; the Outer Harbor as seen from Windmill Point; a portrait of the Snow-Trott House; another of the Town's first post office; and another showing a "Glimpse of Sandy Cove."

Shapleigh's Cohasset paintings are remarkable for the clarity with which they reproduce scenes of the town's land and ocean as they appeared a century ago. Frank Shapleigh died at Crawford Notch in 1906.

Foster parents wanted

Jewish Family and Children's Service is looking for families or individuals who are willing to be foster parents for Jewish children.

Growing divorce rates and movement away from religious and ethnic lifestyles have greatly increased the number of Jewish children in need of foster care. There is an urgent need for persons who love children and wish to open their homes to a needy Jewish child.

If you can help, please call Jewish Family and Children's Service at 227-6641.

At the Art Center...

Wordcarving workshop

Singer-songwriter John Vorhaus will be leading a one-day creative wordcarving and melody making workshop at the South Shore Art Center Saturday, Nov. 20.

This workshop is meant for students who have been writing songs or have been looking to write their first song.

No experience is necessary to participate in the day which will start at 10 a.m. and continue to noon for part I, and begin again for part II at 2 p.m. for a two-hour session.

As part of the workshop, a performance is scheduled for Saturday evening for those students who wish to perform their original songs at the Center's Fall Party and Blue Ribbon Show openings.

Workshop enrollments must be received in advance and may be made in person at the Center on 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset or by mail.

Fee information is available by calling 383-9548.

John Vorhaus provided lively entertainment at the 1982 South Shore Arts Festival as a strolling troubadour and story teller. He has run many successful song-writing workshops at area colleges and universities and is a well-known performer and folk-humorist in the Boston area. He urges those who have an instrument to bring it to the workshop day.

Fall party Nov. 20

The South Shore Art Center Fall Party Saturday, Nov. 20 will be the opening of the traditional "Blue Ribbon Show" of Center artists' latest works.

The party will open with a "Holiday Shoppe" filled with artist-created original gifts for Christmas-giving and will offer a gourmet feast at the International Pot Luck Supper. Festivities will begin at 6:30 p.m.

A benefit donation of $5 will support Art Center programs while admitting the donor to an evening highlighted by John Vorhaus, a musical humorist who accompanies himself on accoustic guitar and entertains with stories drawn from American folklore. A sample of his works include Bert and I yarns, sendups of Woody Guthrie tunes, and original songs on topics ranging from new wave love to Jesse James. There will also be door prizes and cocktails.

Reservations for the International Pot Luck Supper must be made in advance by calling 383-9543 to receive a food assignment designed for eight. Each gourmet chef is asked to include his or her recipe along with the dish so that it may be included in the Center's cookbook "In Good Taste."

Dinner will be served in the studios which will be decorated as a coffee house with wine provided by the Center.

The fall party is sponsored by the Center directors headed by President Ubaldo di Benedetto of Cohasset with Sheldon Ripley, vice-president, Cohasset, Treasurer Peter Chapman, Cohasset, Secretary Anita Franks, Plymouth, corresponding secretary Ali Swedock, Scituate, and Board members Stan Nikkel of Hingham, Don Lettis of Hingham, Betsy Millard, Cohasset, Paul Baccari of Quincy, Claffy Williams, Cohasset.

Some women jog, some play tennis or golf, while others may just plunk down in front of the soap operas. Depending on your lifestyle, you may be one of an average American who watches more than six hours of television each day. The number of stay-at-homes is dwindling as more and more women take to the business world and now psychologists believe the greater self-esteem, stimulation and sociability of holding a job enhances women's health and working women enjoy a 74 percent lower mortality rate. However you choose to spend your day, a weekend party is always welcome and now that the holidays are nearing, we can all enjoy Lori Thomae's

Holiday Punch

1 qt. cranberry juice cocktail
1 qt. orange-pineapple drink
1 qt. apple cider
1 qt. ginger ale - more or less, to taste
1 pt. raspberry sherbert

Blend juices and chill. Add ginger ale just before serving. Spoon in scoops of sherbert after adding punch to punch bowl. Allow to sit for a few minutes before serving so that sherbert becomes "foamy." Serves 12.

Some young women have a lifestyle that combines the duties of wife and mother with a part-time job. For over a year, Amy Locke of Norwell and three friends have masterminded a thriving little business they call "Snack 'N Smack," and they shop, pack and mail individual gift packages to youngsters in college or the service, or elderly nursing home patients. Dorothy Youmans is another young matron who somehow includes time for classes at Simmons on her day off from the Clift Rodgers Library. Her desk is the focal point for readers who congregate in the little self-sustaining library, seldom leaving without a good book and a warm feeling sparked by Dorothy's charming ways. "The Captain's Lady Cookbook" by Barbara Dalia Jasmin is a new cookbook journal, giving a glimpse of a lifestyle we'll never know again when in the era of majestic clipper ships, the New England bride perfected her cooking, handiwork and arts while waiting for her captain to come home from the sea. Here is a simple recipe from 1871 for

Corn Chowder

Cook 3 medium, sliced onions in butter until light brown. Cook 5 medium-sized potatoes, drain and cube. Warm 1 qt. milk and 1 cup heavy cream in a kettle. Add the onions, potatoes and 2½ cups cooked corn. Add 1/4 c. butter, salt, pepper and fresh parsley.

Sometimes we feel a change of lifestyle would be welcome, but a Kansas farm wife had nothing but trouble after winning a magazine contest. A fantasy island worth $350,000 consisting of a sumptuous house, boats and other goodies were hers when her coupon was picked from two million entrants. In January they moved into the Florida house. They were divorced the following December. She said: "You move 1,500 miles from everything you know and your whole life changes. It's too hard on people." Maybe Donna Mahaney's dessert would cheer her up. It's called

Chocolate Cheese Squares

2 large pkg. frozen family-size Tollhouse Cookie Mix
2 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
2 eggs
2 tsp. vanilla
1½ c. sugar
Chocolate chips and walnuts, optional

Slice one frozen cookie roll and line a 9 x 13 pan with frozen cookie slices. Combine cream cheese with eggs, vanilla and sugar. Pour one-half of mixture over the slices. Slice other package of frozen cookie roll and layer slices over the cheese mixture. Top with remainder of the cream cheese mixture and top with chocolate chips and walnuts. Bake at 350 degrees for 40-45 min. Chill and cut into squares.

Equine encephalitis warning

Veterinarians from Tufts University School of Veterinary Medicine and the Massachusetts Veterinary Medical Association (MVMA) advise using extra precautions this fall in the care of horses never vaccinated for Eastern equine encephalitis.

At least 14 horses around New England have died of the disease in recent weeks, said Dr. Robert Orcutt, spokesman for the MVMA.

Orcutt and Dr. Bud Fackelman, chief of staff at Tufts' Large Animal Hospital in Grafton, said unvaccinated horses should be brought inside, away from mosquito-infested areas, especially in areas where there is a high concentration of mosquitos and the disease is known to be present.

Veterinarians advise that horses who were once vaccinated for the disease, but not this year, would gain immediate protection from a booster shot of the encephalitis vaccine. Horses never before vaccinated would not gain protection from a vaccination for at least two weeks.

The virus, which resides in birds and rodents in the wild, is carried by mosquitos and finds hosts in both horses and humans.

The veterinarians emphasized the disease cannot be transmitted directly from horse to horse or from horse to human.

There is some disagreement, Orcutt and Fackelman said, about how often horses should receive booster shots of the vaccine. Orcutt said that New England veterinarians ordinarily vaccinate once a year, in the spring, but Fackelman points out that in Florida, where the mosquito population is high, horses are vaccinated every six months

For more information, call Dr. Fackelman in Grafton at 839-5302.

Finding of a rhyme

(The following rhyme was saved from a Boston Globe edition of about 15 years ago. We would willingly attribute authorship if we had it. It is, however, with winter round the corner, a warming reminder. Ed.)

Wood Lore

Beech woodfires are bright and clear, if the logs are kept a year.
Chestnut's only good, they say if for long it's laid away.
Birch and Fir logs burn too fast blaze up bright and do not last.
It is by the Irish said,
Hawthorne bakes the sweetest bread.
Elm wood burns like churchyard mould,
e'en the very flames are cold.
Poplar gives a bitter smoke fills your eyes and makes you choke.
Apple wood will scent your room with an insense like perfume.
Oaken logs if dry and old
keep away the winter cold.
But...Ash wood wet, and Ash wood dry a king shall warm his slippers by.

NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that SUZANNE I. CLAPP of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before ten o'clock in the forenoon on December 15, 1982.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) otherwise the Court may upon its own motion or on motion by the petitioner, the guardian ad litem, (if any), or any person whose appearance is on file (with notice to any person whose appearance is on file and, if applicable, the guardian and petitioner), order the appearance struck.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twenty-seventh day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty two.

Congregational 'Messiah Sing' planned for Nov. 28

The Second Congregational Church, Highland Avenue, will be hosting the annual "Messiah Sing" Sunday, Nov. 28 at 3 p.m.

Each year director Ellen Fryling, members of the Hingham Civic Orchestra, local soloists and all interested chorus members meet to perform George F. Handel's "The Messiah." This year marks Mrs. Fryling's 21st year as director of this program in various churches.

This event is traditionally attended by local musicians and people visiting the area. Last year's performance was enjoyed by hundreds, including visitors from many states. Singers are asked to arrive early and bring their own music score. Refreshments will be served after the performance.

Sewer update: federal money okay, but sludge disposal site a question

By Mike Berger

Cohasset will not be forced to repay state planning advance funds for a $13.7 million sewer treatment plant if federal money is denied for the project.

However, a special town meeting vote which would delay the design plans, could mean a court suit against the town and/or daily fines of over $1,000.

A state Division of Water Pollution Control administrator told town officials Monday night one of the last steps in securing federal money for the sewer plant is finding a sludge site.

Robert Cady, WPC manager, said he would negotiate with his associates, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, to agree to deposit sludge at the Cedar Street landfill.

Meanwhile, Charles DeSantis of 260 Forest Ave. still plans to present his resident-sponsored article to special town meeting, Monday, Nov. 29.

His article asks residents to suspend further planning for the project and force officials to look for cheaper but more expansive plans.

DeSantis argues the debt and interest payments will burden the town, already restricted by Prop. 2½ and the town's failure to set a tax rate because of the incomplete 100 percent revaluation project.

"It would start with a $513,000 payment for the first five years and an operating maintenance fund of $115,000. That is the equivalent of a seventh and eighth grade Police and Fire Department," DeSantis said.

"And this will only treat 30 percent of the town," he added.

In 1978 the state became concerned over the quality of water going into James Brook from the Elm Street treatment plant.

A year later the state took the town to court over failure to develop plans for a new plant. To avoid a lawsuit, town officials accepted a $10,000 fine for past violations and agreed to a timetable for design and construction of a new facility.

Thomas McMahon, State Water Pollution Control director, wrote a letter to Executive Secretary Arthur Clark and said Cohasset has fallen behind the timetable and is technically in violation of the agreement. He said no further legal action has been initiated since the town has "been proceeding in good faith."

"At this present time, this division is actively processing the Step II planning advance for the design of Cohasset's pollution abatement facilities.

"Should actions be taken at the town level which would delay or defer the progress of either the Step II design or Step II construction of your project, this office would again request immediate action by the Attorney General's Office for contempt of the Agreement for Judgment or other appropriate action.

Monday night, assistant town counsel, selectmen, sewer commissioners and the Board of Health met to discuss what actions the town might face if voters reject the state-ordered project.

Lincoln out, Dooley in (probably) as chief

Fire Lt. Martin Dooley of Hartford, Connecticut is expected to sign a Fire Chief's contract with selectmen.

Dooley was to meet with Executive Secretary Arthur Clark and selectmen to iron out a probable three-year agreement.

Selectmen gave a sample contract to Dooley after Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln changed his mind and declined the position, a job he accepted nearly two weeks ago.

Lincoln cited family and personal reasons in his decision.

Lincoln told the Mariner, "The health and well being of my family was the most important determining factor. A personal problem arose within the last two weeks."

He added selectmen's refusal to grant him a leave of absence from his captain's position to take the chief's position was a small factor.

"I regret any inconvenience this decision may have caused but again the health and well-being of

Estimated tax bills to go out Dec. 1

Cohasset may be able to send out estimated tax bills Dec. 1 if a Nov. 29 special town meeting appropriates $120,000 to begin 100 percent revaluation.

Assessor Chairman Brian Wilkin said, after discussions with state tax officials, permission to issue estimated tax bills could come after the state Department of Revenue receives a definite revaluation plan in writing.

Cohasset's first revaluation try failed when the state rejected appraiser Thomas Mahony's revaluation report. This has resulted in at least $50,000 in interest rates due to borrowing and $25,000 paid to Mahony.

Assessors alleged he defaulted on his contract and have sued him for nearly $125,000.

If voters refuse to appropriate the money the state wil reassess the town's property and charge between $200,000 and $300,000 for doing so.

Estimated tax bills mean property owners will be paying half of what they paid last year. A second attempt at revaluation may take nine months to complete, meaning the town will probably issue estimated tax bills in the same amount next spring.

Estimated tax bills don't solve the town's fiscal crunch. Failure to set an actual tax rate means the town will be left without the increased revenue it needs to ease the budget crunch.

If the job had been done on time, the town could have raised its tax ceiling and received more revenue under Proposition 2½.

Department heads were told to submit nearly the same budget figures as last year unless they find emergency situations.

Last week assessors were told they must scrap the Mahony figures and start from scratch. The project would have cost only $30,000 if some of Mahony's figures were usable.

But Harold Mendoza, an analyst with Appraisal Consultants of New England, said Mahony's work contained too many gaps to be saved and resubmitted to the state.

Cohasset kids 'adopt' grandparents

By Jane Lane

Relationships that transcend years have been bound between some very special people.

A group of ten and 11 year-old girls have 'adopted' a number of grandparents at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Troop 4320 of the Cohasset Junior Girl Scouts initiated a program this year which seems to benefit the patients at Cohasset Knoll as much as it has endeared them to the hearts of these young girls.

The program began as a conglomeration of ideas from troop leaders Taffy Nothnagle and Penny Redfield, and nursing home activities director Joanne Day.

Nothnagle said, "Over the summer Penny and I were trying to come up with something different for the girls to do this year so we wouldn't lose any girls. We wanted some sort of service-oriented program, because that is what scouting is all about. But we couldn't quite figure out what to do."

The two Cohasset residents called Cohasset Knoll and asked if the girls could participate in an unstructured program with the elderly patients.

Activities director Joanne Day was just as enthusiastic about the idea and immediately set up a schedule for the girls to meet at the home.

Day, a former Girl Scout leader, wanted to establish a scouting program at the nursing facility. She had previously called the Blue Hills Council headquarters in Braintree with such a recommendation, but had received no reply. It was coincidence, or fate, that merged the two groups this fall.

"I was a Girl Scout leader for years," Day said, "and I know how desperate some troops are for meeting space. We have a large room here at the nursing home they could use, so I figured this would be mutually good for both parties. I never realized how beautiful the whole thing would turn out."

According to Day, a Scituate resident, the program has been as successful for the patients as for the young girls. The patients look forward to the bi-monthly meetings, and they are hesitant to leave once the girls have gone. "It's been wonderful," she said.

The sixth grade girls meet twice a month on Monday nights in the activity room of the nursing home. The leaders were naturally anxious about the outcome of their innovation.

All concerns were swept aside, Nothnagle explained, when without hesitation the girls opened up to the patients and the patients responded as easily.

Each girl introduced herself to the adults and gave a brief autobiography to the attentive audience. Nothnangle and Day agreed it was "love at first sight" for everyone involved, as the adults replied by asking about siblings, pets, and the girls' hobbies and interests.

"There was real communication right from the first meeting," according to Day. Some of the patients here had once been Girl Scouts themselves — things these girls never thought about. They couldn't believe they

McKinnon office hours

A member of Sen. Allan R. McKinnon's staff will be available at Town Hall on Nov. 23 at 1:30 p.m. If this time is inconvenient, please don't hesitate to call Senator McKinnon's office at 722-1646 and other arrangements will be made.

Beechwood Firehouse bids

Selectmen will decide this week who will be awarded the Beechwood Fire Station. Gene Duvoisin of Scituate was the low bidder with $250; Samuel Esposito of 139 Hull Street bid $400. Selectmen agreed to advertise for bids after Duvoisin offered $200. An earlier ad brought no bidders. Selectmen Rocco Laugelle said there could be some problems if Esposito moves the station to Hull Street. Branches and some trees may hinder the move, he said. Mrs. Duvoisin said she and her hsuband would restore the station and seek to have it placed as an historic landmark. She said it wasn't fair that her husband disclosed the bid publicly and was later told to rebid to own the station.

Condo plan opposed

Nine residents opposed a planned condominium complex at 62 Howe Road last week during a Zoning Board of Appeals hearing. Thomas Diab of Howe Road submitted the wrong permit to construct the three-unit complex. He had requested a special permit to change an existing single-family house to a multi-unit condominium. But he was changing a barn and not an existing home. If he converts the barn, he must apply for a zoning variance. A new hearing will be scheduled. The application called for conversion of the barn into three units with six parking spaces either on the property or three on the property and three in a garage to be built across the street. Opponents raised the issues of parking, sufficient buffer between the parking area and the property, drainage plans and traffic congestions.

Board procedure

Robert Davenport of Sohier Street asked selectmen why they wouldn't put his town meeting article on the warrant three years ago but did so for another citizen last week. The article placed last week at the request of Lucia Wood of Jerusalem Road asks the town to keep a three-member board of selectmen by rescinding an Aug. 30 special town meeting vote. Davenport asked selectmen to sponsor an article three years ago to construct a water main on Route 3A. The answer given by Selectman Rocco Laugelle was money. Selectmen cannot sponsor money-related articles without the proper 100 signatures.

Police chief deadlines

Applicants have until Nov. 17 to send resumes for the position of police chief. Applications are due Nov. 24.

Access to town hall

Selectmen have agreed to work toward providing handicapped people access to town hall. Robert Stanton raised the issue and said he cannot enter town hall to vote. He must pay to mail an absentee ballot. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said space for a ramp was available beside town hall. He suggested the Highway Department could do the job with town equipment. An entrance ramp was part of renovations planned two years ago, but never built.

Boy Scouts assistance

Cohasset Explorer Scouts answered the search call when a 74-year old woman wandered from the Queen Anne Nursing Home in Hingham. More than 100 area scouts combed the woods and swamps. The woman was eventually found by State Police. Scouts from Explorer Post 28 in Cohasset participated and Arthur Lehr, explorer post advisor in Cohasset, coordinated the scouts and explorers in the search.

Lincoln out, Dooley in . . .

my family is most important to me."

Lincoln still plans to remain captain.

Within a day of Lincoln's notification that he would refuse the position, selectmen asked Dooley to attend a Nov. 10 meeting.

Selectmen gave Dooley a sample contract but did not formally vote to offer the job to him. Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie and selectman Rocco Laugelle said they were reluctant to name Dooley chief until he had read the contract. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur insisted the board appoint Dooley fire chief subject to contract negotiations and his passing a physical examination. But neither Ainslie or Laugelle favored her proposal.

Selectmen did not decide a salary or a term of contract.

However, Clark said Tuesday the contract would probably be for three years and a salary in the vicinity of $28,000 would be offered.

Clark told the Mariner Lt. Dooley will be meeting with him Wednesday along with an attorney from Hull. "I understand he has the full intention to take the job," Clark said.

Dooley, a 14-year veteran of the Hartford Fire Department told selectmen he was not going to take a leave of absence should be accept the Cohasset job.

He said Hartford rules and regulations don't allow a leave of absence for persons seeking other employment. Selectmen approved a similar regulation for all town department heads and employees two weeks ago.

Dooley wanted a five-year contract but later said he would settle for three. He ruled out accepting a one-year contract. He repeated an earlier statement from a job interview he doesn't consider the Cohasset job a stepping stone to another position.

He said he could arrive in Cohasset in two weeks but would prefer a month for relocation.

Dooley has also worked for the Garden City, New Jersey Fire Department and volunteered for 14 years with the Washington, N.Y Fire Department. He is also an instructor at the Connecticut State Fire School. He attended the selectmen's meeting with his daughter, enrolled in an area school.

Dooley also told selectmen he had not applied for another fire chief's position in Massachusetts this year. A year ago he applied for the Plainville position but was not selected.

A chief's selection committee first chose Dooley as one of three out-of-town finalists before an August special town meeting forced the committee to expand the final search to eight, including local candidates.

Ground broken on first condo cluster development

The first residential cluster condominium development in Cohasset broke ground last week.

A $6 million development at 100 Pond Street calls for 39 two-bedroom condominiums priced between $117,000 and $160,000.

This is the first project under the town's new cluster zoning by-law which was designed to encourage a less sprawling form of development and more areas for open and recreation land.

Thirty-nine units are planned for a 23-acre site on Pond Street. Developers are One Hundred Pond Street Associates. Architects are Claude Miquelle Associates of Melrose and landscape architects are Todd and Gagne Associates of Rowley.

The by-law created a zoning district for residential cluster development permitting an applicant to build single family and multi-family units with reduced lot areas and frontage requirements clustered with adjacent open land under a common ownership.

Two-thirds of the units will be single-family homes and one-third will be attached triple units.

A description of the project released by Miguel Associates said the emphasis will be preserving as much open space as possible.

Forty-nine percent of the tract will be retained as common open space. The firm is planning new landscape plantings, a tennis court, a putting green and a walking path, a pond and natural marshes.

Frederick Thayer of One Hundred Pond Street Associates said the development is a creative realization of Cohasset's goal to create a plan "superior to a conventional plan in preserving open space, minimizing environmental disruption and allowing for more efficient provision of services."

Thomas Hamilton of Gallery 360, The Gallery of Homes, said homeowners will be paying for freedom from maintenance worries. "You can leave all winter long and you don't have to worry about it."

Owners will pay a yet to be determined monthly maintenance fee which will pay for the lawn upkeep, snow removal and road maintenance.

Condominium owners will also be paying a property tax based on their home and their share of the land.

Hamilton said completion of the 39-units should be completed by 1984 and construction will be phased. A model should be completed in January.

Dan Matting, project designer, said the home concept will "create a contemporary response to the indigenous woodclad, steeply pitched roof New England cottage home commonly found in Cohasset. The predominantly one and one-half story buildings also reflect the sale of typical homes in the neighborhood."

He said the interiors will stress open space, latest technological design and energy insulation.

Pond St. Condo groundbreaking (L-R): Phil Greenspan, Quincy Savings Bank; Arthur Clark, executive secretary; Thomas Hamilton, Gallery 360 marketing agent; Barbara Power, chairman of the planning board, and developer Frederick Thayer.

Cohasset kids 'adopt' grandparents...

had so much in common with the elderly."

By the time the next meeting took place, each girl had selected a "favorite" and asked to bring the individual down from his or her room to the activity area. Now it is standard procedure for each girl to go to her "adopted grandparent" and bring the wheelchair-bound patient to and from the meeting.

There are 16 girls involved in the program. The original idea was to limit the number of adult participants. A one-to-one relationship was the ideal the program was striving for, Nothnagle said, although that aim is difficult to achieve, especially when the Scouts hold special parties for the patients.

There was a Halloween party held the Friday before the actual date. It was an afternoon function and included 30 residents of the facility. The adults and youngsters played various games together, recited riddles and shared traditional Halloween fare such as cider and doughnuts.

A few curious "outsiders" joined in the fun, Nothnagle said, including her six and eight year-old sons.

A costume parade by the Scouts topped off the festivities and the girls then reluctantly brought their new friends back to their rooms.

The Cohasset Knoll traditionally holds a Christmas party for the residents and their families. The girls have already requested admittance to that exclusive event. They will be there to sing carols and serve refreshments.

At the second meeting, several of the girls brought games from home and played with their individual partners. Fierce competition over Scrabble, Uno and Monopoly continued between the girls and the adults throughout the evening.

Dec. 13 the girls are planning a concert, the scout leader explained. Three-quarters of the troop members play musical instruments and the remainder will accompany them with vocals. Most of the time, the theme for meetings is left to the girls' imaginations.

Melissa Nothnagle, 11, and Anne Bowdoin, 78, work together on Thanksgiving decorations at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

"We're very excited about this," Nothnagle said. "On the one hand we are exposing the girls to elderly people — many of the girls don't have grandparents, or their grandparents live far away — and I think we're providing a service to that population in our community."

Day agreed that the Scouts are helping to involve these adults in the activities of their community. As Day explained, the nursing facility is their home and the patients should know people from their community.

"This program has been better than I ever anticipated," she said. "I would like to continue it next year, even though these girls will be gone into Cadet Scouting. A Brownie troop is coming in this week and we'll start an experimental program with them. We'll play it by ear because these girls are really young."

Nothnagle said all the girls have become enthused about their "foster grandparent" program, including her 11 year-old daughter, Melissa. Her daughter brought along a family photo album at one session and the patients took turns browsing through it.

Redfield's daughter, Allie, 11, also participates in this popular program.

"There isn't one girl who isn't interested in the program, otherwise she would have dropped out. I think the girls have developed interesting relationships that will have an effect on them for a long time," Nothnagle said.

Day agreed that regardless of age, the positive results of this innovative program have been showered upon all.

Looking over their Thanksgiving baskets are Felecia Bartow, 11, and Marguerite Ward, 85, friends who look forward to their biweekly visits at the Knoll. (Greg Derr photo)

☐Bowdoin College senior fullback Chris Abbruzzese has been named to the Eastern College Athletic Conference's (ECAC) weekly football honor roll for his recent performance in Bowdoin's 33-14 win over Bates College.

Abbruzzese carried the ball 23 times against the Bobcats, picking up 105 yards. He also scored three touchdowns, including the game winner in the fourth period. His touchdown runs were of one, one and three yards.

After seven games Abbruzzese is Bowdoin's second leading rusher, having picked up 260 yards on 64 carries, an average of 4.1 yards per rush.

☐Pat Geary has won sales honors for outstanding achievement during September for Oriflame Corp., a European skin care company with U.S. headquarters in Billerica.

Products are available only through in-home skin-care classes conducted by Oriflame Beauty Advisors, such as Pat.

☐September graduates of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Class of 1982 include Richard Conboy of Whitehead Rd., plant and soil sciences; Katharine Anne Hanlon of Beechwood St., fine arts; and Jonathan Hoy of Border St., hotel, restaurant and travel administration.

☐Howard Schram is a patient at Mass. General Hospital. He has been there for a few weeks while they are trying to make him stronger for his soon-to-be operation. I have been told that cards and letters would help to brighten his outlook. His address is: Mass. General Hospital, Philips House, Room #858, Boston, Mass.

☐Good news to hear that the Cohasset Christmas Stroll plans are underway. What fun it was last year; a great way to get in the spirit.

The theme, "Enchanted Village" is so apt for our scenic town. With Ellen Morrissey and Tina Watson leading the merchants it is sure to be a grand success.

☐Hats off to Robert Stanton...he wrote a letter to the Mariner about disabled people in Cohasset not being able to vote in our town hall due to the fact there was no way for them to enter.

The selectmen have said there is a space for a ramp beside the town hall and have promised to provide one. Good to know there will no longer be a need to vote by an absentee ballot for the handicapped.

☐Even the fish were fooled by our last "spell" of Indian Summer. Mark Lahive, Jay Contis and Troy Chatterton were catching fish as fast as they could reel them in at Cunningham Bridge last weekend, the rain didn't even stop them. Friends who enjoyed the "catch of the day" thanked them.

☐Guy Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tyrone Martin, 68 Pond St., has earned placement on the dean's list for the summer semester from Berklee College of Music. When he graduates he will qualify as a multi-skilled professional in many musical areas. Guy is majoring in professional music.

☐Remember to order your tickets for Gerard Keating's tribute. The entertainment committee is working very hard on surprising Gerard (and friends) and the tickets are going...don't miss out.

☐From all reports, the Village Fair is moving along at a rapid pace. Several new ideas are going to be offered, including a pre-sale to be held on November 18. It will be held in the Desmond Room of Saint Anthony's Church from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Items for sale are from an old Cohasset estate and it sounds as if it includes a lot of everything, both old and new. All interested people are invited. The proceeds will go to the five Cohasset churches that sponsor the Fair.

☐Mike O'Connell's interview that was aired between periods of the Bruins' game last week was great. Had nice things to say about our town, and they also interviewed his wife Rose Mary. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Evans, Fair Oaks Lane. They even had their grand-daughter filmed. What a handsome family. It's so nice to see a local sing the praises of our town, while making us proud of him, both as a person and a player.

☐Loved the story about Thompson Hughes furnishing her home. I know of a lot of people that have "tucked the article away," those same are now watching the classified ads like hawks.

☐The loyal Cohasset Skippers fans were really treated well last week. Not only did the team play a wonderful game, the Abington band, winner of many awards, played their program that they use for their competitions. The best part of all...the Skippers won, with every member of the team playing an excellent game.

☐Last week it was announced by the Student Council that they are going to sponsor a "Spirit Week" at the high school. Every day there will be a different theme and/or mode of dress. They are working out the details. They got the idea while visiting another school recently. It should be great for all.

Is that Pooh Bear in a Justin Golden suit or Justin, age 2, under a Pooh Bear hat? Whichever, they both look warm on a recent blustery day. (Greg Derr photo)

☐George Dresser III has been appointed Bishop for the Hingham Ward of the Church of the Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon), by Dr. Brent Lambert, Mormon Stake President.

Bishop Dresser is married to the former Mary Brundage of Cohasset. They live with their son, Donald, and daughter, Jennifer, in Duxbury.

He will serve his church like all Mormon leaders, without monetary compensation. Dresser is employed in a family owned business in Weymouth.

A native of Hingham, Dresser will lead a 400 member congregation.

☐Cohasset Police Safety Officer John Rhodes III recently accepted the AAA National Pedestrian Safety Award for Cohasset for no pedestrian fatalities in four consecutive years (1978 through 1981).

☐Those who are planning to serve squash as part of their Thanksgiving menu, be sure to look up the "Squash Pudding" recipe in the "Cohasset Entertains" cookbook. It's outstanding.

Sludge disposal site a question...

Richard Henderson, assistant town counsel, said the state has been understanding and has not brought the town to court.

"But if the town changes course, we are subject to the reinstatement of the proceedings," he said.

He said there are three stages to receiving federal money for construction of the plant. Step 1 was finding the site, step 2 is paying $500,000 for engineering costs and step 3 (advanced by the state) is the award of federal and state construction money.

The town is expected to pay about $4 million for the new plant. The engineering money, advanced to the town by the state, will not be repaid if the Step III award is not approved by the Federal government, Cady said.

Henderson said the only holdup in completion of the Step II acceptance is finding a sludge deposit site.

SLUDGE

In May, the Board of Health signed an agreement with Cohasset Heights Ltd. to accept the town sludge.

However, the board later rejected a request from Cohasset Heights to accept sludge from Hull.

John Barry, Cohasset Heights owner, wrote to Cady that the town has refused to accept any sludge. But health board members told Cady Barry's letter was an attempt to force the board to accept Hull's sludge.

Cady offered as an alternative reserving space in the Cohasset landfill for sludge disposal. This would mean a deposit of 520 cubic yards or 52 truckloads annually.

Health board members were concerned about how much room the sludge would take up at the landfill.

A contractor is expanding the landfill which would extend the site's life for as many as 10 years.

Cady said the sludge is a very small percentage of total waste and suggested the health and sewer boards agree to reserve space in the landfill for the next 10 years. He said he would negotiate with other state officials for the amendment.

Both the health and sewer boards agreed to the concept. A future meeting will iron out the amendment in detail.

When the landfill runs out, a transfer station would be sought to take the rubbish and the sludge. Another possibility might be a Hull-owned incinerator which would burn the sludge if the facility is reopened.

Despite the resolution of some of the questions, DeSantis said he would still pursue his article.

DeSantis said if the state does not want to discuss the earlier agreement, "It would talk to us in court."

"We're not withdrawing the article. I want to reemphasize the importance of this article complying with Federal Environmental Protection Agency law. If we proceed with the project and do not conform with the Clean Waters Act, we have lost all our money. What we should be doing is asking for a request to the modification of the agreement. We are saying the town will comply with the Clean Waters Act, but we need more time."

By offering alternative approaches, DeSantis said the plant would meet federal and state requirements at "an affordable cost, with no impact on our schools and services."

Last week, DeSantis asked selectmen to support his article.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said he doesn't plan to support the DeSantis article. "If we support it, we may end up in jail."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, "As a former sewer commissioner, for 12 years, whatever the Sewer Commission recommends, I will go along."

EXECUTIVE SESSION

In a related matter, nearly two hours into the meeting, Henderson asked the boards to enter into executive session to discuss modification of the state consent decree.

He had planned to negotiate with the state Attorney General's office.

Henderson said he needed a closed-door session so the A.G.'s office would not read of his strategy in the newspapers.

Chartis Langmaid of the Cohasset League of Women Voters said since the agreement concerned the town and she is a taxpayer, the public should be made aware of the suit.

After a seven-minute executive session the boards voted in open session not to further negotiate with the A.G.'s office until after town meeting.

PSO sponsors roundtable discussion

The Cohasset Parent School Organization sponsors a roundtable discussion on "schools and finances" Thursday, Nov. 18 at 8 p.m. in the high school meeting room, no. 107.

Representatives of the school committee, administration, PSO, teachers and selectmen will discuss timely issues regarding Cohasset public education.

As a basis for discussion, the PSO has conducted a random telephone survey of 200 parents to determine levels of satisfaction with the schools.

This coincides with preparation of the 1983-84 budget by the administration.

If parents who were not contacted by phone wish to convey any comments or questions, they may call Nancy Sandell (0486) or Karin Bartow (0572).

Participating in the roundtable will be Diana Kornet, chairman of the school committee, Eugene Crowell, superintendent of schools, Tom O'Neil, president of the PSO and Henry Ainslie, chairman of selectmen.

Edward Atkinson, vice president of the PSO, will moderate the discussion and will present written questions from the audience.

Refreshments will be served.

Editorial

High time

About 15 years ago one wry author said America should declare victory in Vietnam and bring home the troops. Americans, being what they are, he quipped, would quickly forget who won or lost as well as the country of Vietnam and proceed to other causes.

Now 10 years after America left that country, without designating defeat or success, its countrymen and women have come to terms with something they haven't been able to forget. We never welcomed home those who served there. We never paid homage to those who were maimed or who never made it back at all.

And it has been like a thorn, something that bothered us, causing a sharp pain now and then, but nothing that stopped us from moving ahead.

Last week's dedication of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. removed that thorn. There's still the sore place where it was and that must heal. But finally the pain was addressed.

High time. While Americans are, as Gore Vidal said, quick to forget and adopt new causes, we never forgave the denial we placed on Vietnam and its veterans. We confused the two. We didn't want the war. So we had little to do with those who fought it for us.

Last week was Veterans Day. And veterans still count this week.

We are a lot of things in this country. Some of those are good. And simply because we built a bandwagon late and then couldn't wait to leap on it as if it were the most timely of crusades, that doesn't diminish the need to garnish the veterans with respect and dignity we've withheld.

Last weekend's services in Washington made us all feel better. The pilgrimages of the Gold Star families and parents was an exercise on behalf of America to tend the unfinished business.

In finding those names among the 59,000 they found a bit more peace. And so did America.

Notes & comment

It doesn't seem to happen as often as any of us would like, but every now and then there is an event that is nice enough to just sit back and admire. Such an event is the "adoption" of patients at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home by 16 girl scouts...see Jane Lane's front page story.

The girls, who use a room in the building for their scout meetings, get together with the residents twice a month. It is an arrangement that only has winners...no one need pick it apart to find any losers.

So, great congratulations to the girls involved, to scout leaders Taffy Nothnagle and Penny Redfield, and to Nursing Home Activities Director Joanne Day, all of whom have worked together to bring about a bright spot on the landscape as we enter the holiday season.

The astonishing decision by the leading candidate for fire chief not to take the position after months and months, a search committee, a special town meeting vote to alter the said search committee's work, numerous selectmen's meetings, and arduous contract negotiations, leaves the town...how to say...winded.

Everyone's winded, but some of the participants in the too-long process ought to feel vindicated as well as winded. The Fire Chief Selection Committee ought to feel vindicated because it now appears that one of their original finalists (Martin Dooley of Hartford, Connecticut) will be offered the job. Don't quote us on that, though...We won't report the hiring of a fire chief until we see one shinny down the brass pole in daylight, sober (us) and carrying a notarized contract (him).

Selectmen also ought to feel vindicated. Their refusal to cave in to the demand by the former leading applicant for a guaranteed job in the department, should he not have worked out as chief, probably revealed a reluctance on his part about taking the chief's job. If so, by "smoking out" his reluctance, the selectmen may well have avoided entering into a relationship that could have been detrimental both for the department and a fine firefighter.

A day of honor—minus the president

Commentary

Sixty thousand Americans died — I remember writing to friends, brothers of friends, husbands of friends. I remember receiving letters describing strange sounding places and different people and culture, unsaid horrors that were implied but never written down, seeing strange places on T.V. and hearing about horrendous battles, then being shaken because I had just read those same names and places in letters from these friends.

The letters that I received didn't talk about the Vietnam War. Instead they described friendships that had developed, the difference in a strange country and culture compared to home, and how good those cookies and treats were that had arrived in the mail. But most importantly to please, please continue sending those letters.

The year was 1968 and I was married to an Army doctor stationed at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C. This hospital was designated by the Army as their center for paraplegics. It was a show place, lots of brass, lots of doctors and so many, many young men in wheel chairs.

I felt very close to these men for we were all young, lonely and away from home. My son was a toddler then and with daddy at the hospital we would be there frequently. I remember these young men reaching out, touching my baby and talking to me. I sensed my child and I represented something normal in their lives. We weren't the military, we weren't medical; we were what they had lost touch with. These men, these lonely young kids who had lived through hell, one look into their eyes and the horror of what they had lived through reflected back to the world. They never talked about their hurt or their past.

The big sport at Walter Reed in those days was wheel chair races. If I close my eyes, I can still see it — the young men lined up by the Chapel, handsome, muscular, smiling faces, all in wheel chairs or gurneys, all without limbs. There was a set course, naturally illegal, pedestrian beware as they would take off at a fast clip from the Chapel door, down a steep ramp, a quick 90 degree turn where the men were separated from the boys and on to the finish line by the Emergency Room. I remember watching mesmerized as the hoots and shouts took place urging the winner on, wondering what will happen when they leave this place, when the support group is dissipated and they are out on their own.

On nice days I'd take my baby for a walk around the grounds and see so many young men being pushed in wheel chairs by beautiful young women. The thought crossed my mind where will these women be in a year, two years? How do we justify this atrocity, this waste of life and limb?

I sat today and read about the Vietnam Memorial. I cried. I thought about it and wondered, why am I crying. I have no brother, no father, no son that died in Nam. I found I am crying because I supported our Government. I supported a country who sent 60,000 young sons, fathers and brothers off to their death, while thousands of others were maimed and countless others went off to an emotional God-knows-what.

For what? In retrospect, we didn't fight a war to win, we didn't even welcome these Veterans home. No door was opened, no business or school opportunity afforded them. We brought them home and left them alone, alone to worry about the defects their children were born with, the worry about Agent Orange, we left them alone to mainstream back into American life. Oh sure, the Government sent a letter ahead of their arrival home stating there may be some changes, may be some flashbacks. They didn't prepare us for the nightmare that was just beginning, the addictions, the violent flashback when a car backfired and a friend drops into the gutter, the divorces, the suicides.

We made a mistake and our Country buried its head in the sand and tried to pretend it didn't happen. Well, it did happen and our head is out of the sand now and we are staring straight ahead and seeing a long, black granite monument with 60,000 names on it that says, "Forget Nam, Never!"

A monument is good, it reminds us that war kills, it tells us to think before we act again. We fought a war with first class men in a second class way. We finally gave them a day of glory, a day of recognition honoring each and every one of them, dead or alive. On this special day thousands of people came, mothers, fathers, sisters, wives, children, lots of press coverage — but not the President of the United States.

I am angry. If these men were good enough to fight for us, to be wounded and to give their lives for us, then why wasn't it important enough for the President of the United States to be there on this their day?

NEWS ITEM – South Shore offers more house for the money, survey shows. Cost less than comparable houses in Boston's north and west suburbs. A $100,000 house there would cost $115,000 in Cohasset; $99,500 in Hingham – Norwell, $97,600; Scituate, $71,500; Marshfield, $67,700; Hanover, $65,900. The survey covered 84 surburban Boston communities.

"...On the other hand, if you guys plunk down in one of our higher priced South Shore communities — sure you get back bigger bucks on your investment — but you run the risk of a bigger tax bite..."

Yo yo politics

To the Editor:

My original aim as one of three petitioners for a five-member board of selectmen was to get the article on the Aug. 30, 1982 warrant. We accomplished the same. Our second aim was to get voters to town meeting. You went, You voted. It won.

Several weeks ago Selectmen decided this issue should be tried again. They inserted an article on the warrant of the upcoming Nov. 29 special town meeting which asks voters to rescind their action of Aug. 30, 1982.

As of this writing Town Counsel's firm has reached an opinion as to the legality of Selectmen's article, but it has not been revealed to us. Consequently, at this point in time we, along with you, are confused as to what kind of animal the Selectmen's article is, legal or moot. Perhaps some of their rationale for not sharing this news with the public is in order to make campaigning against it more difficult.

I feel badly about Selectmen's action for several reasons, one being that as soon as petitioner Richard Barrow researched the statute which he felt made Selectmen's article illegal, he shared that knowledge with Selectmen. At one point he was asked to confer with Town Counsel and share his resources. He did so. Petitioners and residents are apparently not to receive the same courtesy.

Whether the Selectmen's article is legal or not is not the issue here. The need for a five-member board of selectmen is still the "only" issue. The need was evident three years ago, six years ago, 10 years ago...last week, this week.

I have no doubt that real individuals who might wish to "reduce" the board of Selectmen to three, exist. I have no doubt they were given poor legal advice which held up getting a petition signed. Anyone who has ever tried to determine the legal format for any petition article knows of the frustrations. Getting an article signed is no problem. Getting the legalities worked out can take weeks. Petitioners in Cohasset have only seven days.

In addition, I have some real problems with this entire special town meeting...Selectmen opened the warrant on Oct. 27 and announced it would be closed on October 29 for a meeting to be held November 22. After Tanna Kasperowicz called the Executive Secretary to remind him of the Town by-law which requires that a special town meeting warrant must be legally open seven days for petitioners' articles, Selectmen agreed to keep the warrant open until Nov. 3.

On Nov. 3 or sometime during that week Selectmen got wind of a citizens' group which was attempting to construct an article to reverse the vote of aug. 30. And so, on Nov. 3 Selectmen decided to change the date of the special meeting to Nov. 29 and keep the warrant open another week, to give these four individuals time to get their signatures. This sounds like yo-yo politics to me.

The only issue we have with the individuals who were unable to get their petition signed, in spite of a week's grace period, is that all four of those particular individuals were present at the Aug. 30 town meeting. None of them were personally denied their vote on the issue because of a vacation, etc.

We ask Selectmen; we ask the individuals who want this article re-voted...if this article of yours is defeated at the Nov. 29 meeting, will you try for the best out of five, seven, eight or nine?

There is little doubt in my mind that a general statute of the Commonwealth precludes this vote from happening. It is obvious that the statute was created in order to stop situations as the one Cohasset voters find themselves in, from reoccuring monthly.

Selectmen have established a dangerous political precedent by having agreed to sponsor a request from four individuals. The fact that the article is so self-serving makes it doubly damaging.

Selectmen were quoted in a newspaper last week as saying they had never failed to sponsor a citizen request for the same. They have short memories. Last year a group of petitioners who had gotten 450 signatures on a particular article were refused Selectmen's sponsorship after it was determined their article was not properly worded.

Selectmen's article to rescind the action of the Aug. 30 town meeting is on the warrant as Article 3...a more favorable time slot. On Aug. 30 it was Article 10, in hopes that you would go home before it was voted.

I urge you to protect your vote of Aug. 30, 1982 on Monday, Nov. 29. Aside from this article, nine additional articles needing your careful consideration are on the special town meeting warrant.

Please attend town meeting!

A few words from a Polateen

By Claire McDonough

The attractive, brown-eyed teenager stepped to the podium.

"Hi," she smiled, "I'm Cathy, and I'm today's chairman for this meeting of Polateen, a support group for teenagers whose parents are compulsive political activists and who keep making them do things like leaflet drops.

"I'll begin by qualifying myself. In most ways, my family is comparatively normal. My dad has a good job, and we live in a nice house. My mom is pretty, and she has a lot of friends. To outsiders it probably seems that we're like everybody else. They don't know what my brother and I go through. They don't know how we live in fear of political campaigns. Just let somebody say 'I'm thinking of running for selectman,' or 'We ought to get signatures on a petition to preserve Angelo's snack bar,' or 'Did you know that the gypsy moth is becoming an endangered species?' and a change comes over my mother. Billy and Dad and I never get to use the telephone. For at least six months nobody can ask me for a date, because our phone is tied up with pre-primary canvassing or getting names for sure vote lists. It's probably just as well. There's no way I can find time to go on a date, anyway. I'll be spending every waking minute doing leaflet drops."

Jerry, a lanky young man with freckles, raised his hand.

"I don't mind the leaflet drops; not too much anyway. What gets me is the envelope stuffing. When my mom gets involved with a campaign we never get a decent meal. For one thing, the table is always covered with lists and envelopes, and for another, the taste of glue gets permanently into my tongue. Everything I eat tastes awful."

Paul, another young man, nodded emphatically. "The envelopes are the worst. I have a permanent ridge in my tongue from licking them, and a lot of little paper cuts that never get a chance to heal from one campaign to the next. In my family it's my Dad who suffers from compulsive political activism. People think he's not hurting anybody but himself, but they're wrong. The whole family suffers. My mother can't even invite her friends from church over, because she never knows when he'll break out in a cause."

Jean, a blue-eyed teenager with a blond pony tail, raised her hand timidly.

"This is my first meeting, and I'm not sure if I belong here. My parents really aren't that bad. They've only been actively involved in one campaign, but they really were totally committed to it. And just last week my mother started to say she misses the sea gulls at the dump."

The others looked at each other knowingly.

"Those are the first signs," Cathy assured her. "It's such an insidious disease, it can creep up on them little by little. They start out agreeing to make a few phone calls. The next thing you know, they're precinct captains. From then on, it's all down hill and your normal teenage years are shot."

"Here," Jerry said, handing Jean a pamphlet. "Read this. It lists 20 symptons that may indicate your parent is in danger of becoming a compulsive political activist. Like, 'Does he or she belong to the League of Women Voters?' 'Do you find voting lists on the bathroom tank?' 'Does he or she ever jump out of bed in the middle of the night, yell "Only 12 days to the election!" and start dialing?' 'Did you ever open your lunch box in school and find it was full of leaflets to save the Bottle Bill?' and so forth. If you must honestly answer yes to at least three of these 20 questions, the chances are that you belong in Polateen."

Jack, an older member who had sat quietly during the early part of the meeting, suddenly sprang to his feet.

"You know, I'm getting pretty fed up with this kind of thinking. I used to agree with everything people in this program said, but lately I've had second thoughts. I mean, political activity is important. Last week I met a guy in the supermarket parking lot, and he's running for the School Committee. He told me that if I don't get involved, I don't have any right to complain about what other people do. It made a lot of sense to me, and I told him I'd make some phone calls for him."

With a defiant toss of his head, Jack stormed out of the hall.

The other members looked at each other and shook their heads sadly.

"That's the insidiousness of the disease," Cathy sighed. "It can hit anyone. I'm afraid it looks like Jack has become one of them."

School Committee briefs...

AFS STUDENTS

AFS Chapter President and Vice President, Alex and Barbara Spooner, introduced Cohasset's two foreign exchange students to the School Committee Monday night. Anne Koehrer from France and Jaime Stallard from Peru expressed their appreciation in being here and said they enjoyed the school and people.

PIANO REPAIRS

The committee voted to spend $1,500 to repair two pianos, one in the music room and the other in the auditorium; the latter will be refinished.

The funds will come from the $2,800 accumulated interest on the Abigail Ripley School Fund of $1,000.

SENIOR MUSICAL

CHS Principal Richard Streeter reported that no one has yet applied to direct the spring senior musical.

PROGRESS REPORTS

New commercially produced Progress and Deficiency Reports will replace the old warning notices. The new forms are carbonless triplicates, with one copy each for the teacher, parent and guidance office.

They will be customized for Cohasset if found satisfactory.

SPECIAL EDUCATION

Special Education Director Stephen Hart reported that he expects five fewer special needs students systemwide next year.

MEETINGS

The next two school committee meetings are tentatively scheduled for December 6 and 20.

Cohasset -- School Comm. Members Attend MASC/ MASS Conference

Cohasset School Committee members and Superintendent Crowell attended the 18th Annual Joint Conference of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees (MASC) and the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents (MASS).

Diana Kornet, school committee chairman, reported that the November 3-6 conference in Hyannis attracted over 1,000 school committee members, school superintendents, and other educators.

Panels covered a wide range of topics. Alternative funding, class size, computers in the classroom, community education, schools and business, and discipline were among the topics discussed.

Special interest clinics were held on home education programs, school-age child care, coping with stress and appropriate textbook selection.

Dr. John Lawson, commissioner of education, gave the keynote address entitled "Education — A Proper Perspective" and Francis Keppel, senior lecturer at the Harvard University Graduate School of Education, gave the general session presentation.

"The conference offers us the opportunity to meet with and discuss education issues with other school committee members from across the state," Kornet said. "Committees are faced with more complex issues and members must make some difficult decisions. By participating in a conference such as this, we can assure the people of Cohasset that their elected representatives will provide the best school system possible."

Members who attended the conference were: Marthy Gjesteby, voting delegate; Joseph Nedrow, alternate; Diana Kornet, Richard Conley and Eugene Crowell, superintendent of schools.

Gjesteby said that in his address Lawson advocated "equal funding" of all school systems. She noted that under his proposal systems like Cohasset, which have valued education and spend more money than many other school systems, would be penalized in state reimbursements.

Keppel pointed out that improvements in math and science are sorely needed in the schools. Many nationwide tests, including SRAs and Achievement scores, have shown that the scores in these subjects are down, especially for 17 year-olds.

Medi Mart opens . . . plans consumer boards

Medi Mart consumers shouldn't keep their complaints or praise about the Cushing Plaza store to themselves.

In an interview with the Mariner, Consumer Affairs Manager Peggy Sage stressed customers should feel free to talk to Carl Zajac, merchandise manager, or Linda Kalns, store pharmacy manager.

Consumers will also have an opportunity to air complaints when a consumer board for the Cohasset store forms next fall.

Medi Mart administrators met with Scituate and Cohasset community leaders in October to discuss opening plans. Officials included representatives from the senior citizen and women's clubs, historical society, police and fire chiefs and town selectmen.

Sage will meet with these officials in late February or early March to determine "what they like about the store and what they don't like."

She plans to begin the Cohasset consumer board next fall once consumers are invited to fill out an application for board membership.

If interest soars and 100 consumers fill out applications, Sage said there could be three or four store consumer boards.

Medi Mart, a division of The Stop and Shop Companies, began consumer boards 15 years ago in a New Jersey supermarket to determine the area's consumer needs.

The board was formed to discuss problems, changing needs of the consumer, inflation, area unemployment and why shoppers choose a particular item or store.

Consumer boards usually meet in the spring and fall. Medi Mart administrators will meet again with community leaders in two or three months and then form the regular consumer board next fall.

The agenda for each area board is different, said Sage, but common denominations among the boards are consumer concern, the quality of the merchandise, inflation, advertising, future services and store hours.

"I am very excited about the consumer board concept and I encourage all customers to let us know at the store level about their concerns and needs. I can remember one consumer told us she needed a different baby formula, 'Isomel,' and we were able to get it for her," Sage said.

TYLENOL PRODUCTS

When the news of tampered drugs hit, Medi Mart removed all Tylenol products from the store and added security surveillance measures.

Sage said all Medi Mart stores including Cohasset will have an area in the back of the store for shop worn products.

"Every day we will be making inspections of each aisle and if any clerk sees an item which looks questionable or worn, it will be pulled off the shelf. There will be much more surveillance on an on-going basis," she said.

As a result of the consumer board, Medi Mart has instituted free health screening clinics to detect blood pressure, diabetes, vision and lung problems.

59 PLUS

Medi Mart has published pamphlets on generic drugs, poison prevention and health needs and adopted a senior citizen prescription program, "59 PLUS."

This program offers a 10 percent discount on prescriptions for consumers 59 years or older. No application forms must be filled out and there is no cost or obligation.

All new, refilled or transferred prescriptions qualify for the discount. The name on the prescription must match the name on the card to quality for the discount.

Monday's opening of the store marked the 50th opening in the chain. The Cohasset store is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays.

Chairman of Selectmen Henry Ainslie cuts the ribbon with State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray assisting. Joining them at the opening of Cohasset's Medi Mart are (left-to-right) Rosemary O'Connell, Linda Kalns, Zaren Dadekian and Carl Zajac, of Medi Mart, and Carol Goldberg, officer of The Stop and Shop Companies, Philip Hiscock, President of Medi Mart and Avram Goldberg, President of The Stop and Shop Companies. Gjesteby protests computer purchase

Several weeks ago School Committee member Martha Gjesteby refused to sign a warrant for the purchase of Radio Shack computers. She believed the $18,602 had not been encumbered in last year's budget. The rest of the committee signed for the purchase.

Gjesteby received an apology Monday night from Superintendent Eugene Crowell who said the money had indeed not been voted.

Although voted in June out of the non-budgeted surplus of $62,100, the funds were not encumbered before the close of the fiscal year.

Crowell said the computers were not received until July, and although two were defective, they were repaired by Radio Shack.

He told the committee that there is money in this year's budget to pay for the computers. Due to a leave of absence and one resignation Crowell assured the committee the funds were available.

The committee voted to authorize the payment. The Tandy Corporation, parent company of Radio Shack, will issue a new bill.

During the discussion of transfers, Gjesteby also asked where tuition reimbursement for three out-of-town students was going. Stephen Hart said the money had been sent to the South Shore Collaborative.

One student who was attending school from Hull, has moved to Cohasset; the others, a Kindergartener and alternative school student, still commute to Cohasset from Hull and Scituate.

Gjesteby noted that under state law money for children who were not classed as special needs should go to Cohasset.

Crowell said that if the money were to go to the town rather than to the school committee controlled accounts, he would advise not taking any more tuition students.

Gjesteby said that the legislature had passed a bill in 1982 which allows towns who accept the legislation, to set up revolving funds to receive tuitions from out-of-town and state foster children.

Crowell said that was true, but felt that town meetings had become suspicious of voting for revolving funds.

Cohasset enrolls three foster children, according to Hart.

The committee discussed the practice of transferring funds from accounts with expected surpluses to fund non-budgeted items. Crowell noted it has been the practice to do so at the end of the year for many years. He hopes a computer may be budgeted which will give instant balance readouts in the future.

Crowell estimates school budget at $3.7 million

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell told the school committee Monday night that the school budget for fiscal 1983-84 will be $3,771,284.

At an advisory committee meeting last week with town board representatives, the schools were alloted 53.8 percent of the proposed town budget.

Crowell said the school increase would be $79,043. He said he would need $260,000 for salary increases.

The number of pupils will drop by 60, which will result in the loss of three teachers.

Crowell said one teacher would be dropped at Deer Hill where there will be an enrollment decline of 50 students, and two teaching positions will be eliminated at the Jr./Sr. High. This will result in an estimated savings of $35,000.

The superintendent foresees the necessity of cutting an additional $135,000 to $150,000 from the budget.

School committee member Jack Langmaid said that since the school system had already absorbed an $84,000 cut from the projected budget last year and allocated surplus money to added teaching positions, the real effect in necessary cuts might be larger than Crowell anticipated.

Committee Chairman Diana Kornet wants the School Facilities Committee to meet and look at the school plant and its maintenance.

Langmaid said, "One board makes the decisions as to how to cut up the (financial) pie, and that is the Advisory Board. They think there is a lot of fat here. Some towns have a management council, including people from all the different boards to make that decision. Perhaps that should be started here as well."

Kornet referred to criticism of the school board for contracting 7½ percent salary increases. She said the negotiations were made at a time of 13 to 14 percent inflation. She pointed out the fact that the Advisory Board members "are not elected ...they see what they want to see."

Crowell admitted that Cohasset has been "well off," and pointed out Weymouth and Quincy as "disaster areas." He declared he saw the needs of the police and fire departments as well as the schools.

Body Language Health Spa to demonstrate self defense

Billy Blanks will teach and demonstrate self defense for women at Body Language Health Spa, Jonathan Livingston Square, Route 3A, Cohasset, Nov. 17 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Blanks is noted for his fourth degree black belt in Tae Kwon Do. He is rated the number one fighter in Massachusetts and is a winner of over 420 gold medals and trophies.

Assisting him in demonstrating self defense methods, and speaking briefly about street tactics when approaching or being involved in potentially dangerous situations, will be Blanks' green belt students, Matthew and Christine Pierce and Sylvia Schuler of Hingham. With these students, Blanks tours colleges, schools, community centers and clubs.

The demonstration is free and the spa hopes interested women who wish to learn more about themselves and the art of self defense, will come Nov. 17 to watch Blanks and his students perform martial arts' tactics and to ask any questions which they might have regarding classes at the health spa.

The self defense course is open to women over 16 years of age, and the price for six two-hour lessons (which includes a half hour stretching out and warm up period) is $60 for six weeks, or $120 for 12 sessions.

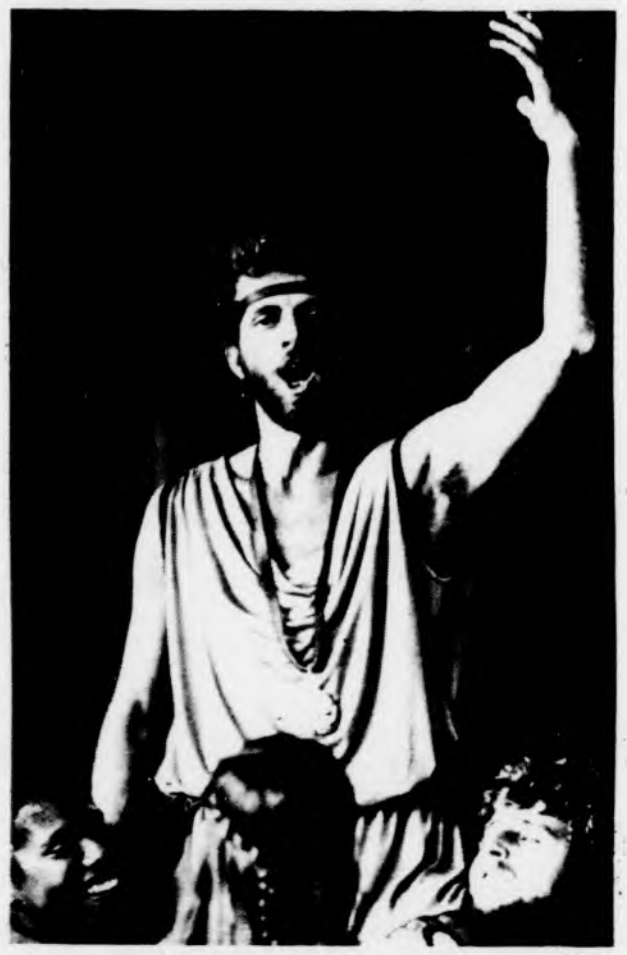
Theater is just around the corner at Osgood & Deer Hill

The Massachusetts Artists-in-Residence Awards Panel for 1982-83 has voted to support the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools' proposed residency with the Just Around the Corner Theatre Co.

The award was granted in "recognition of your efforts to develop a high quality experience in your site(s)." The schools will present the theatre residency as a second year site, having supported and implemented a poetry program last year.

The Artists Foundation, which administers and funds the programs, approved funding for the two Cohasset schools of $2,100. The funds come in part from the National Endowment for the Arts, The Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, and corporate funding.

Orpheus' lost love, Eurydice, sings him a song. Members of the Just Around The Corner Company practice their new play, "Orpheus."



Cohasset's share, or fifty percent, has already been raised by parents through last year's Communications Councils and the PSO. Also, a total of $1,120 from the Department of Education block grant was voted by the School Committee last year to go towards the program.

Just Around The Corner is a participatory-style performing company which explores theatre arts in educational settings. During their residency they will develop a new play for their repertory of original audience participation plays. Students at each school will observe and participate in this process during two weeks of residency work by the company actors.

During five weeks in January and February the Company's teachers, experienced actors and theatre arts teachers, will conduct sequenced student workshops introducing theatre making skills.

At Osgood, the workshops will introduce creative drama and movement and will use some puppetry and story theatre.

The Deer Hill workshops will focus on improvisation and creative drama. The skills used will help foster creative self-expression, use of the imagination and the physical self.

Orpheus, held aloft by his friends Jason and the Argonauts, uses his musical powers to charm monsters and thwart evil-doers. Derr Photos

In addition, the Company will perform their new musical play "Orpheus" at each school during the residency; and there will be core group work at Deer Hill involving an original student play. Music, art and other students will be involved in the presentation of the Deer Hill play.

Marie Price and Joann Magoun will be the site-coordinators for the residency at Osgood and Deer Hill, respectively. School principals Jack Creamer and Ken Ekberg, parents and grade level representatives from each school have been involved in planning this program and selecting the theatre company.

The artist-in-residence programs are designed to integrate artists into an educational setting where their specific artistic skills are taught and they serve as role models for students.

ELIZABETH GLASFELD BAUSCH & LOMB AWARD WINNER

Elizabeth Glasfeld was named winner of the annua. Bausch and Lomb Science Award last week. The Science Award, a handsome bronze medal, is presented each year to winners at more than 8,600 participating schools throughout the United States and Canada.

"The Bausch and Lomb Science Award is especially significant," said Richard Streeter, principal, who made the presentation, "because it recognizes the senior student at our school who has attained the highest scholastic standing in science subjects."

As winner of the award, Elizabeth is eligible to compete for one of several four-year Bausch & Lomb Science Scholarships at the University of Rochester, Rochester, N.Y. Scholarship winners are selected on merit, and stipends, based on need, could range up to $6,500 per year.

Surveys indicate that the award has encouraged more than 30 percent of the winners to follow scientific careers.

PSO FUNDRAISER

Do your Christmas shopping early and help the PSO as well. During the week of Nov. 22-27, Bookport at Lincoln Plaza next to Marshall's, has agreed to donate 15 percent of the purchase price of any book purchased by a parent or student of Cohasset.

NOTE: parents and students must identify themselves as Cohasset residents when purchasing books, so that the PSO may receive the percentage.

Contract awarded for Government Wharf extension

Selectmen have awarded a contract for designing the Government Wharf extension to Anderson-Nichols and Company of Boston. Work has begun and the $17,000 project should be completed by February 15. The expansion is designed to allow the pier to be used at any tide level. Larger boats cannot now use the pier during low tide.

Seahawks go 4-1-2

In results reported by their coaches for the period Oct. 24 to Nov. 6, Seahawk Youth Hockey teams emerged with four victories, one loss and two ties.

Coach Carney White's Pee Wee A's deadlocked Milton 3-3. Andy Thomas, Darrin Gold and Rickie Chase dented the nets while Danny Pompeo (2) and Scott Cutliff served as the playmakers.

Coach Frank McGovern's Pee Wee B's gunned down Milton 9-1. Jason Clark, Peter Buckley and Pat Glennon led the B's sharpshooters with a pair of bullets each, while Billy Hingston, Dennis Peacock and Eric Meschino also found the scoring range with their sticks. Eric Fitzpatrick, Stevie Boardman, Gregg Neville, Paul Norton and Clark supplied the scoring for the "Snipers."

Coach Jim Consalvi's Pee Wee C's walloped Pembroke 7-1. Justin Hughes (2), David Smith, Steve Elmes, Michael Meers, P.J. Breen and Fran Sturgis all hit the bullseye while Elmes (2), Smith, Breen, John Nilan and Mike Anderson were credited with assists. The C's also out-dueled Plymouth by a 3-1 count. Meers, Elmes and Niland scored goals while Niland, Anderson and Carmine Cimetti notched assists.

Coach Mike Dundon's Squirt B's were the busiest team during the period as they skated in three encounters. In their initial affair, the B's played to a scoreless tie with Neponset as Goaltender Michael Dundon earned a "shut-out" patch for his outstanding effort.

In the second contest the B squad whipped Braintree 5-2. Kevin Townsend (2), Jay Harris, Matthew D'Arrigo, and Matthew DiFiore were the Seahawk "puck-poppers" while Robin Laurence, DiFiore, Harris and Ariel Shocket registered assists. In the final game, the B's lost a heart-breaker to Weymouth 1-0.

Seahawk action captured by Greg Derr.

Athletes of the week

Senior Tara Pompeo earned this week's Athlete Award because of her strong interest and participation in girls soccer.

Tara, who fills the halfback position, started playing soccer four years ago when CHS inaugurated a girls soccer team.

She has also played in the Cohasset spring soccer league coached by Jack Duncombe.

CHS soccer coach Bill Fallon says Tara has really improved over the past few years and shows an interest in both the team and the sport.

Tara was recently a Homecoming finalist. She also coaches fall soccer for the recreation department and in the winter she coaches street hockey.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Senior Richie Evans was awarded this week's Athlete Award due to his leadership and versatility.

Rich is co-captain of the football team and is tied for second place quarterback in the league. He is also a candidate quarterback for the league all-star team.

Athletic director Clark Chatterton says Rich is the best quarterback CHS has had since 1965's Bobby Deveney.

Evans, in combination with Bob Meers, could set a record for receptions at CHS.

Football coach John Leone praised Rich for being very hardworking and coachable.

Rich is also a member of both the hockey and baseball teams.

Last year he was a big factor on the hockey team when they won the league title and advanced to the quarter-finals of the state tournament.

FOOTBALL

On Sunday the CHS football team traveled to Abington and thoroughly trounced the Green Wave, 28-19.

On the first possession sophomore Mark Lahive dove in from three yards out and with a Richie Evans' kick, the Skippers led 7-0.

On the next possession Lee Wilson scored on a one-yard plunge.

On the ensuing extra point attempt, sophomore quarterback Troy Chatterton rolled out and connected with Tom O'Brien for two points. The Skippers now led 15-0.

Abington came back and scored twice to make the score 15-13.

Later in the second quarter Rich Evans found Bob Meers in the end zone and put the Skippers ahead 21-13.

After the half-time festivities, Abington pulled within two points of Cohasset. The Skipper defense held Abington off.

Meanwhile Lee Wilson added some insurance points scoring from two yards out with 53 seconds left.

Cohasset now led 28-19. Abington reached the Skippers six yard line but time ran out.

On Thanksgiving the Skippers play Duxbury and will be looking for another win.

BOYS SOCCER

The boys' varsity soccer team wrapped up their season with a record of 7-7-12.

Seniors Dan Bowen and Chris Mahoney had outstanding seasons along with AFS exchange student Jim Stallard.

Both Bowen and Stallard were elected to the league all-star team.

Players graduating this year are captain Dan Bowen, Rob Lowe, Chris Mahoney, Sean O'Connor and Jim Stallard.

Next year's team looks to be very promising because they have a lot of talented and enthusiastic players.

GIRLS SOCCER

The girls' varsity soccer team finished up its season with an overall record of 6-9-2.

The team which is basically made up of sophomores, had a lot of ups and downs this year.

The highlight of the season was when the girls tied league opponent Duxbury which was quite a feat considering Duxbury has remained undefeated and untied for the past three years and won the league title this year.

Four of the team's members were elected to the league all-star team. They were sophomores Amy Duncombe, Janet DiGirolamo, Sarah Seavey and Tracy Keating. Keating also won the Booster's Club spirit award.

The team loses four seniors this year. Tri-captain Tara Pompeo, halfback Krissie Ralff and fullbacks Maureen Kelley and Katie Clinton.

Coach Fallon is looking forward to next year's season. The team is young and well skilled and should do very well in the future.

Returning next year are juniors Ginger Ralff, Kim Wittet, Penny Wright and sophomores Amy Duncombe, Janet Digirolamo, Carla Lucas, Sarah Muir, Jill Nedrow, Kristen O'Brien, Kerry O'Brien, Krissy Pompeo, Tracy Fitzpatrick, Tracy Keating, Tara Sandford, Beth Riley and Caroline Lord.

UNIFORMS

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton is more than willing to accept any blue and white CHS uniforms that have not been returned over the past several years.

Each lost uniform has to be replaced with a new one so if you have any floating around the house please make an effort to return them.

FIELD HOCKEY

The varsity field hockey team finished their season with a record of 7-9.

Tri-captain Gia Barresi said the team did better than they expected to.

The team's leading scorers were Barresi, Mia Graham and Joy Pratt, all seniors.

Anne Marie Lagrotteria was awarded the spirit award by the Booster's Club.

Two of the team's members were elected to the league all-star team. They were seniors Gia Barresi and Elizabeth Glasfeld.

The team loses nine seniors this year. They are captains Gia Barresi, Anne Marie Lagrotteria and Justine Hoffman. Also leaving are Jill Grant, Mia Graham, Anne Koehrer, Joy Pratt and Emily and Elizabeth Glasfeld.

Returning next year will be juniors Nancy Walls, Debby Soltesz, Richelle Sargent, Jenny Mitman, Tammy Karcher, Margaret Kearney, Jennifer Hanlon, Nancy Donahue, Kathy Corbett, Susan Ciciotte, Janie Carlson, Jeannie Bailey and Julie Atkinson.

When the timer rings and the turkey is a golden brown, fall on your knees and give thanks for that trusty old oven. The first Thanksgiving meal was cooked over an open fire on the hearth and the fireplace was a pretty primitive affair made of stones cleared from the fields, pasted together with mud. Preparing a meal in a large iron kettle was dangerous business. This was their only cooking utensil and it had three-foot legs enabling it to stand over the flames or embers. The tremendous kettle often weighed 40 pounds and was suspended by a hook from a lugpole made of green wood so it wouldn't catch on fire too easily, but, sometimes, charred and weakened by the flames, it would suddenly give way, dumping the meal into the flames. The poor cook was often burned and sometimes an ember or two would pop up into the soup, or an entire meal could go up in flames caused by grease dripping from the spit. We can all give thanks to one of our readers who forgot to sign her name when she sent me this recipe called

THANKSGIVING CRANBERRY BREAD

1/4 c. butter
2/3 to 1 c. honey
2 eggs
1 c. orange juice
2 c. whole wheat flour
1/2 c. milk powder (1/3 c. instant)
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
1 c. chopped nuts
2 c. fresh. whole cranberries

Cream butter and honey, Beat in eggs and orange juice. In a separate bowl stir together all of the dry ingredients (not the cranberries). Add them gradually to the liquid mixture. Fold in the cranberries. Turn batter into an oiled, floured loaf pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 to 1¼ hrs.

When Mary Troy co-hosted the Seaside Gardener's last meeting at Nancy Frazee's handsome, antique farmhouse, everyone asked for the recipe for the dessert she served with coffee and cider. Gail Anderson, having served it at home many times, said it was quick and easy, for everyone always has a can of fruit cocktail on hand, one of the ingredients. Which made everyone gasp, for we'd all been trying to guess what was in the delicious, fattening dish we were enjoying. Not quite sure of the details, Gail suggested looking in the North River Arts cookbook when everybody asked for the recipe. Guess what it's called!

FRUIT COCKTAIL CAKE

1 c. sugar
1½ c. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda
1 egg, beaten
1 #303 can fruit cocktail

Mix dry ingredients. Add fruit cocktail and egg. Pour into greased and floured 13x9x2" pan. Sprinkle over top 1/2 to 3/4 c. brown sugar and 1/2 c. pecans. Bake in 350 oven for 45 min.

Like so many of you, once I pick up a recipe book, I'm hooked and so I went on to read the chapter on "Decorating with Flair" in the North River Arts book. For Thanksgiving they suggest centerpieces of an antique wooden cranberry scoop laden with berries; deep red candles in wooden candlesticks and fall leaves. Brilliant orange bittersweet, dried grasses, seed pods, gourds and pumpkins are perfect for decorating a table using a brighly colored patchwork quilt as a table covering. If you happen to be serving a morning coffee as North River Arts does before each monthly meeting, what could be better than their

HARVEST LOAF CAKE

3½ c. flour
2 tsp. baking soda
2 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. ginger
1/2 tsp. ground cloves
1 c. margarine
2 c. sugar
4 eggs
1½ c. pumpkin (pureed)
1½ c. chocolate bits
1½ c. nuts

Grease two loaf pans. Cream margarine and sugar. Add eggs and blend well. Add dry ingredients alternately with pumpkin. Stir in chips and 1 c. nuts. Sprinkle remaining nuts over top. Bake 65 to 75 min. in 350 oven. Drizzle with glaze.

ANNOUNCING
An Exciting New Place
To Live in Hingham...
The MEADOWS
FURNISHED MODELS
NOW OPEN!
You'll love living at The Meadows, a superb new community of attached single family homes now being built by The Green Company in Hingham. Expert construction crews have completed the first group of two and three bedroom homes, and the exciting furnished models are now ready for your visit.
Our pride in the design and construction of The Meadows is well justified as you'll see when you visit. There's a wonderful spaciousness to the homes . . . an exceptional flow between rooms achieved through the use of large foyer areas, vaulted ceilings, expansive glass with views to the out-of-doors, and rooms opening into each other yet subtly separated by custom dividers.
There are many gracious details: tray ceilings; large country kitchens with sunny breakfast bays—even one designed as a greenhouse; walk-in bay windows; and exceptional master suites, some including secluded fireplaced sitting rooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights.
The combination of location, space and amenities make these homes an exceptional value at $153,000 to $210,000. We suggest a visit soon for early selection. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, keep left to our entrance, or call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.
Developed, marketed and managed with pride by Green Hingham, Inc. (An important part of the Green Company family.)

Mariner

In tribute to those who died in Vietnam

By Patricia Anne Walsh

A Catholic friend suggested that the November 14 service at the First Parish Unitarian Church honoring the eight Cohasset boys who died in the Vietnam conflict should be covered by the Mariner. We called Reverend Edward Atkinson in advance and are glad we listened to her advice because it was a profound experience.

Reverend Atkinson said that he was offering the service in recognition of the memorial wall erected and dedicated for Veterans Day in Washington, D.C., for those veterans who lost their lives in the Vietnam conflict.

The names from the Cohasset Memorial plaque at the harbor were listed on the order of worship: Alan F. Keating, Peter J. Albiani, Jr., Peter Cogill, William C. Laidlaw, John P. Lyon, Richard E. Maree, Dennis J. Reardon and Craig M. Simeone.

Recalling that Vietnam was a controversial war, and that the controversy had even burst out in front of the wall at the Washington dedication ceremonies, Atkinson told how the arguments were finally stilled when some veterans began singing "America The Beautiful." The congregation was urged to join him in singing that anthem.

After reciting the "Our Father," those assembled listened to the choir singing "The Lord is My Shepherd" accompanied, not by an organ, but by a piano tinkling up and down over a range of octaves. The music evoked a feeling of peaceful somberness.

Atkinson said that he had not invited the families of the veterans to the service because he did not want to intrude on their grief and privacy. Rather, this service was a remembrance of the results of war for the congregation.

He compared the new wall to the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem. Atkinson, who studied architecture at MIT, approved of the new Washington Memorial. "That wound in the earth" pointing to both the Washington Monument, erected in memory of an honorable man, and to the Lincoln Memorial, erected in memory of a man to whom liberty was important. He especially approved of its design by a Yale student because it allowed all the names of the dead to be inscribed on it, in contrast to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier where lie representatives from previous wars.

He noted that although over 50,000 were casualties in the Vietnam War, there had been almost 10 times as many casualties in the Civil War. The Responsive Reading was taken from Abraham Lincoln on the bulwark of liberty.

Atkinson had quietly consulted friends of the deceased and yearbooks in an effort to tell the congregation something about these young men in life. He said he realized when looking at the Cohasset Memorial plaque, that since he came here in 1969 he hadn't known these veterans. Three of them graduated from CHS with the Class of '66.

He then proceeded to tell of the football hero, who led his team to a 16-0 victory over undefeated Hull; of the youngster who always hung around Cohasset Common and the one who hung around the Beechwood Playground; of the quiet one, and the daredevil who walked the ridgepole of Tom Lucas' house high over town; of the helicopter pilot, of the three killed by land mines — all in such terms that those present captured a real picture of them.

Of one veteran he could not tell much — Peter J. Albiani, Jr., lived in Cohasset only a few months. The silence in the church held a holy tremor.

Village & Harbor Association seeks new members

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association is soliciting new members for 1982-1983. New businesses and professionals are invited to join.

The Association is responsible for welcoming new merchants and businesses to the area.

They have had several successful promotions, such as the "Christmas Stroll" which was organized last December. There were hayrides through the Village area, a visit from Santa and from Toni the Tiger.

The Association coordinated and purchased the white lights that decorated some of the trees at each end of town.

The Merchants Association has been responsible for planting trees on the sidewalks throughout the Village. They also revived and promoted the Miss Cohasset Contest and block dance held last August.

The Association is a small, but active group and seeks an increase in their membership in order to continue their work in the business community.

Membership applicants should contact Ellen McAuliffe Morrissey, 3 South Main Street.

Great American Smokeout planned for Nov. 18

Smokers can take a breather on Nov. 18 when the American Cancer Society will celebrate its sixth annual Great American Smokeout. The nationwide event will give smokers the opportunity to quit — if only for 24 hours — with a little help from their friends.

Because many smokers will choose to quit for good on the day of the Great American Smokeout, American Cancer Society volunteers are planning Smokers' Liberation stop smoking workshops in communities around the state. For those who need a little encouragement and moral support in their efforts to kick the habit, the Smokers' Quitline is in operation Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. The toll-free number in Massachusetts is 1-800-952-7444.

TOWN OF COHASSET
Warrant For Special Town Meeting
Monday, November 29, 1982, 7:30 p.m.

Advisory Committee Recommendations to be made from the floor of Town Meeting.

ARTICLE 1. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Henry W. Ainslie, Jr., Chairman, at the request of Brian Wilkin, Chairman of the Board of Assessors.)

To see if the Town will raise and appropriate by taxation or transfer from available funds a sum of money for the revaluation of all commercial, industrial and certain personal property in the Town of Cohasset to full value and for completing residential and land revaluations as required by the State Department of Revenue, or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 2. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Henry W. Ainslie, Jr., Chairman, at the request of Brian Wilkin, Chairman of the Board of Assessors.)

To see if the Town will raise and appropriate by taxation or transfer from available funds a sum of money to revalue real estate and certain personal property in the Town of Cohasset to full value as required by the State Department of Revenue, or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 3. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Henry R. Ainslie, Jr., Chairman and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to rescind the action taken at the Special Town Meeting held on Monday, the thirtieth day of August 1982 wherein Article 3, Section2(a) of the present Town By-Laws was amended to increase the number of the Board of Selectmen from three to five, so that Article 3, Section 2(a) of the By-Laws shall read as follows: (a) The Board of Selectmen shall consist of three members, one elected each year for a three-year term. They shall hold no other elective Town office and shall receive compensation as fixed by the Town Meeting, or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 4. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Henry W. Ainslie, Jr., Chairman, citizens petition.)

To see if the Town will vote to authorize and direct the Selectmen and/or the Board of Sewer Commissioners to renegotiate the terms and conditions of a certain Stipulated Judgment dated February 13, 1980 and entered in Suffolk Superior Court on March 6, 1980 by and between the Division of Water Pollution Control of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Town of Cohasset, or in the alternative to commence administrative or other legal actions to set aside or modify the provisions of said Judgment so that the Town by and through its Board of Sewer Commissioners shall be permitted to engage engineers and consultants to prepare and submit a supplemental or alternative proposed facilities plan which plan shall analyze the feasibility of the following:

(a) the expansion, reconstruction or improvement of the existing sewerage treatment plant so that said plant will comply with the effluent requirements of its present discharge permit;

(b) the construction of small waste water systems;

(c) the construction and replacement of privately owned systems; and

(d) the development of cost effective alternative solutions to the Town's waste water disposal problems.

Further that the Town by and through its Board of Sewer Commissioners be authorized and directed to select and contract with engineers and consultants for the purpose of preparing the supplemental or alternative facilities plans and that the Town file any and all applications with the MDWPC necessary for grant assistance.

Further to see if the Town will vote to appropriate from surplus revenue a sum of money to pay the costs of said supplemental or alternative proposed facilities plan.

Further to see if the Town will vote to suspend, delay or terminate, if necessary, any contracts for the preparation of working plans and specifications for the construction of a sewer "Facilities Plan for Waste Water Management dated May 31, 1979" as the same may be modified or supplemented; or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 5. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen at the request of the Personnel Committee, Clifford Mitman, Jr., Chairman and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to amend Article XI Personnel Classification and Compensation Plan, Section 1. General Provisions, (b) by adding after (iii) those covered by collective bargaining agreements the following clause; (iv) Fire Chief and Chief of Police and Executive Secretary covered by individual contracts. So Section 1 (b) will read as follows:

(b) The provisions of this article shall apply to all positions in the Town except as follows:

(i) Those filled by general election;

(ii) Those under the control of the School Committee;

(iii) Those covered by collective bargaining agreements and

(iv) Fire Chief and Chief of Police and Executive Secretary covered by individual contracts.

ARTICLE 6. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen at the request of the Personnel Committee, Clifford Mitman, Jr., Chairman.)

To see if the Town will vote to change the pay rate of the Administrative Secretary to the Planning Board, listed under schedule 5 of the Personnel Committee Classification By-Laws, (part-time positions), from $4.12 per hour to $5.28 per hour or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 7. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen at the request of Barbara A. Kern, Chairwoman of the Board of Health.)

To see if the Town will vote to raise and appropriate the sum of $14,000 to repair or replace the under carriage of the Caterpillar 955 shoveldozer, and for repairs to loader arms and tilt cylinders, other repairs if necessary, rental of machine required at landfill for use while Town machine is being repaired, or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 8. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Henry W. Ainslie, Jr., Chairman and others.)

To see if the Town will raise and appropriate by taxation or transfer from available funds, a sum of money to purchase or lease a computer and all necessary periphals and the software required to implement a central computer system, or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 9. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Henry W. Ainslie, Jr., Chairman and others.)

To see if the Town will raise and appropriate by taxation a sum of money to be added to the Stabilization Fund, or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 10. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Henry W. Ainslie, Jr., Chairman and others.)

To see if the Town will accept a collective bargaining agreement by and between the Town of Cohasset and the Cohasset Police Association and to see what sum of money the Town will raise and appropriate to effectuate said agreement, or act on anything relating thereto.

'Saving Energy' contest for students

"Saving Energy In a Student's World" is the theme of a contest sponsored by the Mass. Association of School Committees (MASC) in cooperation with all the electric utility companies of the Commonwealth.

The purpose of the contest is to encourage students to become energy-conscious consumers at school, at home, and at play.

The statewide contest marks the first time that all the electric utilities in Massachusetts have cooperated in such a venture. Each utility will award cash prizes to winners within its district and will use winning entries in a variety of ways.

Each student may submit either a poster or a concept that could become a poster. Artistic ability is not a criteria. The contest is open to all public elementary, middle and high school students. Deadline for the contest is Jan. 5, 1983 and winners will be announced early in February. Contest rules have been sent to school districts throughout Massachusetts.

CHS music instructor Marks preps the kids for 'Grease'

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Cohasset High School music instructor Bryan Marks has a knack for getting people involved in music activities. Often they are youngsters who show no special talents or interests; they are perceived as "drifting" through school and through life.

In the upcoming production of "Grease" Marks has involved 58 youngsters in the cast, 35 backstage and many faculty and parents as volunteers.

He will showcase their unrealized talents in the original stage play version of "Grease," rather than the movie version which starred John Travolta.

Performances will be December 3, 10 and 11 at 8 p.m. in the CHS auditorium. Posters will advertise advance ticket sales.

CHS faculty members performing major tasks are Ron Emmons, blocking scenes and coaching dialogue; Andrea Palardi, choreography; Jeff Dodge, pit band leader; Patricia Wunschel, costumes; Dr. John Packard, lighting and technical; Dorothy Wondolowski, makeup; Patrick Plante, carpentry; George Fortin and Donald Kelley, back stage direction; and Mary Brennock, props and program.

The story deals with the relationship of Danny and Sandy (the new girl in town) which, despite differences in their backgrounds, begins during a summer vacation. Sandy has to learn to be more of a "Pink Lady." Bryan said he was giving us a big tip that would become the talk of the town after the performance. "Watch for the song, 'There Are Worse Things I Could Do,' " he advised.

He is proud that this is an all-school musical including students from Grades 7-12. Cast as the 17 named characters are: Danny, Linton Young; Sandy, Diane Mullen; Rizzo, Lilly Carbone; Frenchy, Maureen Buckley; Marty, Mia Graham; Jan, Nancy Donahue; Kenickie, Tom Jones and Roger, Andrew Long.

Also Doody, Skip Urmson; Sonny, John Ryan; Cha-Cha, Shawna McCarthy; Eugene, Kurt Hochkeppel; Miss Lynch, Samantha Barrett; Vince Fontaine, Paul Johnson; TeenAngel, Jackie Fahey; Jeanne Casino, Sarah Muir and Patty, Jillian Ayer.

Bryan Marks lives in Scituate. For those ladies who admire his engaging smile, we warn you that he has been engaged for the past six months and plans to be married in June. Marks graduated from Eastern Nazarene with a B.S. in Music Education, and he has had additional courses in music.

He plays the guitar and piano, but he says his voice is his "main instrument." He sings with and directs the Brockton Harmoneers, a group of 45 men who specialize in Barbershop Chorus, and who have given performances over the past several years at the CHS Spring Concert, where he directs the high school junior and senior choruses.

The Harmoneers do a lot of charity performances for the blind, churches, veterans and nursing homes, as well as paid functions, such as the Boston Masons' installation banquets. Marks was formerly choir director at the Mayflower Congregational Church in Kingston.

NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Cecilia F. Logan also known as Cecelia F. Logan late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the 15th. to 24th. accounts of The First National Bank of Boston as Trustee (the fiduciary) under the will of said deceased for the benefit of Edward L. Logan et al have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the twenty-second day of December, 1982, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

Voila — a Sunday night supper guaranteed to 'gain'

Another week and we'll be up to our elbows in holiday menus, brown sugar, peeled vegetables and stuffing.

And it's thrilling, those Thanksgiving dinners or those clever canapes with which we try to outshine all hors d'oeuvres within memory.

But to tell you the truth some of my favorite foods are based on the most humble ingredients.

In fact I really miss my Sunday night supper. You remember those, you were supposed to make them yourself. You weren't to polish off the rest of the chicken or roast beef that could go for the full family Monday night.

PATCHES

Sunday night suppers called for imagination on the part of the cook. And they allowed creative genius, based on the humblest of favorites.

Blushin' Bunny. That was one of my favorites. It's of course the tomato soup variation of Welsh rarebit. I liked that too. But they, the gourmets, started fooling around with that recipe until they made it a James Beard/Julia Child innovation.

The chefs of the world haven't caught on to Blushin' Bunny. So that's still one of my Sunday night supper secrets. I'm sure there's a specified formula to making it. But I just open the old can of tomato soup, toss in tons of sharp cheddar cheese, an egg or two (not when it's hot enough to make an egg drop mess) and maybe a little milk or whatever. It didn't matter. Your original creations aren't subject to hard and fast rules. Sunday night suppers are loose, open to adaptation, your privy.

Anyway once all that cheese was melted with enough salt and pepper and whatever to titillate the mixture, I'd dump lots of it on crisp crackers. A little butter on top doesn't hurt. But then that's the way I feel about butter on pie or on a banana or a handful of raisins. Bread was only created because it's less messy than eating the butter right off your fingers.

Back to the Blushin' Bunny...top of the line. And you could eat the whole thing yourself. It is, after all, your Sunday night supper.

Waffles used to be big stuff that night. I got hung up on putting crushed pineapple in mine. Loved it.

There is always that danger that you overdosed on popcorn if there'd been a Tracy/Hepburn movie on. But that's the delightful risk of a late fall Sunday afternoon.

My father, Henry Perkins, had this thing for crackers and milk. I considered it his problem. I never understood. He'd sit at the kitchen table with that box of the big fat crackers whose name I've forgotten. And bowl after bowl, he'd indulge in his Sunday night supper. Now and then he'd add a bit of that awful stripped salt cod that he bought or he'd open a can of sardines. I found all of it forgiveable because he was, after all, my father. But his Sunday night suppers were foreign to my palate.

And I refuse to dignify creations like 'Bed Bug Hash,' a panfried pottage of leftover boiled dinner or worse, an awful concoction featuring that salt cod again, with pork strips and potatoes.

I shall, however, share here in this nestled spot, my all time favorite food, meal, recipe. Lord, how I love it.

In years past I could have pointed to five pounds worth of that Sunday night supper indulgence on my left hip alone. So uncontrolled am I around a full pot of this concoction that I dare not make it more than every five years or so...Fortunarely I'm about due a good batch.

Here it is. I shall view with distress any sour facial expressions or "YUKs" as this is imparted. I've not confided this favorite before.

First, overcook a lot of macaroni. Remember this is my Sunday night recipe so I get to say how it's done. Drain it and rinse it, regardless of what chefs say. Then dump in a big fat can of whole tomatoes (even as I impart this to you I can barely wait for Sunday).

Next crumble altogether fresh saltines in it, use a whole little wax paper packet. Make sure they have lots of salt on 'em. (I never said this was endorsed by the AMA.)

Then, oh boy, then, dump in at least a quarter pound of butter, keep swishing all this around till it's melted and you simply can't restrain yourself anymore. Lots of salt, only a little pepper (can't stand much of that in spite of my grandfather having said, "Any damn fool knows enough to put pepper on eggs).

Voila! You've got yourself the best Sunday night supper created. Put it in a vegetable size serving dish right off the top. Cause you'll never be able to limit yourself to delicate cereal bowl portions.

Sit yourself down next to that poor soul who's still covering crackers with milk if you want to. But you won't be excited about sharing.

You'll head into Monday seven pounds heavier, vowing you'll never touch that stuff again and making a mental note to shoot in a dight of cheese next time.

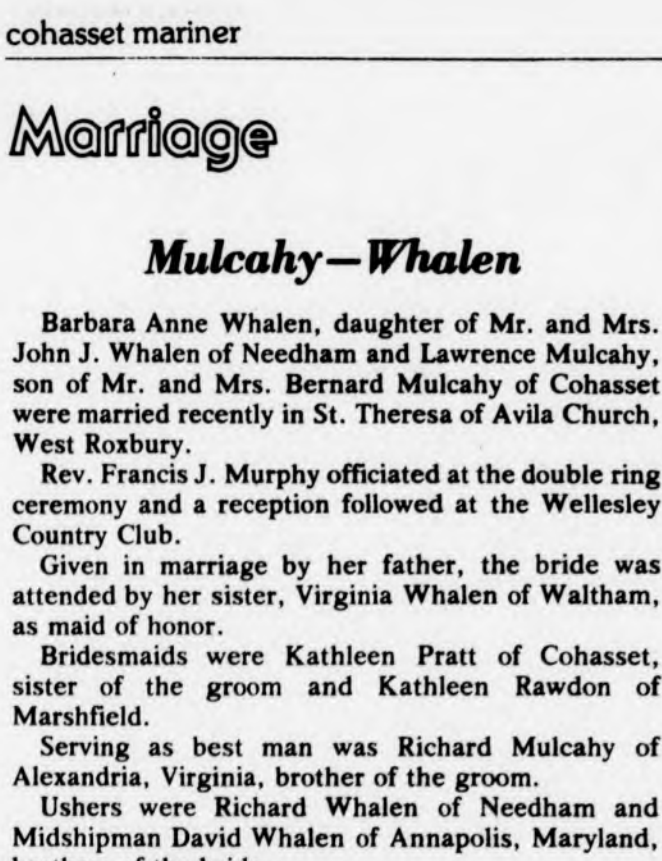
Marriage

Mulcahy—Whalen

Barbara Anne Whalen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Whalen of Needham and Lawrence Mulcahy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Mulcahy of Cohasset were married recently in St. Theresa of Avila Church, West Roxbury.

Rev. Francis J. Murphy officiated at the double ring ceremony and a reception followed at the Wellesley Country Club.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Virginia Whalen of Waltham, as maid of honor.



Bridesmaids were Kathleen Pratt of Cohasset, sister of the groom and Kathleen Rawdon of Marshfield.

Serving as best man was Richard Mulcahy of Alexandria, Virginia, brother of the groom.

Ushers were Richard Whalen of Needham and Midshipman David Whalen of Annapolis, Maryland, brothers of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Elizabeth Seton High School, Wellesley and Stonehill College, North Easton. The groom is a graduate of Cohasset High School and the University of Notre Dame. He is employed by the U.S. Customs Service.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will be living in Windsor, Connecticut.

'Scenes From American Life'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club departed from traditional theatre to contemporary experimental fare last weekend with their presentation of "Scenes from American Life."

The club excelled in its production of this difficult play.

In our own departure from traditional theatre coverage, we offer two reviews of the play.

Two reviews: It produced an unnerving effect...

By Jane Lane

An interesting, provocative play was presented this past weekend by the Cohasset Dramatic Club. And if "Scenes from American Life" left most audience members with questions, I think it produced its desired, unnerving effect.

The dramatic club must first be congratulated on such an innovation in community theatre.

Most faithful attenders of local theatre rarely expect such contemporary stuff of which "Scenes" is made.

This production attempted the jump from tried and true traditional theatre, to contemporary, experimental fare.

The playwright, A.R. Gurney Jr., recently had another of his works, "The Dining Room," produced in New York. "Scenes," which takes place in his hometown of Buffalo, N.Y. between 1930 and 1980, was written in 1970.

Secondly, the entire cast must be congratulated for their individual first-rate performances.

"Scenes" is not a play which focuses on in-depth character development and that is a difficult hurdle for actors to overcome.

Performances were top, which again is too often a scarcity among community theatre productions.

Perhaps the single and most important fault with the presentation would be the play itself. The selection of such a contemporary presentation of American life is to be praised. The idea behind the company's selection of this slice-of-life production was to have a play which represented a microcosm of our own society.

What better reason to have local theatre than to produce some mirror image from which we can more objectively view ourselves.

The play was interesting, innovative and entertaining, but was it informative, as it was meant to be?

I felt disappointed because the play failed to convey, in an entertaining manner, exactly what the author intended.

The lack of in-depth character and personality study has to be re-emphasized as symptoms of the problem.

In the first scene we are introduced to a family in Buffalo at their baby's Christening. The child is dubbed "Snoozer," after a drunken godmother unwittingly douses him with her champagne toast and the baby continues his peaceful sleep. Through the remainder of the play, we hear only one or two future references about "Snoozer" and we only see him in the last scene.

The play is not a chronology of events, but more like a badly spliced, edited version of life in Buffalo. We meet characters in one short scene, and are briefly introduced to another family in the next scene, which bears no relation to the previous ensemble.

The dramatic club is to be praised for attempting such adventurous theatre. Simply put, it was not a great play. But it was not a failure.

The play made some interesting, however depressingly negative, comments about contemporary American life. And Gurney's predictions for the coming years don't appear very promising.

Throughout the play references to a city under siege by a Nazi-type government are scattered. Because this was written during the social revolution of the 1970's, I would venture that Gurney was masterminding a Big Brother takeover of the United States.

Machine guns, assasinations and cities surrounded by inpenetrable, electrical fences are images conjured by the playwright for the 1980's. It has yet to occur in this country, although our international neighbors in Poland might find this type of futuristic prediction too realistic.

Throughout the second act, we see images of a dying society. Families with their immoral monetary concerns "invest in machine guns and invest in the future," we are told. Buffalo, once a thriving Eastern port, is called "a dying city with dying trees and a dying Lake Erie."

Yet despite the depravity of life (Snoozer is assasinated), middle class values thrive. Debutantes are given "Going Out" bashes, tennis matches are held at the private club where Jews are openly blacklisted, and bombs are ignited on streets where couples discuss whether to have another child.

Another praiseworthy note must be struck for the pianist, Jim Lester, who expertly accompanied the players throughout the production. Whether sounding the effects of a computer terminal, or accompanying the cast in a song, his talents were an extra bonus to this presentation.

Scenery was scarce, yet serviceable, which was all that was necessary for this production. A stool here and there, and an elevated platform for featured cast members, was sparsely appropriate.

And lastly, director Ellen Kelly should be applauded for her efforts to tie this difficult production together. As stated before, the entire cast, including Joe Coyle, Bob Julian, Betty Miessner, Virginia Dowling, Audrey Abrams, Lisa Fichtner and young Matt Kuhn, put forth noble efforts in a play which demands much from its actors.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club should be lauded for bringing innovative theatre to the community.

...More questions than answers

By Laura Doherty

Was "Scenes From American Life" a mirror of society or merely the playwright's interpretation of it?

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's presentation of A.R. Gurney's play this past weekend brought out many questions and almost as many answers. To say that it was thought-provoking would only partially convey its effect.

"It's Cohasset — Gurney must have been around taking notes to get it all so perfectly," said one member of the audience during the play's intermission. "I know some of those people, I'm sure," he said.

Many agreed that the play was different from prior club endeavors. "I don't like it," commented one patron who refused to say whether "it" was the subject matter of the performance.

Gurney's views on life among the upper middle classes in Buffalo, N.Y., from the early 1930's to the present provides the subject for the play. Whether one agrees with him or not should not affect the reaction to the play's performance by Dramatic Club members which was both sensitive and convincing.

From "Dancing School" to the "Ski Lift," "Baptism" to "Bedtime," there are nearly three dozen scenes in the play, which demanded a wide range of ability and talent. The performers met that demand. They "became" the characters they played.

Audrey Abrams "was" the pampered socialite whose love for her child was boudless as long as the infant's immediate needs were looked after by a nursemaid.

From the moment she appeared on stage, Denise Ripley "was" Lady Bountiful not only to her grandchildren but also to the downtrodden minorities to whom she wills her estate. If they have a place to learn tennis, croquet and other social graces, she reasons sweetly, "they'll stop with their fire bombs."

Of the many scenes played by Joe Coyle, the most compelling was in "Takeover" with Harry Heineman. The men represent two opposing personalities and create a powerful tension — drama at its best.

Responsibility is the underlying theme for many of the scenes. At her godson's "Baptism," Julia Jordan wishes him a sense of responsibility. However, the play shows there are many interpretations of that sense. In "Dictation," we feel Bob Julian's sense of frustration as he gives up his battle for the true sense of responsibility. Was it the system which caused his failure or is his failure the cause of the system? One asks this question frequently during the play .

Lisa Fichtner demonstrates her range of ability in several different scenes. In "Christmas (Hitchhikers)" she plays the free spirited daughter bailed out of jail by her father on Christmas Eve. Immediately following that scene in "Encounter," she plays the leader of an encounter group whose members are more than a bit reluctant.

A special favorite of audiences was the "Singing Lesson" in which Plly DiBona plays the elderly hopeful finally about to embark on her life's dream. We watch as she experiences her final defeat, a touching scene which DiBona carries off with just the right amount of pathos.

Two of the youngest members of the cast performed their parts convincingly — Matt Kuhn and Beth Perry. Matt aroused our sympathy as the young stutterer and as a very rebellious student at a dancing school. Beth was especially poignant in "Restaurant" as the young daughter trying to convince her mother that she really wanted to go to college rather than have a coming out party.

Scott Ketchum is a man of many talents as evidenced by his most effective set design and by his performance in "Haircut" as the talented artist who has decided to give up his dreams in return for a steady income.

The music by pianist Jim Lester helps set the tone for many of the scenes. His timing and choice of delivery provided an important transition and accompaniament.

As director, Ellen Kelly gives us Gurney's view and whether we agree with it or not, she does it with understanding and style. In a play such as this there is the danger of stereotyping. But with Kelly's directing and the cast's ability, this does not happen.

Without doubt, the presentation of "Scenes From American Life" should be added to the long list of credits for the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

Holiday shoppe makes decorating simple

The South Shore Art Center Holiday Shoppe Workshops provide free instruction for decoration making. One decoration per participant goes to the Holiday Shoppe whose sales support the Center's educational and exhibition programs.

Materials are available at a nominal fee or decorations may be brought from home.

Dried Materials Workshop will be given by Marion Bush on Friday, Nov. 19 from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. with many new ideas for the use of dried materials in wreaths or holiday and year-round arrangements.

Please call the Center office at 383-9548 to reserve a spot and for further information.

Coast Guard report

FRIDAY, NOV. 5

10:56 a.m., Coast Guard Station Scituate contacted the Marine Safety Office in Boston reporting tar from Edward Foster Road was running into Scituate Harbor from a new road surface due to the rain. CG Group Boston notified the Scituate Highway Department and graders and loaders were sent to clean up near the high water mark. CG Station Scituate's Officer of the Day, K. Caron, surveyed the area and determined there was no threat of pollution.

TUESDAY, NOV. 9

4:53 p.m., Received call from Mr. Warren Binley of Marshfield, reporting a lobster boat drifting 1/2 mile off shore, between 4th cliff and Beattle Rock with no lights on. CG 41503 was dispatched to investigate. The 41' searched the area with negative results. The lobster boat apparently left the area prior to their arrival.

Return to three selectmen okay, says T.C.

By Mike Berger

Town counsel will recommend to Monday's special town meeting that a citizen requested article sponsored by selectmen to re-establish a three-member board of selectmen is legal.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson and his associate John Slater III told the Mariner the article is legal because it was submitted before a new selectman was elected to the board.

In a related matter, the advisory committee will recommend support for the article to voters. Advisors supported the article by a 5-4 margin Monday. Majority and minority reports will be given by advisors.

Confusion enveloped the status of the article which calls for the repeal or a new by-law and the re-establishment of a three-member board.

At the August special town meeting, voters approved a change to the by-laws increasing the selectmen from three to five members.

The question put to counsel was whether the August vote can be repealed before the five-member board is put into effect.

Slater said another town meeting vote on the issue can be taken to reduce the board "until someone has taken office."

"It is a different situation when someone is elected. Town meeting could not reduce it to three immediately.

"We are basing our position that nothing has happened yet. No ballots were issued. There is no election schedule. Town meeting may rescind the vote if the voters want to."

Henderson also researched if the August article was legal. After conversations with the state Attorney General's staff, Henderson said, "There are some minor housekeeping details which have to be worked out. But the principal concept is legal.

"The A.G.'s office will not issue written opinions about the articles until a vote is taken at town meeting.

"There will be no public positions until there are certified by-laws," said Slater.

Monday night Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton cast the deciding vote as each member spoke on the issue.

Supporting Cotton were advisors Nelson Pratt, Paul Neelon, Jacqueline Dormitzer and Thomas Burke.

Opposed were Stephen Bartow, James Lagrotteria, Galt Grant and Osborne Ingram.

Cotton said she agreed with Neelon who wrote in a letter to the board that the issue should be decided at two town meetings and the article should not be

Police have suspects in school vandalism case

Police are searching for a group of town vandals who smashed 75 windows at Cohasset High School, the junior high wing, Deer Hill and Osgood Schools early Saturday morning.

School officials estimated the damage could reach as high as $5,000. A large crew of custodians worked overtime during the weekend, cleaning up broken glass and replacing window panes so schools could reopen Monday.

Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey said police have a few suspects in the case. "We believe at this time the vandalism was done by some in-town residents.

Police met with school authorities this week to coordinate investigation plans. The investigation is headed by Officer Robert Jackson. Also set for discussion were security measures for future extra-curricular school activities.

Police received a telephone call from a citizen, who reported "a banging noise" at the high school at 12:12 a.m. Saturday. Officer Robert Jackson was dispatched and reported a large number of windows broken.

Paul Emanuello, High School Head Custodian said 55 windows were smashed. Window after window was battered in at ground level at the rear of the high school, "apparently, with a piece of wood, which may have been torn from a bench on the playing field," according to one custodian.

The wood and blood found at the scene are being analyzed. Several windows were also broken in the Junior High wing, where many large expensive panes on the second floor west side were shattered.

Robert Barrow, head custodian at the Deer Hill School, reported six windows broken, and Henry Brennock, head custodian at Osgood School reported 14 panes damaged on the playground side, bringing the total to 75 smashed windows, all in the same evening.

No custodians were on duty at the high school after midnight on Friday night, according to school Superintendent Eugene Crowell. The Administration and School Committee abolished the third shift

New traffic lights

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray reported this week that the state DPW has awarded a $31,595 contract for the installation of new traffic lights at the corner of Sohier Street and Ripley Road.

The contract, calling for a pedestrian light, was awarded to D.P. Donnelly of Hull, and Rep. Murray reports that the work must be completed by June. She said she will work to see that the installation is finished even sooner.

So. Shore Plaza bus

The Christmas shopping bus to South Shore Plaza, Braintree, has been scheduled Monday, Dec. 6.

The bus will be at 60 Elm St. until 9:30 a.m. and will go to the Town Hall to pick up other passengers and leave by 9:45 a.m.

The Shuttle Bus will be available for pick up for those people unable to get transportation to either 60 Elm St. or the Town Hall.

Call the Cohasset Social Service League not later than Friday noon, Dec. 3 for reservations.

The shopping bus will leave Braintree at 1:30 p.m. and return to Town Hall by 2 p.m. The shuttle bus will be available for return to individuals' homes.

Fire Chief settlement near

Hull Atty. Larry Kellum, representing Hartford firefighter Martin Dooley, said he received a contract from selectmen and the Personnel Board Tuesday. However, Dooley has not heard the latest contract offer. Apparently the two parties are about $2,000 apart on a starting salary for the chief. Lt. Dooley is seeking a starting salary in the vicinity of $30,000. Selectmen were offering a salary in the range of $28,800. Selectmen met with the Personnel Board last week but a final salary offer was not released to the press. Acting Fire Chief and Capt. Roger Lincoln was the board's first choice but nine days after he accepted the position he changed his mind because of personal and family reasons. Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Chairman Henry Ainslie are reluctant to appoint Dooley chief without his signing a contract. The final signing could come Wednesday, Dec. 1. The starting salary is the last stumbling block as Dooley and selectmen have agreed to a three-year contract. Dooley would like to give the Hartford Fire Department between two weeks and a month's notice before coming to Cohasset.

Beechwood station sold

The Beechwood Fire Station was sold to Jean DuVoisin of Scituate for $250. Jean and his wife, Ayn, agreed to work toward placing the firehouse on the National Register of Historic Landmarks, to open it annually for the Historic Society to place on their tour of historic buildings, to restore the structure and to keep it in public view from the road. All site clean up including termination of services and septic systems and removal of the cement slap will be the responsibility of Cohasset. The DuVoisins must still receive approval from Scituate town officials. Selectmen closed the Beechwood station two years ago because of its poor condition and lack of space for a modern fire truck.

Street light change

Selectmen may decide to convert the town's street lights from white mercury fixtures to yellow sodium bulbs. An Eastern Edison representative said Cohasset could receive more light for the same amount of money over a five-year period. The first year's conversion would reduce the town's light bill by $2,764. The streets affected by the first year conversion would be Route 3A, Elm, Border, Margin, South Main, Brook, Summer and North Main Street, Ripley Road, Depot Court and Parking Way. Howard Matthew of Eastern Edison said the sodium fixtures provide 10 times as much light per watt of power, burn out less frequently, emit less glare and are more difficult for vandals to break.

Three selectmen...

approved in haste.

Cotton said there was no "real discussion" on the article and no concrete conclusion that five members is definitely better than three.

Bartow said the article for Monday's meeting was improperly submitted and should have had 100 signatures. It should not have been sponsored by selectmen with only one signature.

He added that more people attended the August meeting than ever before. "The voters made a decision and elected to go one way."

Lagrotteria, absent from the meeting, wrote to Cotton that he is opposed to the selectmen's article because five selectmen are better than three because of the increased management of the various town departments.

Neelon, also absent, wrote there should be considerable "forethought and study" and the vote should be taken at two town meetings.

"My vote is based on procedure. More is not necessarily better. It could be. But we don't know."

Grant said the issue is close and could be decided either way, "but the special town meeting was the largest turnout. I don't see changing a vote a second time."

Dormitzer said she would not normally support rescinding a special town meeting vote but changing a basic town structure needed a second examination. She said the article was approved at the August meeting in a "highly emotional" mood and was also related to the article calling for the local expansion of the fire chief's position.

Burke said there was not enough information and agreed with Dormitzer the August vote was highly emotional combined with "power politics and disenfranchised voters."

He said the issue should come before an annual town meeting and voiced his support for the opportunity to vote on the issue again.

Pratt said three selectmen were an adequate number because the town could not afford the additional salaries.

Health Board still collecting dump fees

The latest report from the Board of Health shows 50 businesses have failed to pay or seek an exemption from the board's new dump fees.

Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos said 100 firms were contacted, but only 50 have responded and nearly 35 firms have asked for an exemption of the $50 fee.

The $50 annual fee is a $40 increase. The new fee went into effect Nov. 1.

Eliopoulos said the list of business firms was given to the board by assessors. At this point the number of firms not responding isn't alarming, she said, because, "It could be they may have trash picked up somewhere else or picked up by another hauler."

"I think we will know more at the end of the month. The numbers now are trickling in," Eliopoulos said.

Those businesses who refuse to pay the fee will not be permitted to use the landfill.

Firms which dispose of their trash at the landfill by use of their own vehicles are subject to the fee. If the businesses use a commercial hauler to pick up the trash, they will be given an exemption.

Prior to the new fee, an owner needed only a $10 resident landfill sticker paid annually.

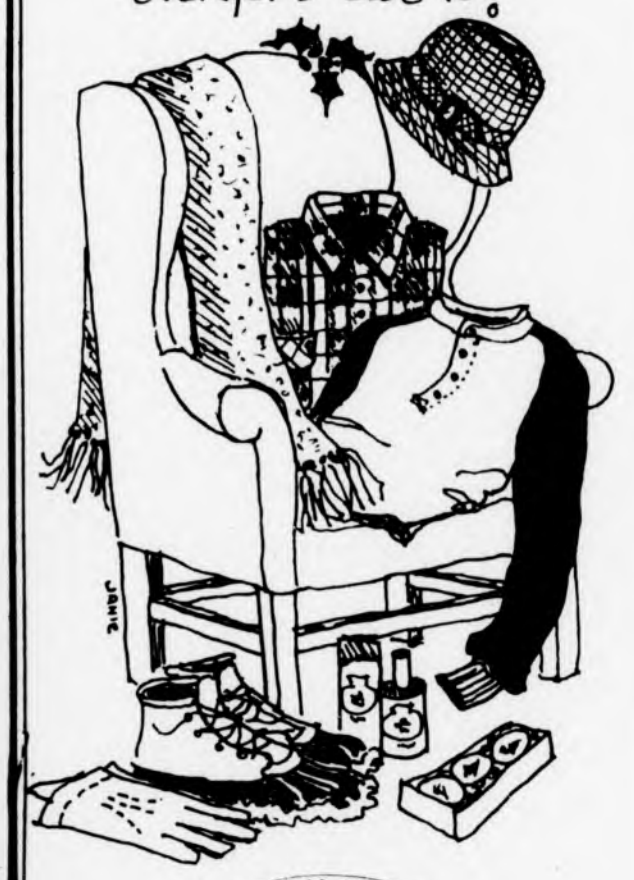
Commercial haulers will pay an annual fee of $5 per cubic yard based on the capacity of the vehicles and are charged $1 per yard for loose trash and $2 per yard for compacted trash.

For homeowners, the annual $10 beach and utility sticker is required.

The new fees will help the board recover money spent on the landfill. Recently the board took over the management of the landfill and is trying to pay for the necessary expenses.

The board's goal is to extend the life of the landfill by another 10 years and has prohibited the disposal of tires, newspapers, magazines, building and demolition waste from contractors, stumps, automobiles and parts, toxic and special wastes and large animals.

Sealund Corporation of Marshfield is expanding and capping the landfill and hopes to complete the work by the end of the year.



Eliopoulos said more residents are aware of the board's intentions and its emphasis on recycling. She said there are more newspapers in the recycling area than a few months ago.

School Supt. Crowell outlines the new budget

By Jane Lane

The fiscal restraints of Prop. 2½ will become more apparent in future years as personnel cuts are forced within the schools to satisfy the state mandate.

In an informal discussion with Parent School Organization representatives last week, Supt. Eugene Crowell explained that the school salary budget is expected to increase about $260,000.

That is more than the $79,043 increase allowed for the total 1984 school budget.

If negotiated salaries are to be funded next year, then about $130,000 to $150,000 may have to be slashed elsewhere in the school budget, he predicted.

"The truth is, the teachers may have to fund their raises over their own dead bodies," he said.

Supt. Crowell suggested in order to fund salary increases next year, some teaching positions may have to be eliminated.

But Supt. Crowell noted it was premature to talk about any wholesale $130,000 to $150,000 budget cuts until a school budget has been proposed for next year. The school budget for 1984 is in the process of being formulated by school administrators.

The school system will receive 53.8 percent of the total town budget in 1984. Under that percentage total, the schools can expect a increase of only $79,043 for fiscal 1984.

It is contingent upon the school committee to accept a budget for town meeting approval.

If the superintendent presents a budgeted $130,000 over the allowed limit, then the committee would have to establish priority items for recommendation to town meeting.

It would be up to the school committee members to argue for certain priorities — elimination of a program, requesting a budget transfer, free cash funds, or additional state aid revenues to fund the school budget overrun, Crowell said.

School committee chairman Diana Kornet said if she was armed with a "convincing argument, I would not hesitate to come before town meeting and ask for something people thought was a necessity. I would ask them to spend a little less in Trees and Parks or somewhere else in the town budget."

Supt. Crowell said during the past five years, the percentage allowed the school department from the town budget has decreased from 60.4 percent to the present 53.8 percent.

"This is going to get worse rather than better. The slippage will keep going as the percentage goes down," he said.

During the informal PSO budget discussion, a survey was reviewed in which PSO members "unscientifically" surveyed 165 parents on the three questions pertaining to public education in Cohasset.

Within that survey, 24 parents said they perceived the tenure system as restricting the goal of maintaining the most qualified teachers.

President of the Cohasset Teachers Association, Tom O'Neil, said, "Under budget constraints, there is a powerful temptation to take out the established, higher-salaried teachers. That's why tenure is so important."

Kornet argued because of the tenure guarantee with the contract, the schools are gradually eliminating new, yojng teachers and "in 15 years, there might not be any new teachers coming along. We will have lost the mix of a good, fresh approach, with experience. In about 15 years, new teachers will not have had the experience of mixing with more experienced teachers."

Supt. Crowell said the school committee makes the final decision to RIF (reduction in force) a teacher, based on the instructor's experience, academic background, and quality. But all things being equal, the senority factor will be the ultimate guide in determining who shall be riffed, he added.

In addition to possible teacher layoffs, the closing of the Osgood School would save about $150,000 to $170,000 in the budget. Some parents who attended the discussion, indicated they would be opposed to closing the K-3 facility.

Supt. Crowell explained that under Prop. 2½, the town has only a certain amount of money to appropriate.

Town funding for 1984 is based on 1983 appropriations. The only way to change that base is to override Prop. 2½, which Crowell explained, can be costly to a community in the long run.

"I think we're stuck (with Prop.2½). If we want more than 53 percent for the schools, we are going to have to take it from something else in the budget - or from surplus, free cash, which I'm told is almost exhausted. The town needs its Fire and Police departments, too, And we have a sewer problem and a dump problem," he added.

Speaking as a private citizen, Crowell said, "This is scary business. I don't know how we will have the money to fund something like this (sewer project). I am concerned for all the other needs — the dump problems and all other town departments. In my budget there is no money for major renovations. But last week I was up on the Deer Hill roof inspecting a blocked drain. It would cost $10,000 to $15,000 to repair that roof this summer. That would complicate the $150,000 shortage. It compounds the situation."

"Every citizen should think carefully before entering into this responsibility (sewer project)," he said.

Home Decorating Notes

by Art Lane

Plain rugs leave one free to put what is desired on the rug and still have a well-balanced, attractive room. A colorful or patterned rug itself often becomes the center of attention in a room. As a result, the rest of the room has to be planned around it. If you want a spectacular rug, there are many available types. Oriental rugs, for example, have brought elegance ento homes for years. Other special weaves and pattern include Aubusson and Savonnerie rugs from France and needlepoint rugs that come largely from England. Still others are tufted, eighteenth century style carpets, early American hooked rugs and Bessarabian, Chinese and Samarkand rugs.

For years Americans have lived with one color wall to wall carpeting throughout their homes. Now, thanks to modern technology there are now more dramatic treatments than one color through the house. With a selection of 350-400 wallpaper books we at BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE can show you some new decorating ideas. We can even show you how well different colors will work together. You will find us at 763 Country Way in N.Scituate where we are open Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5 or phone 545-3624. We're the people to talk to! We also wish you all a Happy Thanksgiving.

Decorating Tip:
If you have many small rugs, be sure that your floor is in good shape and well polished where it is exposed.

☐It's a shame that Anita Bernstein can't be a jockey on one of her husband's race horses. After the start she got outside of the Pharmacy this week, the other horses would still be at the gate when she crossed the finish line!

☐Congratulations to Richard and Maureen (Moore) Goldstein of 37 Stockbridge Street on the birth of their daughter, born November 10 at South Shore Hospital.

☐The Gridiron Club held their annual dinner-dance at the Cohasset Country Club last weekend. Everyone who attended had a wonderful time dining and dancing. Lee Wilson did a great job organizing it, and Bob Walls was as humorous as ever at the mike (he was in charge of the raffle).

Super prizes were donated for the drawings; among the winners were three football coaches, the high school principal and the A.D. Hmmm...

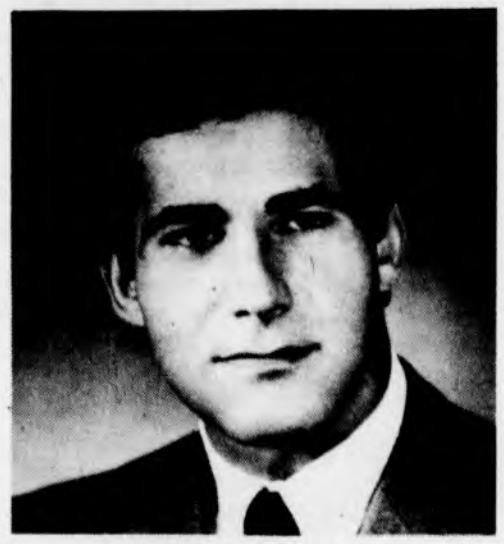
☐A happy belated birthday to Tom Wigmore, who turned 19 last Monday. Tom suggested a thoughtful present might be to return his name plate, "borrowed" off of his desk last week. If that's not possible, a new one would be nice.

☐I thought I'd share this little quip I read recently. I can't remember the source, but thought it appropriate for the holidays approaching..."No food tastes as good as the food you eat when you're cheating on a diet."

☐I hope that Janet Ditmar is feeling better as she reads this...Janet was in an automobile accident last weekend, and is said to be improving rapidly. Get well fast, Jan!

☐The relatives of Gert McArthur asked that I tell you of the yard sale they are holding this weekend and I do so sadly. Gert and Jim were wonderful people and are greatly missed around this neighborhood (and town). In any case, most of the contents of their house will be on sale so re-read Tanna's article and go for those bargains.

☐It is so nice to see that Jessie Cox's children have her generous nature. They arranged for the Cohasset Historical Society to receive a lot of old pictures and ship models for the Maritime Museum, and they also donated numerous items to the Village Fair (they were sold last week at St. Anthony's Church). The town is once again thankful to the Cox family.



☐The powder puff game was held this weekend. The weather was beautiful (as were the cheerleaders). The Seniors won (that seems to be somewhat of a tradition lately). A crowd was lined up and down the hill. And, both teams did an excellent job (they also did a nice job decorating their cars for the parades through the village). Next year's seniors beware...the junior class coming up is said to be "loaded with jocks."

☐The latest news on the tribute to Gerard Keating is the Master of Ceremonies. Ken Coleman has been chosen. He has big footsteps to follow, as Gerard has always been the "Master" of sorts at most other town testimonials, roasts, etc.

Ken Coleman will do a super job, what with his knowledge of the Keating family, his fondness for Cohasset and his great sportscasting voice...the committee feels fortunate to have him leading their efforts. There are very few tickets remaining; hope yours has been obtained.

☐November 29 is circled on everyone's calendar by now, I'm sure. Be sure to remember the time, 7:30. Don't miss the special town meeting or your opportunity to vote - any article could go either way with one vote, make it yours!

☐A thank you from the Recreation Department to the many coaches who volunteered their time coaching the soccer teams this year. There were over 300 players in grades K-9 that took advantage of the program, which ends Nov. 20.

NORMAN BERMAN

☐Norman Berman of 66 Brewster Road has announced the formation of a new law firm specializing in franchising, business litigation, corporate and antitrust law.

The firm, Berman, Devalerio and Pease, recently opened its offices at Ten Post Office Square in Boston.

Berman received his undergraduate degree in Government from Boston University in 1970 and his law degree from Suffolk University Law School in 1974.

Berman's personal specialties are antitrust and franchising. Berman has also practiced extensively in the domestic relations field.

Berman, a member of the Massachusetts and American Bar Associations and the Massachusetts Academy of Trial Attorneys, is active in continuing legal education programs. He has participated in the Program of Instruction for Lawyers at Harvard Law School and the American Bar Association Pilot Program in lawyering and counselling.

He has also worked for passage of new state legislation designed to insure adequate advance disclosure to prospective franchisees and to protect franchisees from termination or non-renewal without good cause.

Berman and his wife, Ande Anderten, a psychotherapist with a practice in Boston, moved to Cohasset from Cambridge one and one-half years ago.

Notes & comment

...The Cohasset Parent School Organization has done something novel in the era of Proposition 2½. In its survey of parents it has forsaken the bawling and self-pity that represents the socially acceptable response to 2½ and has produced constructive, helpful and positive-minded document.

A couple of things about the results of the survey (see page 5) are interesting. One is that a clear majority of respondents (92 out of 165) want to see basic education stressed. Gone it would appear is parental support for some of the educational fads of the late decade of the seventies — the open classroom, alternative education, "relevance," and the like.

But nearly as many parents (76) expressed strong support for the arts in school. While desiring old-fashioned readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic, parents apparently agree with Joyce Kulhawick that "you gotta have arts." Support for the arts was, in fact, far stronger in the survey than that expressed for sports programs.

Another "finding" worth noting is that most parents seem pleased with the performance of their schools even in this age of 2½. That should please the powers that be — the school committee and the school administration. Here's hoping they take the survey in the constructive spirit of its makers. They should be complimented by the many compliments they received but they should take to heart the numerous suggestions for improvement respondents have made.

...It being Thanksgiving we thought it fit time to discuss the gypsy moth...you remember...the nasty little caterpillar that squishes underfoot in the late spring and makes vital activities such as mixed doubles so trying.

We just thought it worth helping you recall on the fine occasion of Turkey Day that six months or so ago we were all embroiled in a dispute about whether or not to aereate the town with the chemical insecticide Sevin. After much fussing and fuming, slipping and backsliding the selectmen voted NO to Sevin from heaven.

What brings this all to mind this Thanksgiving is that some turkeys in other towns did spray with Sevin...only to find that 1982 was the year when the inevitable natural cyclical collapse of the gypsy moth occurred in Eastern Massachusetts.

Those turkeys who did spray wasted their money, they risked (among other things) the finish on their automobiles, and their efforts had no effect on the gypsy moth. Our selectmen, it turns out, were left looking pretty smart by it all.

We just thought it was worth recalling. Happy Thanksgiving, everyone.

Police contract near

Voters may hear the results of a new police officer agreement which was to be voted by the Cohasset police association Wednesday. Selectmen and the Advisory Committee are confident the contract will be ratified. Advisory Chairman Jean Cotton estimated the contract could cost an additional $22,000 or $23,000 to the 1982-83 budget.

Coping with retirement

By Claire McDonough

Fauna hunched over a cup of coffee at Angelo's. Three empties stood in front of her, and her eyes had an unfocused look.

I sat beside her and patted her hand. "Don't you think you're overdoing the coffee lately?" I asked.

Fauna shrugged. "It's either that, or I overdose on Tab," she replied. "I certainly don't want to go home."

She finished her coffee in one swallow and motioned for a refill.

"But Fauna," I coaxed, "these were to be your golden years. You said that once Jim retired the two of you were going to do all the things you couldn't when he was working and the kids were at home. You were going to travel. You were going to learn Yoga. You were going to study a language. What happened to all your wonderful plans?"

"Jim who?" she asked icily. "Do you mean the unemployed efficiency expert who follows me around the house saying things like, 'If you had a dust cloth in each hand you could cut 27½ minutes off the time it takes you to do the downstairs.'?

"Do you mean the former office supervisor who writes me memos telling me that the salt shaker is empty and the refrigerator needs to be cleaned?

"If you do, you can forget it. I wouldn't go to a class or take a vacation with him if he gave green stamps."

"You can't mean that," I persisted. "Over the years we've all looked up to you and Jim. We thought of you as the ideal couple. You never argued like the rest of us. No matter how tough things got, you always came up smiling. You were never defeated by adversity."

"Adversity I can handle," Fauna agreed. "It's retirement I can't cope with. I took the guy for better or for worse. There was nothing in the contract about taking him for lunch."

"But you said you were going to use Jim's retirement to recapture the magic in your relationship. I thought you were going to go for the gusto."

"I thought so, too," Fauna snarled. "I didn't know every time I'd suggest he go for the gusto he'd get another beer. By the time I wanted magic, he was unconscious."

"Well," I sighed, "there must be something you two still have in common. Like reading. You were always both great readers."

Fauna thought for a minute. "Yeah," she sniffed, "but he makes fun of my Harlequin Romances."

"How about T.V.?"

"I cannot respect a man who considers "That's Incredible" an educational science program."

I threw up my hands. "I give up. There doesn't seem to be any basis for a continued relationship."

Fauna was silent for a minute, then a smile crept over her face.

"There really is, though. Maybe it's just that he hasn't been paying attention, but Jim gives me one thing I couldn't get from anyone else. He thinks I'm still a size ten."

Tolerating some low levels

Letter

To the Editor:

There is a well proven business axiom: "The quality of any operation will deteriorate to the lowest level which will be tolerated by those responsible for it."

The citizens of Cohasset have tolerated some pretty low levels in the past 20 years of more.

These levels have been made clearly visible, among other things by:

1. The unwillingness of Administrators to make definite decisions based on fact, willingness to be better and Common Sense and Judgement.

2. The mass exodus from Town Meetings, frequently at the expense of "questioned" or "winked at" Quorums, after special interest items are voted.

3. The fact that much of what happens in the Town's Administration is controlled by about five percent of the Town's voters.

The recent efforts of our late Police Chief to conduct portions of the Department's operations in a more efficient, less costly way came to naught.

The town's employment contracts are embedded with requirements to pay "unused sick leave." Protection from health calamity is reasonable, but to pay for sick leave that does not exist is false on the face of it.

The coming Town Meeting includes a controversial question of the composition of the Board of Selectmen. Whatever your conviction and vote may be let it be known that you demand a high level of performance.

Thomas Edison had a motto in his laboratory. "There is a better way to do it — find it."

Such an attitude should rest firmly, and heavily, upon the Town's administrators, employees and especially upon you the citizens.

New landfill rules

To the Editor:

At its regularly scheduled meeting of Nov. 22, the Board of Health unanimously voted to rescind regulations adopted on Sept. 27 and published on Sept. 29 in the Cohasset Mariner regarding landfills in the Town of Cohasset.

The Board of Health adopted the following regulations for the operation of privately owned landfills in the Town of Cohasset at their regularly scheduled meeting of Nov. 22.

REGULTIONS FOR THE OPERATION OF PRIVATELY OWNED SANITARY LANDFILLS IN COHASSET

The Board of Health of the Town of Cohasset, acting pursuant to the authority granted by M.G.L., Chapter III, section 31, hereby adopts the following "Regulations for the Operation of Privately Owned Sanitary Landfills in the Town of Cohasset," by unanimous vote at a regularly scheduled meeting of the Board of Health held on November 22, 1982:

Section 1. The regulations adopted herein shall apply to the operation and maintenance of all privately owned sanitary landfills located within the Town of Cohasset.

Section 2. The following words, cover, equipment, operator, person, refuse, sanitary landfill, special waste, and waste, when used in these regulations shall have the meanings ascribed to them in Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, (D.E.Q.E.), "Regulations for the Disposal of Solid Wastes by Sanitary Landfill," 310 CMR 19.01.

Section 3. Sanitary landfills shall be operated only between the hours of 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Section 4. Sanitary landfill operators shall file a return with the Board of Health subscribed under the penalties of perjury on or before the 20th day of each month. This form shall specify, among other matters, the amount and nature of wastes received. The form to be utilized will be supplied to operators by the Board of Health.

Section 5. Sanitary landfill operators shall make provision for the weighing of refuse delivered to the sanitary landfill on a continuous basis by the installation of a so-called digital read out scale. The type of such scale must be approved, in writing, by the Board of Health, prior to its installation. Such scale shall be installed under the supervision and direction of the Board of Health.

Section 6. Sanitary landfill operators shall hereafter make a simultaneous submission to the Board of Health of the identical documents which must be submitted to D.E.Q.E. pursuant to the provisions of 310 CMR 19.03. Any work specified in such documents shall not be commenced at a sanitary landfill site unless and until the plans and design data have been approved, in writing, by the Board of Health. No changes and/or alterations to such plans shall be made without prior written approval of the Board of Health.

Section 7. No operator of a sanitary landfill shall accept any special wastes at a sanitary landfill site without the prior written approval of the Board of Health.

Section 8. In the period between the effective date of these regulations and the installation of a scale in accordance with Section 4, sanitary landfill operators shall provide to the Board of Health the method of calculation used to weigh or measure the amount of refuse being delivered to the sanitary landfill site.

Section 9. Sanitary landfill operators shall maintain a daily log to record operational information, including the type and quality of refuse received, the equipment, personnel and cover used, the portion of the sanitary landfill used, and any deviations made from the approved plans and specifications. Such daily logs shall be maintained at the sanitary landfill site for at least 90 days and shall be made available for inspection at reasonable hours to the Board of Health or its duly authorized agent.

Section 10. Any person who fails to operate and maintain a sanitary landfill in accordance with any or all of the above regulations shall be punished by a fine of $200. pursuant to the provisions M.G.L. C.111, §31. Each day's failure to comply with any or all of the above regulations shall constitute a separate violation.

Section 11. If any section of these regulations, or any provision of such section, shall be held invalid for any reason, the remainder of that section and all other sections of these regulations shall not be affected thereby and shall continue in full force and effect.

A vote against the sewer article

(Here is a copy of a report by the Sewer Commission opposing Article 4 of Monday's special town meeting. Ed.)

Vote no on Article 4 otherwise:

1. The Town will have to pay the full costs of any alternatives recommended in Article 4.

2. The Town will be subject to immediate court action.

The state officials have informed the Sewer Commissioners that the funding of any alternatives to the proposed sewer facility will be borne entirely by the Town of Cohasset. The Town will lose its present position on the State priority list for both State and Federal funds, because the state considers any alternatives to the building of the proposed sewer facility to be neither environmentally sound nor cost effective.

The state's position on immediate court action stated in a letter dated November 12, 1982 on file at Selectmen's office, is as follows: "As a result of previous enforcement actions brought by this Division through the Attorney General's office, an Agreement for Judgment was consummated with the Town of Cohasset. Since that time Cohasset has fallen behind the implementation schedule and is thus technically in violation of said judgment. To date, however, no further legal action has been initiated since the Town has been proceeding in good faith.

"At the present time, this Division is actively processing the Step II planning advance for the design of Cohasset's pollution abatement facilities. Should actions be taken at the town level which would delay or defer the progress of either the Step II design or Step III construction of your project, this Office would again request immediate action by the Attorney General's Office for contempt of the Agreement for Judgment or other appropriate action."

To assist the voters in their assessment of the four alternatives in Article 4, the following information is presented:

Item a. The existing plant at Jacobs Meadow does not have enough capacity to treat the amount of wastewater that enters the plant. Periodically, the hydraulic capacity of the plant is exceeded. A major result of this is that excess BOD and suspended solids concentration in the effluent exceed the discharge permit limits. There are no provisions for handling sludge. There are no provisions for septage treatment and disposal. The present method of discharging effluent into James Brook is believed to be the cause of the high mortality rate of stored lobster. The plant is occasionally subject to salt water intrusion during extreme high tide.

The existing plant needs to be expanded to handle the present wastewater flow. Sludge treatment and septage treatment are needed. An alternative method of effluent disposal is also needed.

The James Brook Alternative in the facilities plan is the alternative utilizing the existing site. This alternative will require extensive flood protection, and may also require creation of compensatory storage volume during construction. A cost-effectiveness analysis was performed. The James Brook site was found to be the second most cost-effective site. The site placed third in the ranking analysis performed in the facilities plan when economic considerations are included. If the ranking analysis excludes economic considerations, the James Brook site is fifth out of the original six alternatives. The exclusion of the economic considerations in the ranking analysis is feasible because of the closeness of the alternative costs. This shows that the James Brook site is very low in ranking.

It is stated in the State's draft Environmental Assessment that the area projected for the James Brook site is not big enough to support the required expanded facility.

It should be stressed that there has been considerable public participation regarding site selection. The facilities plan relied heavily on public input in the selection of the new site. Neither the most cost effective nor the highest ranked alternative were chosen. Originally the Music Circus site was selected. Then the Jones site was selected based on public input. Therefore, the existing site was looked at and was considered not viable as an alternative as a recommended area.

Item b. As alternatives to expansion of the treatment plant, small wastewater treatment systems and regionalization with Hull were considered. The Hull regionalization alternative was more costly than treatment in the Town of Cohasset. For small wastewater treatment plants the discharge of the effluent was a main consideration. Discharge of the effluent to inland waterways was ruled out because the streams were too small and because the State would not allow the discharge into the streams. This is mentioned in the State's draft Environmental Assessment. Discharge by land application was ruled out because the soil conditions throughout the Town are not compatible to this type of application. The inability to discharge to inland waterways or to apply the effluent to land application would require an outfall for each site. This would add significantly to the cost. Community subsurface disposal systems were also looked at. The areas where these systems would be needed are fully developed and do not have adequate land for these systems. Also, as noted in the following section, the soils in the Phase 1 area will not support such systems.

Item c. The construction and replacement (upgrading) of privately owned on-lot disposal systems was also looked at. At present there are many problems with on-lot disposal systems in the Phase 1 area. The soil suitability in the Town and especially in Phase 1 is not conducive to on-lot disposal systems.

Using the US Soil Conservation Service data as a base, M & E stated in the facilities plan that there were three major types of soils in the Town of Cohasset. These major soil associations are the Hollis soil, Paxton-Woodbridge soils, and Ridgebury-Whitman-Muck soil. Hollis soils are associated with bedrock within 3' of ground. Paxton-Woodbridge soils are associated with a water table 1½-2' below ground in spring. Ridgebury-Whitman-Muck soils are associated with poor permeabilities such as hardpan. These soil associations would be classified in laymen's terms as bedpan, high groundwater and hardpan.

In Figure 3-2 of the facilities plan, Soil Limitation for On-lot Disposal, are shown the above soil associations. As shown in Figure 3-2, the only areas in Phase 1 which are not classified having the above classifications are the area around Ripley School and two small isolated spots. The soils in these areas are all unclassified soils. Therefore the soils in the Phase 1 area are generally inadequate for on-lot disposal systems.

The major problem areas have been designated as Hillside Area, Veterans Area, Sohier St., and Route 3A Business Area. These four areas are in Phase 1. They have been found, based on the facilities plan and previous reports, to have a high number of problems. These problems are shown in Figure 3-4, Reported On-lot System Failures. Other problems are listed in Appendix C of the Facilities Plan. The lots in the Phase 1 area are generally small in size and dense in development.

Because of the previously mentioned soil conditions (bedrock, high groundwater and hardpan), the relatively high number of problems being experienced in the Phase 1 area; and the small lot sizes; upgrading on-lot disposal systems is not considered to be a long term viable alternative. In the cost comparison for the installation or upgrading of a spetic tank and leaching field vs. a septic tank and mound system vs. holding tanks, it was found that the septic tank and leaching field alternative was the most cost effective. When compared to sewers, either with or without funding, it was found that the upgrading of existing on-lot disposal systems (septic tank and leaching field) was most cost effective. However, the installation of sewers was more cost effective than a septic tank and mound system or a holding tank. Therefore, where upgrading existing on-lot disposal system using the septic tank and leaching field alternative was not viable it is more cost effective to install sewers.

Item d. Alternative solutions to the Town's wastewater disposal problems were developed and considered in the Facilities Plan. The cost effective alternative solutions were chosen when they were viable.

In summary, sewers are needed in the Phase 1 area to collect wastewater from the homes. Upgrading on-lot disposal systems is not a viable alternative in the area because of the soil conditions, lot sizes and the number of problems being experienced. Isolated community wastewater treatment plants are not viable because of the effluent disposal limitations. Community subsurface disposal systems are not viable because of the lack of available area and the unsuitable soils.

The existing treatment plant is inadequate to treat the flow that it presently receives. The present flow and the addition of this extra flow from the Phase 1 sewers dictates the need of a larger treatment plant. Based on previous public meetings and hearings, the James Brook site was not the most preferred site. In addition, the State reports that the James Brook site area is not large enough to have the upgraded plant located on it. Therefore, the James Brook site is not a viable alternative.

SKATING PROGRAM

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registration by telephone for various levels of instructional skating classes to be held at Cohasset Winter Garden. Classes are scheduled to begin Sunday, Dec. 5 at 5 p.m. and will continue for five weeks.

A $15 fee will be charged. Classes taught by professional instructors will be offered in the following areas:

Children and youth: 4 to 16 years-old, Beginner classes; children and youth: 4 to 16, Intermediate classes; adults: 17 years-old and older, Beginner and Intermediate classes are available.

HOCKEY SKATING LESSONS

Children and youth: 4 to 16 years-old, Beginner classes; children and youth: 4 to 16 years-old, Intermediate classes; adults: 17 years-old and older, Beginner and Intermediate classes are available.

Advanced classes in both Figure and Hockey are available to children and adults at 6 p.m. Those interested may sign up for these classes at the same cost.

Five weeks of instruction will cost $15 per person. In addition, skate rental, for those who require skates, is included in the fee. This class will be limited to Cohasset residents. To register, call Recreation Office at 383-6791, immediately.

STREET HOCKEY

The department will conduct registrations for the Street Hockey League, for youths six years-old (by December 1, 1982) to 10 years-old (no older than 10 by October 1, 1982), Saturday, Dec. 11, from 8 to 10 a.m. at the Town Hall.

The fee will be $6 per person and a 50 percent discount will be offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family. There will be an additional charge of about $2.75 for team shirts.

The program will be held Saturday afternoon, at the Cohasset High School gym. Time of games will depend on the divisions players are assigned to.

Bob Beggan will be the Recreation Department coordinator this year. Play is scheduled to begin Saturday, Jan. 8.

Please register on time as late registrations will be accepted on a space available basis only.

CCC to host open house in new location

Coastal Community Counseling Center will host an official opening celebration Thursday, Dec. 2 at their new headquarters, Hollis School, 482 Washington St., Braintree.

The center has converted classrooms of the Hollis School into office spaces to house the many programs offered to Cohasset and Scituate. The new 24 hour telephone number for the center is 849-1220.

Informal tours of the building and an open house celebration will be held from 3 to 7 p.m.

In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that Francis D. Logan of Cohasset in Norfolk County be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before ten o'clock in the forenoon on December 22, 1982.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) otherwise the Court may upon its own motion or on motion by the petitioner, the guardian ad litem, (if any), or any person whose appearance is on file (with notice to any person whose appearance is on file and, if applicable, the guardian and petitioner), order the appearance struck.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the eighth day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty two.

custodial coverage last year.

The Senior Class sponsored a dance Friday night from 7 to 10:30 p.m. for Grades 7-9, but according to youngsters and parents, the behavior of the students was very good. Crowell reported there has been "no student unrest."

When vandals are apprehended, it has been the policy in recent years of the school committee, acting under state statutes, to bill offenders or their parents for the damages.

Crowell worked all day Saturday with assistant Stephen Hart, and said, "We can ill afford this kind of behavior."

The School Committee may be forced to cut $130,000 from the budget next year.

School vandalism has hit Cohasset hard in the past five years.

In 1975 slashed tires and wire hoses, stolen batteries and distributor caps, disabled school buses and broken windows closed school for a day.

One-hundred and twenty-four science exhibits were destroyed at the Deer Hill School in April of 1981. Several classrooms and 27 windows were damaged.

One of a total of 75 school windows smashed during a rampage Saturday night. Damage is estimated at $5000.

Estimated tax bills may go out next week

Estimated tax bills could go out as early as next week if the state Department of Revenue approves assessors' plans to hire a company to complete property and commercial revaluation.

Last week, assessors awarded Appraisal Consultants of New England Corporation of Taunton the revaluation project for $116,800.

Town Accountant William Signorelli told the Advisory Committee Monday the money will be raised by taxes if voters approve the bid at a special town meeting Nov. 29.

Under Prop. 2½, Cohasset may raise no more than $135,000 for the balance of the fiscal year.

The bid is $3,200 less than originally estimated for the work.

If voters approve the bid, the Taunton firm will begin work Dec. 27.

Nearly 3,000 residential and commercial property parcels will be revalued. A Sept. 30 deadline for completion has been set by assessors.

Assessor Chairman Brian Wilkin said the Taunton appraiser has excellent references. They have completed property revaluations for Abington, Canton, Marshfield, Sharon and other communities.

The company will post a performance bond guaranteeing the work will be completed and will continue to revise the work until it is accepted by the state.

A copy of the contract and a timetable for completion has been sent to the state Revenue Dept. Once the state and voters approve the proposal, estimated tax bills will be sent.

The estimated tax bill will be identical to the bills last year. Payment by Dec. 31 will allow homeowners to receive Federal tax credits.

Signorelli said it is imperative that the bills are sent to eliminate the expensive interest payments on short-term borrowing. He said the borrowing has resulted in $50,000 in interest payments for fiscal 1981-82 and $24,000 from July 1 to this week.

The town was forced to borrow to pay municipal expenses because the state denied the town's original request. State officials demanded a strict timetable from the town to complete revaluation.

Assessors have alleged appraiser Thomas Mahony defaulted on his contract to complete the original revaluation work. The town is suing him for $125,000 for failure to satisfy the contract. His residential property revaluation figures were rejected last year because of incomplete data.

Cohasset and Duxbury prepped for T-day game

By Mike Berger

Cohasset and Duxbury have been Thanksgiving Day football rivals for nine years, but that could change next year.

The Skippers' Thanksgiving opponents have also included Marshfield and Hull.

But after last week's reshuffling of the South Shore League, Cohasset could be facing a different foe next year.

A vote by the South Shore League athletic directors and principals last week produced more questions than answers, but nonetheless a major high school sports reorganization plan for the 1980s.

The league accepted Scituate and Whitman-Hanson effective next fall. These are two members of the 11-member Old Colony League.

The vote means Scituate and Whitman-Hanson join Rockland, Duxbury, Norwell, East Bridgewater, Hanover, Middleboro, Cohasset, Abington, Hull and Holbrook in the South Shore League.

Marshfield remains in the OCL with Hingham, Randolph, Weymouth South, Silver Lake, Weymouth North, Plymouth-Carver, Bridgewater-Raynham and Taunton.

One major question is what happens to Thanksgiving rivals.

The decision to accept Whitman-Hanson and Scituate is contingent on their playing league opponents on Thanksgiving Day. However, the current rule in the South Shore League has some exceptions this year.

Whitman-Hanson is playing Abington Thursday and Rockland is playing Bishop Stang, a non-league opponent, Wednesday night.

The league approved the transfer by a 7-3 margin, just meeting the two-thirds requirement needed for the school's acceptance. Bridgewater-Raynham also applied but was denied by an 8-2 vote.

The 12-team league will be split into two six-team divisions in the fall — a big and a small division.

The big division will include Scituate, Whitman-Hanson, Duxbury, Middleboro and Rockland.

The small division realignment includes Holbrook, Hull, Cohasset, East Bridgewater and Norwell.

Still to be decided are aligning Hanover and Abington, but both teams will not be in the big division.

There will be two league champions eligible for state tournament play. In addition, second place teams who win 59 percent of their games and any team which finishes with a 70 percent or better winning percentage is also eligible.

The league will consist of one division gymnstics, wrestling, golf and cross country. Seven member schools have teams in these sports.

For baseball and basketball, the scheduling format will include playing opponents in one's own division twice and crossing over to the other division and playing the member team once.

A football schedule has not been completed. But members will play opponents in their own division once.

COHASSET

For Cohasset Athletic Director Clark Chatterton, the news is exciting.

Chatterton said the league reallignment is a relief to Cohasset sports.

"Our top concern is we had to face four big schools. We now have a competitive schedule among the small schools. For example, in basketball there is no way our kids in a given year could be considered for tournament play. Now, with a two-division setup, we play the big schools once. Even if we lost to them, we have a chance at our own division."

He said the Cohasset-Scituate rivalry is important. Already, Cohasset has shown it can play competitively with Scituate in soccer, hockey and baseball.

It's also helped Cohasset fill out its wrestling, cross country, gymnastics and golf schedule. This year, only five South Shore League members fielded teams.

It will also help transportation costs, Chatterton said.

COHASSET-DUXBURY

In Thanksgiving Day games, Duxbury has the edge over Cohaset, having won five games, lost three and tied once.

Cohasset hasn't scored a touchdown in four years. Two years ago the two teams played to a scoreless tie and last year Duxbury beat the Skippers 16-0.

The Skippers enter the 10 a.m. contest with a 3-5-1 record and 2-5-1 in the South Shore League. The team has scored 119 points on offense and has allowed 175 points.

Duxbury enters the game with a 8-1 record and 7-1 in the South Shore League. Duxbury has scored 216 points and allowed 50, the lowest point total in the league.

Duxbury just missed beating Rockland for the South Shore League title.

The game will be held at Cohasset High School.

The Cohasset starting lineup will be quarterback Rich Evans, senior co-captain; running back Pat Broderick, a senior; running back Lee Wilson, a junior; running back David Fahey, a senior; end Bob Meers, a senior; end Tom O'Brien, a senior and linemen Bill Cuff, a senior co-captain; Paul Riley, a senior; Jay Santini, a senior; Peter Caruso, a junior; Nick White, a junior and Brett Wetzell, a junior paying the linebacker and backfield positions.

FIELD HOCKEY: ELIZABEHT GLASFELD

Senior Elizabeth Glasfeld was named athlete of the week for her strong defensive performance on the varsity field hockey team.

Elizabeth was Cohasset's strongest fullback this past season and was named to the League all-star team.

Elizabeth, an honor society member at CHS, was recently awarded the Bausch and Lomb Science Award. She also plays point-guard for the varsity basketball team.

BOYS SOCCER: JIM STALLARD

Senior Jim Stallard was awarded athlete of the week for his participation on the varsity soccer team.

"Jim was a strong player on the team and always played his best," soccer Coach Jon Anderson said.

Stallard was a leading scorer on the team and was also named to the League all-star team.

Jim is an AFS exchange student from Asunceon, Paraguay and lives with his host family, the Karcher's of South Main St.

POWDER PUFF

This past Sunday the senior girls beat the junior girls in the annual Powder Puff Game. The seniors win is now a "tradition" of the game.

The senior girls would like to thank their enthusiastic cheerleaders for their strong support and appreciated their half-time show and performance of "Taps" in the center of town.

They also want to apologize for any disturbances they may have made during their parading throughout the day.

The seniors especially want to thank the junior girls for being such good sports and wish them all the luck for next year's game!

DeSantis defends plan for alternative sewer project

"We should clean up our waters but unless we modify the agreement it will break our backs financially."

That was the main message of Charles DeSantis' public hearing Monday night. Sixty-eight residents came to hear about a cheaper alternative to the planned $13.7 million sewer system.

DeSantis argued that instead of building a first phase sewer system, Cohasset should be allowed to improve the existing plant to conform with the discharge requirements and allow for alternative construction of a small waste water system.

Thirty-two voters signed papers, endorsing a flyer and a fact sheet which will be handed out at Monday's special town meeting.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School. A legal quorum will be 200 registered voters.

DeSantis said his greatest concern was that sewers would bring "urban sprawl" to Cohasset by permitting development of lands which are currently open.

"You can shove a sewer pipe through ledge," he said.

He added that under the Metcalf and Eddy central sewer plan, each homeowner not hooked up would have to pay annual costs of approximately $225 and each home serviced would have to pay an average of $475 annually.

DeSantis said that schools, police, fire and other services would suffer. "No issue, past or present, has a greater impact on the future of Cohasset," he stressed.

Following an hour presentation, DeSantis answered questions and comments from about 15 people.

Bernard Mulcahy, of 20 Red Gate Lane, asked to what extent the engineers had researched alternative plans to central sewage.

DeSantis said the central issue was if they had done the cost analysis of the alternatives which is required.

He told Tana Carlson of Old Coach Road he believed the town voted for the consent agreement at a Feb. 14, 1980 town meeting, one day after it had been signed by selectmen and town counsel, not through rational judgment, but "due to fear and coercion by the state" which threatened to raise fines from $1,000 to $10,000 per day.

DeSantis told Ruth Nedrow of Fair Oaks Lane that his group has legal help. He said the consent decree provided that "either party can modify the agreement." He believes he has a strong case, and that "the state case is dubious — very weak."

Diane Sullivan of Jerusalem Road asked what protection his plan had for prevention of future problems. DeSantis said that although Metcalf and Eddy engineers predict that a septic system will only last about 20 years, others, including the federal government, predict 50 years or indefinitely.

He said the Federal Clean Water Act provides that the government pay 85 percent of eligible costs for alternative systems for buildings in use by Dec. 29, 1977 in small communities, and it is up to local boards of health not to allow problems to occur in buildings built later.

DeSantis said the state should have a lot more concern about the Deer Island and Nut Island sewerage systems impact to the beaches, rather than punishing Cohasset.

He cited failures of Plymouth, Hull and other central sewage systems, and added Cohasset had the only beaches south from Cape Ann that had not been closed in recent years.

Ann Churchill asked about outfall costs. DeSantis said the EPA had changed its requirements on outfalls, and that he and engineers he had consulted felt expenditures for an outfall might not be required if the effluent quality was improved.

Alfred Odermatt said the new Pond Street condominiums are examples of on-site approved disposal. DeSantis said Granby is an example of a town voting alternative solution. He displayed 21 different designs suggested by the Federal Government, ranging from individual septic tanks and absorption fields to cluster systems, including mound systems, waterless or low-water toilets and evapo-transpiration beds.

Henry Rattenbury praised DeSantis' presentation as the most informative meeting on town affairs he had ever attended in his many years in Cohasset.

The Advisory Committee is also impressed with DeSantis' presentation. He met with the committee last week, seeking support. But the advisors decided not to take action until Monday night, 30 minutes before the start of the special town meeting.

Beginning Nov. 29 through Dec. 8, the state is offering tax free minibonds for public sale, in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000.

Since these minibonds are exempt from Federal and State taxes, the eight percent return may be equivalent to as much as a 14 or 15 percent return on a taxable security, depending on the individual's tax bracket.

They are convertible to cash at any time and there is no penalty for early redemptions. Payment for minibonds must be made by certified check, money order or bank check; personal checks will not be accepted.

Applications for their purchase will be available at all Registry of Motor Vehicle, Lottery and Treasury offices. Minibond applications and information may be requested by calling 727-5078 and 1-800-392-6441.

School News

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 24

Classes dismissed at noon for Thanksgiving recess.

THURSDAY, NOV. 25

Thanksgiving Day football, Cohasset vs. Duxbury at home, 10 a.m.

MONDAY, NOV. 29

Classes resume. Winter sports begin. Students who want to play a sport and have not signed up or attended a preliminary meeting, should contact the coaches listed below.

JR./SR. HIGH SCHOOL

Winter coaches: William Fallon, girls varsity basketball; John Anderson, girls J.V. basketball; Claire Brady, eighth grade girls basketball; Kenneth Ross, wrestling; Andrea Palardy, gymnastics; Thomas Bunnell, assistant Frank Evans, ice hockey; Eddie Minelli, boys varsity basketball; David Infusino, boys J.V. basketball; and Larry Schultz, boys junior high basketball.

Since most of these coaches are not high school teachers, students may leave messages for them at the high school athletic office, 383-6103.

OSGOOD

Grades K-3 now have their own computer, housed in the open space classroom, with which they are gradually becoming acquainted.

First grade teacher Faith Bowker broke her right arm exercising on her bicycle recently. If any right-handed teacher can carry on under the circumstances, she can.

OSGOOD AND DEER HILL

Osgood and Deer Hill teachers were busy during last week's early release day.

Joan Hassol, who works in the rape crisis division of the district attorney's office, introduced staff to the child abuse and molestation materials that they will use later in the year in the classroom.

Hassol familiarized teachers with terminology and appropriate responses that they might encounter from students.

Health coordinator Mike Gill is planning another workshop for teachers before the films are shown to the elementary students.

The Cohasset schools' special needs department has received a grant from the Commonwealth Institute for a series of four parent-professional workshops.

The first in the series "Developing Parent-School Partnerships," was conducted Thursday by Christine Greeley, home-school coordinator for Westwood. Twenty-five parents and staff attended.

Greeley will also be doing additional workshops for school staff.

DEER HILL

The harvest is in at Deer Hill. Fifth and sixth grade students of the open space classroom shared their research and work of the past several weeks with the school as they re-enacted the way of life of the Pilgrims and early American Indians. An eatable feast was shared with open space parents on Tuesday.

Sixth graders met and learned from a real-life Wampanoag Indian before recessing for the Thanksgiving Holiday. The PSO funded the visit.

WHAT'S NEW IN ENRICHMENT AT DEER HILL

A TOUCH OF SCOTLAND

Dr. Edward Woods shared his bagpipe music and information about bagpipes with the students at a special assembly presented by Grade four teacher, Mrs. Hibbard.

Although Dr. Woods' ancestors are of Scottish and English descent, he learned to play the bagpipes by taking lessons; he's been playing for the past eight years.

He enjoys participating in various competitions and parades and most recently was in a large parade in Edgartown.

He is a member of the MacGregor Pipe Band of Milton. Dr. Woods is a dentist.

PUPPETRY FOR FIRST GRADERS

Sixth grade students from Mr. Becker's, Mr. Deakin's and Mrs. Cisneros' homerooms entertained first graders from the Joseph Osgood School last week with puppet shows and skits they prepared in their language arts classes.

The skits were based on children's books reviewed and re-written in script form.

Attending were first grade students from Mrs. Price's, Miss Bowker's, Mrs. Fink's, Mrs. D'Angelo's and the collaborative classes.

ARCHEOLOGY

Josephine Laugelli, a long-time resident, recently addressed students in the P.E.P. (Pupil Enrichment Program) classes. An amateur archeologist for the past 20 years, Mrs. Laugelli was able to share many personal experiences from her ongoing work at the Wapanucket site at Lake Assawomtsett.

This past trimester Mrs. Wonolowski's enrichment class has been developing research skills via a unit on archeology. The students will soon be applying these skills as they pursue independent projects related to this area of study.

Mrs. Laugelli's numerous slides enhanced their learning by focusing on the scientific procedures of an acheologist and the importance of careful recordings.

Class members traded stories of personal finds while exploring river beds and backyards. Discussion covered how artifacts help piece together information on earlier lifestyles.

The students enjoyed handling the tools of the trade and gained an appreciation for the care used in unearthing and cataloging artifacts and features.

Mrs. Laugelli concluded with an invitation to those interested students to join her at the Wapanucket site when it reopens in the spring.

Student poster concert

Artists in grades 7-12 in public and parochial schools are eligible to participate in a poster contest being sponsored by the Arson Watch Reward Program.

John Golembeski, Massachusetts FAIR Plan president, said the posters should symbolize the fact that "it pays to put the heat on arson."

"In sponsoring this poster contest," he added. "we hope to give them the dual opportunity to exercise their creative and artistic talents, as well as to contribute to a worthy public cause."

Prizes of $250, $100 and $50 will be paid to those prize-winning students whose posters best show that the Arson Watch Reward Program is designed to offer financial rewards to citizens who provide authorities with information about any intended or actual arson crime.

Posters should bear the name of the program and the telephone hotline number: 1-800-682-9229. Any school may submit multiple entires, according to the contest rules which have been distributed to all public and parochial school principals.

The contest winners will be announced March 16, and the teachers of prize-winning students will also be acknowledged by the Arson Watch Reward Program.

Pansies don't play powder puff football

There was plenty of fast action at Sunday's Powder Puff game. Seniors trounced juniors.

Senior QB Gia Barresi calls the signals while readying for the next 'puff' play.

These lovely cheerleaders had no trouble rooting their team (seniors) onto victory in the annual P.P. game.

Powder Puff cheerleaders try some kicks.

Sidelined temporarily during Sunday's game, junior Jennie Mitman tends to a bumped head.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 24

Classes dismissed at noon for Thanksgiving recess.

THURSDAY, NOV. 25

Thanksgiving Day football, Cohasset vs. Duxbury at home, 10 a.m.

MONDAY, NOV. 29

Classes resume. Winter sports begin. Students who want to play a sport and have not signed up or attended a preliminary meeting, should contact the coaches listed below.

JR./SR. HIGH SCHOOL

Winter coaches: William Fallon, girls varsity basketball; John Anderson, girls J.V. basketball; Claire Brady, eighth grade girls basketball; Kenneth Ross, wrestling; Andrea Palardy, gymnastics; Thomas Bunnell, assistant Frank Evans, ice hockey; Eddie Minelli, boys varsity basketball; David Infusino, boys J.V. basketball; and Larry Schultz, boys junior high basketball.

Since most of these coaches are not high school teachers, students may leave messages for them at the high school athletic office, 383-6103.

OSGOOD

Grades K-3 now have their own computer, housed in the open space classroom, with which they are gradually becoming acquainted.

First grade teacher Faith Bowker broke her right arm exercising on her bicycle recently. If any right-handed teacher can carry on under the circumstances, she can.

OSGOOD AND DEER HILL

Osgood and Deer Hill teachers were busy during last week's early release day.

Joan Hassol, who works in the rape crisis division of the district attorney's office, introduced staff to the child abuse and molestation materials that they will use later in the year in the classroom.

Hassol familiarized teachers with terminology and appropriate responses that they might encounter from students.

Health coordinator Mike Gill is planning another workshop for teachers before the films are shown to the elementary students.

The Cohasset schools' special needs department has received a grant from the Commonwealth Institute for a series of four parent-professional workshops.

The first in the series "Developing Parent-School Partnerships," was conducted Thursday by Christine Greeley, home-school coordinator for Westwood. Twenty-five parents and staff attended.

Greeley will also be doing additional workshops for school staff.

DEER HILL

The harvest is in at Deer Hill. Fifth and sixth grade students of the open space classroom shared their research and work of the past several weeks with the school as they re-enacted the way of life of the Pilgrims and early American Indians. An eatable feast was shared with open space parents on Tuesday.

Sixth graders met and learned from a real-life Wampanoag Indian before recessing for the Thanksgiving Holiday. The PSO funded the visit.

WHAT'S NEW IN ENRICHMENT AT DEER HILL

A TOUCH OF SCOTLAND

Dr. Edward Woods shared his bagpipe music and information about bagpipes with the students at a special assembly presented by Grade four teacher, Mrs. Hibbard.

Although Dr. Woods' ancestors are of Scottish and English descent, he learned to play the bagpipes by taking lessons; he's been playing for the past eight years.

He enjoys participating in various competitions and parades and most recently was in a large parade in Edgartown.

He is a member of the MacGregor Pipe Band of Milton. Dr. Woods is a dentist.

PUPPETRY FOR FIRST GRADERS

Sixth grade students from Mr. Becker's, Mr. Deakin's and Mrs. Cisneros' homerooms entertained first graders from the Joseph Osgood School last week with puppet shows and skits they prepared in their language arts classes.

The skits were based on children's books reviewed and re-written in script form.

Attending were first grade students from Mrs. Price's, Miss Bowker's, Mrs. Fink's, Mrs. D'Angelo's and the collaborative classes.

ARCHEOLOGY

Josephine Laugelli, a long-time resident, recently addressed students in the P.E.P. (Pupil Enrichment Program) classes. An amateur archeologist for the past 20 years, Mrs. Laugelli was able to share many personal experiences from her ongoing work at the Wapanucket site at Lake Assawomtsett.

This past trimester Mrs. Wonolowski's enrichment class has been developing research skills via a unit on archeology. The students will soon be applying these skills as they pursue independent projects related to this area of study.

Mrs. Laugelli's numerous slides enhanced their learning by focusing on the scientific procedures of an acheologist and the importance of careful recordings.

Class members traded stories of personal finds while exploring river beds and backyards. Discussion covered how artifacts help piece together information on earlier lifestyles.

The students enjoyed handling the tools of the trade and gained an appreciation for the care used in unearthing and cataloging artifacts and features.

Mrs. Laugelli concluded with an invitation to those interested students to join her at the Wapanucket site when it reopens in the spring.

Student poster concert

Artists in grades 7-12 in public and parochial schools are eligible to participate in a poster contest being sponsored by the Arson Watch Reward Program.

John Golembeski, Massachusetts FAIR Plan president, said the posters should symbolize the fact that "it pays to put the heat on arson."

"In sponsoring this poster contest," he added. "we hope to give them the dual opportunity to exercise their creative and artistic talents, as well as to contribute to a worthy public cause."

Prizes of $250, $100 and $50 will be paid to those prize-winning students whose posters best show that the Arson Watch Reward Program is designed to offer financial rewards to citizens who provide authorities with information about any intended or actual arson crime.

Posters should bear the name of the program and the telephone hotline number: 1-800-682-9229. Any school may submit multiple entires, according to the contest rules which have been distributed to all public and parochial school principals.

The contest winners will be announced March 16, and the teachers of prize-winning students will also be acknowledged by the Arson Watch Reward Program.

'Grease' opens with style Dec. 3 at CHS

The alligator shirt has become an endangered species at Cohasset High School.

The dry look is all wet with vitalis; Docksiders have been kicked off campus by penny loafers; chamois shirts have given way to motorcycle jackets; Fair Isle sweaters to angora cardigans, wrap-around skirts to crinolines and chinos to jeans.

What's the cause of this fashion revolution? Should Talbot's quake with fear and L.L. Bean take a long canoe trip to "get away from it all?" Relax, the musical comedy "Grease" is coming to Cohasset High School under the sponsorship of the Music Department Dec. 3, 10 and 11 at 8 p.m.

Vocal music director Bryan Marks has been the force behind the production of the first all-school musical at the high school. Assisting Marks is Ron Emmons of the English department, as stage director; gymnastic coach Andrea Polardy, choreographer; and Jeff Didge of the music department, band director.

"Grease" is a salute to the rock n' roll of the 1950's. The class of '59 from Rydell High sings and dances its way through songs such as "Summer Nights," "We Go Together," "Greased Lightning" and "Look at Me, I'm Sandra Dee."

Tunes that recall the Buddy Holly hiccups, the Little Richard yodels and Elvis Presley wiggles, the yackety-yacks and the Sha-Na-Nas helped make "Grease" the longest running show in Broadway history.

Featured in the cast are seniors Maureen Buckley as Frenchy. Mia Graham as Marty, Andrew Long as Roger, Samantha Barrett as Miss Lynch, Paul Johnson as Vince Fontaine and John Ryan as Sonny.

Junior parts are Linton Young as Danny, Diane Mullen as Sandy, Lilly Carbone as Rizzo, Nancy Donahue as Jan, Tom Jones as Kenickie, Kurt Hochkeppel as Eugene, Jillian Ayer as Patty, Shawna McCarthy as Cha Cha. Skip Urmson is Doody. Sarah Muir and Jeannie Casino are sophomore cast members. Representing the freshman class is Jackie Fahy as Teen Angel.

Others include: Karin Anglin, Rodney Best, Sandra Best, Jill Bradley, Ken Breitkreuz, Jeanine Buckley, Leah Burbank, Sean Cunning, Bill Davenport, Laura Doherty, Katie Duffy, Teri Finnegan, Steven Fries, Lauren Haynes, Karlin Isele, Jenny Long, Beth McGuire, Mary Beth McNamara, Chris Moore, Elaine Mullen, Debbie Osborne, Jennie Packard, Lisa Peachell, John Periera, Lisa Perotti, Krissie Ralff, Maura Sceery, George Schultzinsky, Katie Smart, Vicki Spooner, Anne Taylor and Chrissy Vivina.

Tickets are now on sale for $3. Because all seats are reserved and interest is high, it is recommended that tickets be purchased early by calling 383-6625 (evenings.)

Should Santa Claus happen to be the parent of a Cohasset student, the Parent School Organization will benefit from purchases made at Bookport in Hingham. From Nov. 22-27 Bookport will donate 15 percent of the sales price to the PSO. Checking out Christmas ideas are (l-r) Patrick Suhrbier, Judy Coulon, of Bookport in the Lincoln Plaza, Carla Lucas and Mike Suhrbier.

An Exciting New Place
To Live in Hingham...

The MEADOWS

FURNISHED MODELS
NOW OPEN!

You'll love living at The Meadows, a superb new community of attached single family homes now being built by The Green Company in Hingham. Expert construction crews have completed the first group of two and three bedroom homes, and the exciting furnished models are now ready for your visit.

Our pride in the design and construction of The Meadows is well justified as you'll see when you visit. There's a wonderful spaciousness to the homes . . . an exceptional flow between rooms achieved through the use of large foyer areas, vaulted ceilings, expansive glass with views to the out-of-doors, and rooms opening into each other yet subtly separated by custom dividers.

There are many gracious details: tray ceilings; large country kitchens with sunny breakfast bays—even one designed as a greenhouse; walk-in bay windows; and exceptional master suites, some including secluded fireplaced sitting rooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights.

The combination of location, space and amenities make these homes an exceptional value at $153,000 to $210,000. We suggest a visit soon for early selection. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, keep left to our entrance, or call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

Developed, marketed and managed with pride by Green Hingham, Inc. (An important part of the Green Company family.)

Studio IV open house Dec. 5

Studio IV, the artists' cooperative studio/gallery at 59 Water St., Hingham Harbor, will display several Cohasset and Hingham artists' work at an Open House, Sunday, Dec. 5 from 3 to 6 p.m.

Ann Colocousis of Cohasset uses oils and acrylics to execute impressionistic style paintings. She began painting while living in San Jose, where she studied with several California artists, and was a member of the Los Gatos Art Association.

For the past seven years she has been a Cohasset resident, and has been active in the South Shore Art Center. She sponsored a one-woman show at the Avon Library in April of 1978, and has exhibited some of her work locally and in a Newbury Street gallery.

Mary Walther shows her artistic talents through several mediums. Her works in pencil, pen and ink, oils, and water colors are displayed at Studio IV.

Roberta Raffa makes final arrangements for a special Open House at Studio IV, Hingham.

Recently, four of Studio IV's artists are displaying their work at the South Shore Art Center members only Blue Ribbon Show.

Roberta Raffa of Cohasset has entered her oil painting entitled "My Sister and I"; Gloria Worthington of Hingham has entered a pastel of a Man and His Horse; Elizabeth Robinson of Hingham is showing a watercolor entitled "Cohasset Roofscape;" and Ann Colocousis is featuring her oil entitled "City Skyline."

Other examples of these artists' talents are displayed at Studio IV, Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Another feature has been added to the Studio IV cooperative. A special Christmas Craft Corner offering a variety of gifts fashioned by Andie Marshall and Jane A. Marshall of Cohasset is a part of the studio/gallery.

Some gifts available are moire silk, Victorian frames, patchwork duck decoys, velvet Christmas tree hangings, all season as well as Christmas, tea cozies, children's and appliqued pillows, wintertime useful log-slings for carry kindling and logs from the wood pile to the fireplace, velvet Christmas wreathes and many other gift ideas.

For more information, call 749-8767.

60 Plus Club plans December activities

Cohasset's Sixty Plus Club board of directors will meet Tuesday, Dec. 7 at the Unitarian Parish House at 11 a.m.

A bus trip to view the Christmas lights is planned for Tuesday, Dec. 7. The bus will leave Town Hall at 4 p.m.

There will be a stop at Valle's in Quincy for individual refreshments.

The lights display at Boston Common, Prudential Center, Beacon Hill and Quincy Market will be viewed from the bus. Call 545-3349 for reservations. The trip will cost $4.50.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club has a gala Christmas Party, at the Golden Rooster in Scituate, scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 16.

Social hour will be at noon. Dinner will begin at 1 p.m.

There is a choice of chicken or fish, for $6.95.

Entertainment will be "Apron Strings," from Marshfield.

There will be a bus for transportation, leaving Town Hall at 11:30 a.m.

Call 383-0515 for reservations.

CCC to the rescue ... 'achoo'

By Lois Martin

They approach you with lids drooping. Slightly within the five foot range, you spot the inflamed nostrils, telltale symptoms of someone who's spent the day swabbing the stuffy nose.

Audio effects accompany the person in the form of the little hack or the more robust whooping, choking rasping sounds. They inhale through congestion. Each breath is a wheeze. And they move through a cloud of Vicks vapor rub.

They are the survivors, not of the common cold because they know they'll never get over that.

But boy do they live to tell about it. And the fact that they survive the telling is the miracle...because behind every spouse with a cold is a mate who has considered making it a terminal illness.

PATCHES

Oh one doesn't want to, you understand. It's that in the midst of a fifth sleepless night next to the hacking, thrashing person who moans a lot, the mind succumbs to finding solutions for one's own weariness, like putting a pillow over the face of the cold victim.

So with haste I recommend Community Cold Centers. And I'll tell you why. It may be the way to save lives of countless residents afflicted with the common cold.

I suggest that only people with colds be allowed in the center. Daily seminars would be scheduled to hold discussions. Each person gets a chance to outline his symptoms to the caring, understanding group. Take your sinuses, for example, no one in the home wants to hear about them anymore. But the person with the cold is consumed by the desire to tell about them, one more time, again.

For the cold sufferer, there is no problem with the economy, or in the Middle East, or with the transmission on a car.

The only problem, the one that displaces, precludes all else, is his cold.

One of the difficulties in the seminar will be persuading the participants to restrain from interrupting other people's dissertations of symptoms, descriptions of drainage, inability to breathe, and headaches, buzzing noises in the head with their own. Each knows he's sicker, suffering more than the person talking. It'll take maturity for one to listen to other's painful monologues on sore throats.

At the center one sick person gets another one's soup, hot tea. And that helps because it enables a necessary attribute for the common cold sufferer - martyrdom.

The physical accoutrements of the center would be carefully selected. They all wear bathrobes which they also sleep in. There are no beds, just a lot of couches. Each person has a personal box of Kleenex, an overflowing basket full of used ones, and...the rag around the throat. Water would boil on the center's kitchen stove at all times, for the vaporizing effect to merge with the smell of Musterole, cough medicine and Lysol.

Unlike the home setting, the patients would be encouraged to honk a lot, to beset their environs with plenty of groaning in the middle of the night, to sniff until someone comfortingly suggests they blow their noses. There'll be a lot of sympathy, again something they didn't get by their own hearth.

They'll give nose spray for gifts. Recipes on remedial therapeutic brews can be swapped. They'll exchange hot water bottles and they'll each have a big fat bed pillow and an afghan a grandmother made.

Highlights could be auditions for television commercials. Some of the people you heartless mates are driving to the center at 80 miles an hour could be stars advertising Dristan next week. You'll be sorry you didn't care about his drainage.

But you'll be rested. That's the goal, not to get rid of the common cold but to get rid of the lifethreatening attitude toward the common cold sufferer.

Until the centers are a reality, however, a wise person would do well to withhold negative remarks, like "Would you quit that honking (moaning, sniffing)!" Should you tick off that person with lack of empathy, he can employ his major weapon...the ability to pass on the contagious disease.

Marriages

Poole — Gately

Kathryn Ann Gately, daughter of Mrs. Francis F. Farrell of Cohasset and the late John Peter Gately, was married Sept. 26 to Richard Gerritt Poole, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Poole of Princeton, New Jersey.

The ceremony was performed by the Reverend John Keohane at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. A reception followed at the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

The bride was given in marriage by her two brothers, John Peter Gately, Jrs., of West Roxbury and David Francis Gately of New York City.

Lee Gately of California was maid of honor for her sister and the attendants included the groom's sister, Kathrin Poole of Philadelphia as bridesmaid and the bride's nieces Tara And Kristan Gately as junior bridesmaids and Erin Gately as flower girl.

Richard Poole was his son's best man and ushers were Walter Poole, Eugene Toruso and John Savage all of New York City.

Mrs. Poole graduated from Notre Dame Academy, Neighborhood Playhouse New York, Boston Conservatory of Music and received her Masters of Fine Arts from Rutgers University.

She has been on the faculty of St. Nicholas Playhouse in Chicago, Philadelphia Repertory Theatre and is currently Associate Professor of Drama at Rutgers University and at the William Esper Studio in New York.

Mr. Poole attended Milbrook Academy, Oberlin College and received his Masters of Fine Arts at Rutgers University. He is teaching and directing at the American Academy of Arts in New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Poole will be living in Rutherford, New Jersey.

French — Green

Airman Sharline M. Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel E. Green of 39 Ash St., was recently married to Airman Calvin French of Texas.

The wedding was held in Anchorage, Alaska. Both Sharline and Calvin are component specialists and work at the computerized test station at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Anchorage, Alaska.

Mr. & Mrs. Richard Poole, Jr.

Engagement

Knight — McPartland

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Knight, of Cohasset, announce the engagement of their daughter Miss Audrey Knight to Mr. Edward J. McPartland, III, of Wellfleet.

He is the son of Barbara McPartland of Chapel Hill, North Carolina and Edward J. McPartland, Jr., of Warwick, Rhode Island.

Miss Knight attended the University of Mass / Amherst. She is employed by the Norwell Veterinary Hospital.

Mr. McPartland attended Bates College and the University of Mass /Amherst. He is currently self-employed.

A June 1983 wedding is planned.

Obituary

Virginia Kenney

Virginia A. Kenney, 64, of Cohasset, died Nov. 15.

She was the cousin of Frederick J. Romley Jr. of South Dennis and Corinne Marie (Romley) Leone of West Falmouth.

She also leaves an aunt, Cora (Kenealy) Romley of Falmouth.

Executive secretary screening

Selectmen have screened five names out of 25 applicants for the executive secretary job. The position becomes vacant when Arthur Clark will retire Dec. 31. Selectmen did not identify the applicants. One finalist is a former Norfolk County selectman and a member of several town government committees. He is a teacher, philosopher and salesman. Another local candidate has graduated from an area college, owns his own business and has been active in town and regional affairs.

Coast Guard report

MONDAY, NOV. 15

12:35 p.m., received call on distress channel 16 from the lobster vessel Amor De La Mear, owned and operated by Dave Ricardo, reporting what appeared to be a decomposed body strapped in a chair-like object caught in his trawl line, 3-4 miles off Duxbury Beach. CG 41503 was dispatched from Station Scituate to investigate, with negative sightings due to strong currents. A crewmember from the CG 41503 was placed on the lobster vessel while the CG 41503 returned to Scituate to pick up Quincy Dive Team Chief John Blakandar. After an extensive search negative sightings were found and the search was called off. The Amor De La Mear was boarded to ensure compliance with all applicable federal laws and the lobster vessel was issued a citation for failure to have a certificate of numbers aboard, sound producing device and operational navigation and anchor lights.

TUESDAY, NOV. 16

Received call from Coast Guard Group Boston reporting the 110 ft. fishing vessel Sea Mist overdue on a fishing trip from Boston Harbor to the Georges Bank area. Three to five people were on board including the owner/operator Thomas J. Kelley, an experienced sailor. The vessel was last seen Nov. 6. CG 41503 was dispatched and a vehicle from Station Scituate to search Massachusetts and Cape Cod Bays with negative results. The search still pends.

Holiday Shoppe

Great ideas for this season's gift giving have just arrived at the South Shore Art Center's new Holiday Shoppe, 103 Ripley Rd.

The Shoppe opened Nov. 20 at a gala Fall Party, Blue Ribbon Show and will continue through Dec. 18 to benefit the Center's programs and gallery.

The Shoppe has collected fine works from gallery artists and invited crafters. Marsha Klein, Syma, Tina Watson, Judy Rossman and (Ralph and Sandy Terry coming in December) offer unique styles of claywork, functional and decorative.

A selection of clay ornaments will be available from Dorie Weintraub plus other small gift items.

Baskets to hold anything and everything come in all shapes and sizes from Donna Kelly who says, "Machines have not been designed yet to make baskets. Everyone you see is made by hand." Donna also designs and weaves lovely pillows and bags.

A special addition to the Shoppe is an exquisite collection of small sculpture from Walter Horak.

The Shoppe will have everything from silk batik scarves by Nanci Jaye to bread dough ornaments, Christmas stockings by Nancy Connolly.

Come and decorate your home with creative Art Center wreaths and find gifts for the whole family. Shop early for the best selection.

Holiday season hours are Mon.-Fri. 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sat. 10-2. For information call 383-9548.

Center building fund

Over 90 works of art were donated to the South Shore Art Center Auction by artists and members of the Center. As a result the Center building fund now has an additional $6,000 toward its goal.

Celebrity auctioneer Ron Della Chiesa and former Gallery owner Diane Gallagher shared the gavel to bring in this successful outcome.

Auction chairman and President Ubaldo di Benedetto praised the many hard-working Center members who contributed to the event, "The balloon, symbol of our fund raising campaign, has soared to the $108,000 height as a result of your efforts."

Committee chairpeople for the event were Jeanne Replogle, Cohasset, Auction Sale Tables; Lis Wyman, Weymouth, food; Ali Swedock, Scituate, publicity; Louise Kalish, Quincy, receiving and cataloging; and Jane Chapman and Betsy Millard of Cohasset, recording.

Also Janet Blagdon, Scituate, auction pickup; Janet Tooker, Scituate and Linda Summers, Cohasset transporting and display; Chris Rifkin, Hingham, technical assistance; Bill Bell, Plymouth, panels; Joe Burbank, Cohasset, poster design; Margaret Dillon and Ellen Winn, Cohasset, administrative assistance; and Marion Bush, Hingham, auction records.

The Art Auction and Sale is the first event run by Center members to reach thei goal of $500,000 for a larger Art Center for the South Shore.

Village Fair offers variety and spirit

By J.A. Marshall

Cohasset's unique Village Fair is almost upon us.

People from the Catholic, Congregational, Episcopal, Greek Orthodox, and Unitarian Churches have been working tirelessly over the past nine months in order to present the South Shore with the best Village Fair yet.

Over the past 42 years, dedication, innovative ideas, creativity, and a strong community spirit on the part of all our churches have worked to keep our Fair at the forefront of annual traditions.

Over these years new departments for sale items have been added and others enlarged. This year the Village Fair offers the Children's Table, the Boutique Table, the Grabs Table, the Raffle Table, the Plant Table, the Kitchen Crafts and Apron Tables, the Bargain Bazaar, the Books Section, and new from 1981, the Secret Treasures Room (no grown-ups allowed please).

The Fair provides a Snack Bar, a Cheese Department, a Chowder Bar, a Tacos Stand, and, of course, the ever popular Fair Dinner.

There's also the Children's Midway located in the Community Center, which offers entertainment for the very people that "Christmas is all about," the children.

An addition, this year there will be a puppet show, "The Shoemaker and the Elves," presented by Boylen, at 10:30 and 11:30 a.m.

Also in the Community Center during the Dec. 4 festivities will be an exhibit of the crafts made by students of Community Center classes.

Your calendar must be marked for Saturday, Dec. 4 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for one of the most unique New England Christmas Fairs.

The place: the Town Hall, Bates Hall in the Congregation Church, the Unitarian Parish House, and the Community Center.

There will be a Santa Claus too! His reindeer have agreed to deliver him to the Common on Fair Day.

CCC holds two showings of puppet show

Pat Boylan will present two separate showings of "The Shoemaker and the Elves," on Saturday, Dec. 4.

This puppet show will delight children just as Pat's summer puppet theater did.

Boylan is a Hingham resident and her shows and workshops are extremely popular. She is often a featured puppeteer at the Brookline Puppet Showplace.

Shows will be held at the Cohasset Community Center at 10:30 and 11:30, a small fee will be charged.

While your children are being entertained you may browse through the display of crafts and projects from the Center's many courses and workshops.

This will also be an excellent time to purchase a gift certificate for a friend or loved one. The Center is now featuring Christmas Gift certificates that can pay in full or in part the tuition of one of the many courses and workshops available.

The new program guide will be out soon and a few of the many courses offered are: exercise, gymnastics, dancing, quilting, typing, calligraphy, computers, etc.

Certificates will be on sale Saturday, Dec. 4 and in the Community Center office daily from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. until Christmas. Call 383-0088 for details.

LWV recommends programs

Cohasset League of Women Voters members will recommend programs for the state league to study at two unit meetings Tuesday, Nov. 30 at Marie Caristi's, 11 Black horse Lane, 7:30 p.m. and Thursday, Dec. 2 at Grace Donohue's, 221 Forest Ave., at 9:15 a.m.

These state program planning meetings are the first step in the adoption of a state program of study and action. Every two years the Massachusetts League solicits recommendations from local leagues to develop its state program.

Some possible issues which may be incorporated into the Mass. League's 1983-85 program include legalized casino gambling, handgun control, health care and natural resources.

Cohasset's first historical society...

By David Wadsworth

Almost a century ago the citizens of Cohasset became interested in the history of their town. At the Town Meeting of March 5, 1894, they voted to establish a committee to study and report on the early history of this small New England village.

The original members of the Committee on Town History were prominent citizens of the town, including Rev. Joseph Osgood, Newcomb Bates Tower, "Squire" Aaron Pratt, Dr. Oliver H. Howe, E. Pomeroy Collier and Rev. E. Victor Bigelow.

The Committee began assembling old documents and collecting artifacts relating to Cohasset's early years.

By 1896 the group had gathered sufficient material to begin compiling a comprehensive written history. Rev. Bigelow volunteered to be the author.

The book that emerged two years later was a 561 page document titled "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts." First published in 1898 under the auspices of the Committee, and printed by the Boston firm of Samuel Usher, the Bigelow History of an old New England town still stands as the definitive history of Cohasset.

Bigelow's book covers many facets of early Cohasset, from the ancient glacial epoch that gave us our granite ledges and gravel soil to its habitation millenia later by a small group of Amerindians called the "Quonahassits."

The visit of Captain John Smith to Cohasset Harbor in the year 1614 is noted, and the arrival of the first English settlers in the mid-1600's.

The life of early Cohasseters was not an easy one; they were pioneers in the truest sense of the word.

"Narrative History of Cohasset" moves from those first years of Cohasset's existence (it was still a part of Hingham in the late 1600's) through its struggle to become a separate community.

Bigelow describes the struggle of the villagers to divorce themselves from Hingham, which led the Massachusetts Bay Colony's General Court to establish Cohasset as the 2nd Precinct of Hingham in 1717 and then to separate it from its parent entirely in 1770.

From its beginnings as an agricultural settlement, Cohasset developed into a maritime community, and by the mid-1800's had become one of New England's important mackerel-fishing towns. Fleets of schooners owned and sailed by Cohasseters left our harbor each summer to fish in the waters of the Canadian Maritime Provinces, and the town's economy depended in large measure upon the size of their catch.

Rev. Bigelow describes the "Age of Sail" represented by the Cohasset schooner fleets. By 1898, the date of publication of "A Narrative History," the schooner fleets were gone, victims of economic hardship, and Cohasset had become a summer resort for wealthy Bostonians.

Times were again changing in the town, and its population was increasing. The old fishing village found itself becoming a suburb of Boston.

Rev. Bigelow, in the closing paragraphs of his final chapter called "Up To Date" wrote the following: "Little by little the old landmarks familiar to our ancestors will be transformed by the hands of an incoming people...even under our very eyes these things are now being done, and no one could bid them stop; but these lines have been written and the pages of this book have been filled with a record of events which have transpired here for the purpose of furnishing all who come with some faint conception of the honorable career of this beautiful town."

The original 1898 printing of Bigelow's "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" was exhausted many years ago, but his landmark historical volume has been reprinted twice since, once as a part of the town's Bicentennial celebration, and now again as a commemorative edition by the Cohasset Historical Society.

The "Narrative History," available through the Society, is a thoroughly enjoyable book, profusely illustrated with early photographs and maps.

Bigelow tells a unique story in his own eloquent way; the story of a small town beloved by its inhabitants. The "Narrative History" makes a fine gift for Christmas or other occasions.

To obtain a copy before the holiday season, call the Historical Society at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

Second Congregational presents 'Messiah'

Vocalists and musicians will join together to open the Christmas season with Handel's "Messiah" oratorio at the Second Congregational Church, Sunday, Nov. 28 at 3 p.m.

Conductor Ellen Fryling will lead soloists and musicians from the Hingham Civic Orchestra and the hundreds of people who come to sing the choral portions of the work.

Soloists include Pam Wolfe, soprano; Diane Whiting, contralto; David Norris, tenor; and Rev. James O'Brien, bass. Residents and visitors are welcome to sing.

Singers should try to bring a score and arrive early. They will be seated first. Refreshments will be served after the event.

St. Luke's Episcopal Church concert

Sarah deLima, a member of the Choral Art Society, will be among the soloists for the Christmas concert of Handel's "Messiah." deLima, an alto, will sing the recitative and air "Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened" and "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd."

Jill Crafts is the Society's accompanist and organist, and among 14 singers from Cohasset are Beth Hitchcock, Diana Rousseau (ticket chairman), Nancy White, Richard deLima and Millard MacNeill.

William C. Sano will direct the chorus and orchestra, with Dorothy Bales, Boston violinist and teacher, as concertmaster.

The concert will be held on Saturday, Dec. 4 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 5 at 3 p.m. at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Rte. 3A, First Parish Rd., Scituate.

Tickets are available from members of the chorus and at the door, but because of previous sold-out concerts, seating priority will be given to those who have their tickets in advance.

St. Anthony's Parish marks 25th anniversary

This November the 305th observation of the Eucharistic Adoration Society of St. Anthony's Parish marked the 25th anniversary of its First Friday/First Saturday devotion.

The adoration began in 1957 under the direction of the pastor, the late Rt. Rev. Thomas Devlin. It was continued during the pastorate of the late Rev. Joseph Brennan and is presently being conducted under pastor Rev. John Keohane's direction.

The devotion begins after the 5 p.m. Mass on Friday and continues throughout the night until the 8 a.m. Mass on Saturday.

Present chairman of the devotion is Alfred Odermatt, who was appointed in 1959.

The torte stands apart in the world of baking because, unlike a cake, it is made with little or no flour. Ground nuts or crumbs usually make up the dry ingredients. Added to them is an abundance of eggs and a little butter. While the origins of many pastries can be traced to Turkey, Hungary and other such countries, the Viennese propelled pastries to a form of high art. That city's many famous coffeehouses served tortes piled with swirls and puffs and layered with apricot preserved or glazed with caramel. They were accompanied by many varieties of coffees topped with mounds of whipped cream.

Whether considering the history of a particular dish or the ingredients necessary, the final thought and judgement is taste and satisfaction. For dishes from a variety of origins but only with the highest of quality ingredients tastefully prepared, come to NORTH RIVER HOUSE*, 456 Columbia Rd., Rts. 53 & 139, Hanover. If our experience and reputation is any basis, your final judgement will keep you returning time and again. Tel.* 826-6060. Open daily 11:30-10 & Sunday 9-10; lounge til 1. Most major credit cards accepted.

GOURMET TIP: The easy access to baking powder in America more than 100 years ago, resulted in the popular high-layered cake.

Cub Scout happenings . . .

By Linda Farrag

BOWL-A-THON

Thirty-nine Cub Scouts (Pack #38) and four Boy Scouts (Troop #28) participated in the successful fundraising Bowl-A-Thon.

The boys enjoyed bowling, thanks to the many people who sponsored our scouts.

The money collected will be distributed to the Council and to Pack #38.

Many boys will receive a thank you gift which they chose from the Scouting Handbook.

The den leaders and parents who helped score the Cubs' bowling sheets were very much appreciated.

The Cohasset Community Center also supported the Cubs. The Center's bowling coordinators, Bill O'Connell and Lou Gifford also assisted in scorekeeping.

CALENDAR

December 1: District Meeting, So. Junior High, Rte. 228,, Hingham, 7:30 to 9 p.m., for parents and den leaders to transfer ideas, to meet other den leaders from Old Mills District, and to learn more about Cub Scouts.

December 3: Cohasset Christmas Caroling Stroll through Cohasset Village, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

December 4: Cub Scout Fun Day for Bobcats, Bears and Wolf Cubs, place to be announced.

Ribbons and prizes for the boys. Events will include: push-ups, sit-ups, whiffleball throw, basketball, sack races, balloon popping contest, discus throw, shot put and bowling.

December 4: Village Fair Day. Dens can bake or make gifts for our Cub Scout table donation. (This is also part of the religion badge).

DEN NEWS

Den 1: Everyone at the Halloween party enjoyed Pat Baird's Cubs' presentation of the "Warlock's Brew." The boys were fine performers.

The den have been busy mastering knot-tying.

Den 2: The boys walked over the golf course and practiced using compass bearings.

The Cubs visited Battleship Cove in Fall River. Steve Almeida was proud to tell the boys about the riveting his grandfather did on the U.S.S. Massachusetts.

They even ate their lunch at the main dining room on board the battleship. Jason McIntosh's brother, who was a former scout, accompanied the boys.

The Cubs have also been busy building — guess what! Worm Hotels! After digging for worms, the Cubs put them in a container of dirt and observed the worms burrowing.

Den 3: Each Cub has been collecting beads towards their ranks. Matt Lombardy's Cubs went on a trip to Quincy Market in Boston. They visited many stores. The Cubs enjoyed climbing at the playground fort at the waterfront.

The Cubs are creeping slowly along the bear trial towards their badges.

Den 4: Chris Ford's Cubs went on a field trip to Supper Island across Mill River. They went on a nature walk and identified different plant life.

They have also practiced knot tying.

Den 5: The Cubs have been busy planting bulbs and helping them grow. They've also been tying knots.

They marked a trail at Wheelwright Park and walked an old Indian trail in the woods behind Town Hall.

All five members of the den received bobcat badges.

Den 6: Karen Spencer helped the Cubs learn how to fold a flag. Den 6 has mice. They are very cute and will not cause any moms to scream. The mice are bookmarkers the Cubs made from felt.

As a learning project of conservation and energy saving, the Cubs went with Mr. Geary to Wompatuck Spring. The boys filled their two-gallon containers and brought them home for their families to use.

Mrs. Shields took the boys to the beach and searched for various beach "treasures" to make a beach collage.

Den 7: The Halloween ghost tootsie pops were fun to make and good to eat.

The Cubs have exchanged secret "invisible ink" letters.

Everyone returned from marking and following trails. The Cubs made Thanksgiving nut dishes.

The boys will be sharpening up their cooking talents because they will be making fudge for the Christmas Fair.

Receiving Bobcat awards were: Chip Kennedy and Mac Campbell.

Thanks to the George Mealy Post for donating an American flag for the den.

Den 8: The boys collected and labeled as many different leaves as they could find. Mrs. Murphy had them laminated. Now the bys have a durable and creative placemat.

The following were awarded Bobcat awards: Bob Hughes, Jason Legere, Brian Conant and Patrick Suhbrier.

Billy Murphy and Brian Conant have completed three achievements in their progress towards ranks.

Webelos: I — Chuck McLaughlin's Cubs are working to complete their Scientist and Citizen badge.

II — Congratulations to all Joe Gallagher's boys; they achieved their Athletic badge which included a 50-yard dash, standing jumps, sit-ups and push-ups.

III — Beck Anderson's Cubs hiked with Greg Lennon's dad through Wheelwright Park on a nature walk. They are busy working towards their Naturalist badge.

Don't forget!

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

What better place to be right about now than here in the heart of Pilgrim country? Surrounded by historic homes, cranberry bogs, stone walls and fields where Indians roamed, imparts a very special meaning to Thanksgiving. A nip in the air, a touch of snow and smoke from the fireplace help us relate to the harvest season that gave rise to the first Thanksgiving. Sitting down to a turkey dinner in the Florida sun, or having an outdoor picnic like a young couple I read about in Los Angeles, can't compare to being in New England. Their novel Thanksgiving meal was cooked beforehand and kept warm in a Mexican "portabienda" and sounded awfully good. Cornish game hens were stuffed with apples, dates and pine nuts, hot sweet potatoes were topped with nutmeg and honey butter and fresh fruit and Indian pudding made up dessert. Here is what Irene Stubbs does with sweet potatoes.

LEMON SWEET POTATOES

In a bowl combine 4 pounds sweet potatoes, cooked, peeled and mashed, 3 T lemon juice and 1 tsp. salt. Beat in 1/2 stick butter, softened, 2 egg yolks and lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste. Transfer the mixture to a buttered 1½ qt. casserole, top it with lemon slices and brush the top with melted butter. Bake the casserole in a slow oven, 325 degrees, for 45 min., or until heated through. Serves 8.

* * *

Just about all that is left to do now that the shopping is done and the holiday bird is waiting to be stuffed, is to take to the kitchen. Newlyweds faced with the mysteries of cooking their first Thanksgiving dinner may wish to know that bacteria likes warm room temperatures and if the turkey is frozen, it should be thawed in the refrigerator, not the kitchen sink. Food such as milk, eggs, poultry, meats, fish, stuffings and gravy should never be left on the counter, but refrigerated immediately. Keep this in mind so that when you use leftovers you won't end up with acute indigestion from this

DEEP DISH TURKEY PIE

3/4 c. Kellogg's Croutettes
2/3 c. milk
1 can (10½ oz.) condensed cream of celery soup
1½ to 2 c. cooked turkey, in large pieces
1 c. frozen peas
1 tsp. onion, chopped fine
Salt and pepper to taste
1 c. croutettes, crushed
1/4 c. melted butter or margarine

Place 3/4 c. seasoned croutons on bottom of 1½ qt. casserole. Set aside. Combine milk and soup. Stir until well mixed. Add turkey, thawed peas, onion, salt and pepper. Pour into casserole. Sprinkle with crushed croutons and pour melted butter over casserole. Bake 45 min. in 300 degree oven, uncovered. Serves 4 to 5 and freezes well.

Everything has its drawbacks — even an invitation to Thanksgiving dinner, for what is so awful as life without leftovers the next day? Without a turkey sandwich, a drumstick, or slice of cold mince pie, the holiday weekend is almost a total loss. I'd even miss turkey soup the way Charlene Lawson makes it.

LAST OF THE TURKEY SOUP

1 turkey carcass
2 celery stalks with leaves
1 large sliced onion
1/2 bay leaf
Salt and pepper to taste
Water to cover carcass
4 sliced carrots
1 large diced turnip
2 large potatoes, diced
1 c. uncooked egg noodles

Place turkey in slow cooker with celery, onion, bay leaf, salt and pepper. Cover carcass with cold water. Cover pot and cook on low 8-12 hours. Remove bones. Leave meat. Put soup in large bowl and place in refrigerator until fat congeals on top. Skim off fat. Return soup to slow cooker. Add carrotts, turnip and potatoes. Cover and cook 4-6 hours on low. Just before serving, add noodles and cook uncovered on high for another 10-12 min.

The phone started ringing soon after last week's column with the recipe for the fruit cocktail dessert. In case you, too, are wondering, the no. 303 can is medium-sized, 15 to 16 oz.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING

Soccer coaching courses offered by SCORE

"SCORE," a program of soccer coaching courses and specialty clinics is available to area towns, recreation and school soccer organizations, by U.S. National Staff Coach and former pro player Stanley Startzell.

The coaching courses are designed to meet the needs of every coaching level. An eight hour introductory course includes practical sessions about organizing practices, utilizing fun games, teaching fundamental techniques and training for tactics. Youth and novice coaches, especially parents and those with no previous experience, will benefit from these sessions.

The 16-hour course examines more advanced teaching and training methods for junior and senior players and coaches. All sessions emphasize practical, pragmatic solutions to the problems and challenges facing coaches today.

Startzell, a former professional player with the New York Cosmos and Philadelphia Atoms Championship Teams, is a member of the United States Soccer Federation National Coaching Staff. More detailed information about the clinics and courses can be obtained from SCORE, Box E-6, 225 Lincoln St., Duxbury, 02332.

Dooley agrees to fire chief job

Hartford Fire Lt. Martin Dooley has agreed to salary terms and will sign a contract with selectmen Wednesday, Dec. 8.

Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said there remains slight contract language amendments but Dooley has agreed to a three-year contract with a starting salary of $28,000.

He will receive a six percent salary increase for the second year of his contract and another six percent for the third year. However, his contract may be renegotiated during the third year at which time Dooley and selectmen will review his work record.

For two weeks Dooley negotiated with selectmen and the Personnel Board. The two parties were about $2,000 apart on a starting salary.

Revaluation project will begin anew

Monday's special town meeting paved the way for Cohasset to solve two of its more pressing problems — tax money and more efficient government operations.

Property tax bills will be sent to homeowners within two weeks as the state has approved Cohasset's plan to send out estimated tax bills in the absence of a completed property reassessment.

Voters appropriated $116,800 to start the 100 percent revaluation project again.

Last week, assessors awarded Appraisal Consultants of New England Corporation of Taunton the revaluation project.

The firm will begin work Dec. 27 and is scheduled to submit data to the state Sept. 30. The company will post a performance bond guaranteeing the work will be completed and will continue to revise the work until it is accepted by the state.

The estimated tax bills will be identical to last year's bills. Payment by Dec. 31 will allow homeowners to receive federal tax credits. Another estimated tax bill will be sent in April. These two bills will amount to last year's tax.

Assessors Chairman Brian Wilkin said payment by Dec. 31 will also allow Cohasset to pay back a $1.5 million note. "We would appreciate payment as soon as possible so we don't have to roll over the note."

Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton advised taxpayers to call their banks to ensure payment to the town before the end of the year.

The town was forced to borrow to pay municipal expenses because the state denied the town's original

Monday's town meeting

Five selectmen side triumphs...

By Mike Berger

Cohasset voters want a five-member board of selectmen. Support for a three-member board dwindled from 196 in August to 172 voters Monday night.

A standing-room crowd of over 500 voters packed Cohasset High School auditorium and voiced overwhelming support for an expanded board.

The final vote was 172 in favor of rescinding an August Special Town Meeting vote and re-establishing a three-member board with 333 voters opposed.

The vote produced two surprises. The Advisory Committee voted to support the results of the August article.

Advisory Board member Paul Neelon, changed his mind and supported the August vote because he felt the article came before Monday's meeting in an improper fashion. Selectmen submitted the article after a request by one citizen.

Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter and Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the article is legal because it was submitted before a new selectman was elected to the board. They were given an informal opinion by the attorney general's office.

Another surprise was the support given to the August vote by Selectman Mary Jane McArthur who spoke to voters offering her own opinion and "not those of the board" of selectmen.

Last week, selectmen endorsed Article 3. McArthur voted against the proposal. McArthur said she favored a three-man board, but she could not endorse rescinding the article.

Chairman Henry Ainslie said he has consistently been in favor of a three-man board. He said a five-member board would "not enable us to accomplish more — it might mean we accomplish less. I can't say we will go out of business if we have it, but I feel a smaller board is better."

Laugelle agreed with Ainslie and added that although the present board never encouraged residents to rescind the previous town meeting vote, "the more I think of it, it should remain three."

Lucia Woods of 231 Jerusalem Road asked selectmen to draw up the article rescinding the Aug. 30 special town meeting article.

She told selectmen she would not have had enough time to gather the required signatures by the Nov. 3 deadline. Her personal attorney advised her not to submit the article but had learned from the attorney general's office the article could be re-submitted at another special town meeting.

Lucia Woods proposes three selectmen.

Mary Jane McArthur opposes rescinding the article.

But two sewer commissioners quit

...So does the alternative sewer plan

Cohasset voters accepted an alternative sewer plan at special town meeting.

By a vote of 184 to 173, residents said they wanted the alternative proposed by Charles DeSantis, a Cohasset resident.

The vote means scrapping a $13.7 million sewer system and has caused the resignations of two Sewer Commission members.

Gerard Stanton, chairman, and Janet Daggett submitted resignations to Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie following the vote. The resignations are effective immediately. This leaves the commission with one member and a special election may be called to replace the resigned members.

Daggett said the will of the people has spoken but she could not serve the town as a sewer commission member and face a contempt of court citation.

The state has threatened to withdraw funding and see that Cohasset gets no federal aid for sewer projects unless the town goes ahead with the $13.7 million Sohier Street project.

Earlier, Thomas McMahon of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering wrote that he would seek an immediate contempt citation against the town for violating a 1979 out-of-court settlement.

Cohasset paid the state $10,000 in the settlement. The state refrained from enforcing construction deadlines as long as the town proceeded with the project in good faith.

Stanton said he was extremely reluctant to resign but said he would not be part of any acuon which would be in contempt of court and could not "in good conscience" remain and implement another alternative sewer plan.

He added that Monday's vote shows the sewer board has lost the confidence and "good will" of the people.

In his presentation, DeSantis urged cheaper alternatives and stressed town officials should not bow to state threats.

He said if voters chose to stick with the $13.7 million plan, it would cost the town $513,000 annually for five years.

His motion called for suspending, but not

Dennis Kowal is more than eligible

By Mike Berger

The Boston Herald American called Dennis Kowal of Jerusalem Road one of the area's 150 "Most Eligible Bachelors."

Boston Magazine called Kowal one of 82 people to watch in 1982.

Kowal takes these awards seriously. They are not a joke to him.

He considers himself first and foremost a professional; a role model to other bachelors and waging a battle — a "war against mediocrity and loneliness."

The Herald American and Boston Magazine noted Kowal for his work as a sculptor.

His work has been represented in over 50 private collections, 18 major public commissions, 25 one-man shows and over 200 group exhibitions.

His work can be seen at the DeCordova Museum, the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, Babson College, Milton Academy and the Ravinia Fine Arts Festival inChicago.

A university professorship for 12 years resulted in his co-authorship of a technical book on sculpture and an artist-in-residency at Dartmouth College, University of Georgia and Amherst College.

He has been reported in "Who's Who in America" and "Who's Who in American Art."

Cohasset's week . . .

Shellfishing prohibited

The Board of Health has been advised by the State Division of Water Pollution Control that shellfishing is prohibited from Windmill Point, Cohasset to Strawberry Point, Scituate.

This closure is a result of a treatment plant malfunction in Cohasset, which resulted in the discharge of untreated sewage into the James Brook. The closure will remain in effect until further notice.

Lobsters are exempt from this closure.

Alcohol Service open house

Coastal Alcohol Services of the South Shore (CASSS), a new community service program of Coastal Community Counseling Center, has opened its doors at 1 Cliveden St., Quincy and will host an open house celebration Thursday, Dec. 9 from 4 to 6 p.m.

Cohasset and Scituate residents will be served by CASSS programs.

Michael Obolensky, Program Director, said, "The program will focus on early identification of alcohol related problems, and will serve adolescents as well as adults."

Various individual and group programs will be aimed at helping alcohol troubled individuals and others to find healthy ways of coping.

Information and appointments may be obtained by calling 849-1220, which is also a 24-hour emergency phone number.

Town meeting adjournment

Monday's special town meeting adjourned at 12:35 a.m. as 210 voters stayed after midnight to complete the warrant. The legal quorum for a special town meeting is 200 voters.

Open meeting law

The state's open meeting law requires government officials to post notice of any local government panel 48 hours in advance and 24 hours in emergency. This was not the case Tuesday morning, Nov. 23 as the town moderator, chairman of the advisory board and the selectmen chairman met at town counsel's office to discuss Monday's town meeting. Although the meeting was known to the media, the law requires all government meetings involving officials should be posted in the town clerk's office.

New police contract

Monday's special town meeting approved a new two-year police union contract and appropriated $25,389 to pay for the expenses of the first year. Personnel Board Chairman Clifford Mitman said the salary increases were six percent each year and added $50 for a clothing allowance and $100 for longevity and education benefits. One officer will be appointed a detective with a $500 bonus and a civilian dispatcher will be hired after an 18th patrolman is hired. Officer salaries are: $16,414 for a beginning patrolman, with successive grades of $16,800, $17,186 and $17,761. Second year salaries are $17,399 for a beginning patrolman, $17,808, $18,217 and $18,827. The sergeant's salary for the first year will be $19,715 and $20,898 for the second year. The lieutenant's salary will be $21,884 for the first year and $23,197 for the second year. The contract was ratified by the police officer's union. Mitman said the contract was similar to contracts offered by area towns but suggested the town must increase its salaries to attract qualified contracts.

Berger named new Cohasset editor

Staff reporter Mike Berger has been appointed the new community editor of the Cohasset Mariner, publisher David Cutler announced this week. He succeeds Patricia Desmond who is now publisher of the Hingham Mariner.

A 1978 graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst with a major in Journalism and English, Berger came to the Mariner Newspapers in the spring of 1981 following three years as a general assignment reporter with the Gardiner (Daily) News...

He is a former stringer with the Associated Press and United Press International and at U-Mass. was assistant sports editor of the Daily Collegian. He interned at Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly before joining the Daily News.

Mike began his stay at the Mariner in Hingham and moved to covering Scituate and Cohasset late last spring.

He and his wife, the former Linda Schubarth, are expecting their first child in late January.

Update from Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

With the change in administration only a few weeks away, the Legislature has a lot to accomplish between now and the first week in January.

Chief among the controversial issues is the capital punishment bill. A conference committee (three members of the House and three from the Senate) must agree to a compromise which must then be agreed to by both the House and Senate before going to the Governor.

The bottle bill is another matter which will come before the Legislature. It is another matter on which the public has already cast several votes. At issue now is whether to extend its implementation.

Capital Outlay Budgets for special low interest housing and bonding authorities will also undergo legislative action in the final weeks of the year, as will legislation calling for the elimination of a price control on cigarettes in order to dedicate a certain amount of the cigarette tax for scholarship assistance.

Another bill expected to come up is the blue law legislation which, if adopted, would allow retail stores to be open on Sunday.

Currently, stores are allowed to be open on Sundays from Thanksgiving until Christmas only.

Village Fair (no. 47) bows Saturday

By Patricia Anne Walsh

"This is the 42nd year of the Village Fair," said Denise Desmond, chairman, "and I don't know of any other ecumenical fair where five churches participate."

Originally a collaboration of the Unitarian, Episcopal and Congregational churches of Cohasset Common, they were joined in their fundraising efforts six years ago by St. Anthony's Catholic Church, and last year by the Panagia Greek Church located in North Cohasset.

"I especially want to thank the local merchants for their generous donations, as well as over 200 workers, many of whom have made items at home and donated them," said Desmond.

The fair will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 4, in five buildings around the Common.

Last year the fair grossed $15,460. The five churches split the $10,342 profit with each church receiving over $2,000.

Jean Manganaro, chairman of the decorated green wreaths, needs helpers from 9:30 to 3:30 Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 1 and 2 at the Congregational Church.

"Even if you have not been called, please make something for the food and candy table," said Rachel White and Nancy Ripley, co-chairmen. Food may be dropped off at the Town Hall, before 9:30 on Saturday morning, and all donations such as bargains, plants, books, etc., may be dropped off at Town Hall all day Friday.

Diana Pereira, chairman of the Boutique, says she will have doggy bone wreaths, stuffed Christmas tree centerpieces, grapevine and sea heather wreaths, Victorian tree ornaments, crocheted door pulls, soft sculpture Mr. and Mrs. Claus, decorated baskets, and hundreds of other articles for sale. Groups of workers have met days and evenings since September hand-making novelties.

Carol Sandblom and Marsha Silvia, who head the Children's Table, have hand-knitted sweaters, hats and mittens; bear and lion TV rugs; patchwork pillows; stuffed animals; and Christmas tree decorations for children.

Ayn DeVoisin, chairman Kitchen Crafts, says they are featuring herbal wreaths, hand-made aprons, tea cosies, placemat and napkin sets and napkin rings.

Deanna Mulligan wrapped 445 packages containing candies and a prize to be sold as 25 cent grabs for children at the Town Hall. Mulligan is grateful to John Pereira for donating most of the sweets.

Jane Marshall is running the "Secret Room" at the Congregational Church for youngsters only. They may purchase presents for their parents in private and the gifts will be wrapped before they leave the room.

A Greek dinner hosted by Michael Valla, a noted restauranteur, and Jean Syrmopoulos, both from the Panageia Church, will be held at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church at 7 p.m., with roast lamb and rice pilaf on the menu.

Marilyn DeVos and Jean Syrmopoulos are co-chairmen of the Bargain Bazaar, and Priscilla Seddon and Ruth Nedrow will prepare tacos at the Unitarian Parish House.

Jeff Steele is in charge of Santa Claus and his helpers who will be on the Town Common taking polaroid pictures of children with Santa.

Charles DeSantis will direct the Children's Midway at the Community Center.

Parishioners coordinating other events are Fred Howe, Raffle; Hamilton Tewksbury, Cheese; Marilyn Hobson, Popcorn; Eve Sedell, Plant Table; Philip Shockman, Snack Bar; Robert Beggan, Chowder Bar; Alice Daunt and Helen Hooper, Books; and Peter O'Loughlin, Balloons.

Desmond said she is very grateful to Procurement and Donations Chairman Karen Spencer. Spencer has also been responsible for the central purchasing of supplies.

Dooley contract...

Lt. Dooley sought a starting salary in the range of $30,000.

Selectmen were offering a salary in the range of $28,000.

Dooley told selectmen he would like to give the Hartford Fire Department between two weeks and a month's notice before coming to Cohasset.

Save Friday for the Christmas stroll

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association invite all area residents to the Christmas Stroll Friday, December 3.

A hayride with Santa will take place between 4 and 6 p.m.

Cohasset Cub Scouts and Brownies will sing Christmas carols from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. on the steps of St. Stephen's Church in the Village.

All merchantss will remain open until 9 p.m. for shopping and refreshments.

Snowflake Fair falls this Saturday

The Beechwood Congregational Church, 53 Church St., will sponsor a Snowflake Fair Saturday, Dec. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

May Merritt is the general chairwoman. The Church Fellowship Hall will be filled with various tables displaying the Christmas spirit.

Coffee, tea, cold drink and Judy O'Donovan's fried bread dough will be available throughout the day.

The aroma of clam chowder fills the air as Connie Jones, Flossie Cogill and Eunice Clark will prepare a luncheon of chowder, crackers, pickles, coffee or tea and cake and ice cream. Lunch will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Linda Mitchell and Marion Moulton will supervise a work table which displays varied talents of church members. Hand-made and knitted items are a few of the items displayed for sale.

Fresh green wreaths decorated by Barbara Campbell and Linda Graves will brighten a door or wall and fill a home with the scent of pines and evergreens.

Cheryl Kristiansen and Cindy Carlisle will supervise.

A food table with cake, cookies, breads and pies is also available.

A candy table displaying beach glass candy will be on sale. Each jar is filled with spearmint, peppermint, lemon, lime, wintergreen, licorice, clove, cinnamon and orange. Homemade fudge and other candies will also be on sale.

Emma Damon and Grace Mitchell will supervise the white elephant table. The plant table directed by Marion Ellis will display poinsettias and other plants. New styles and designs by church members will be directed by Roberta Richardson and Ruth Stoddard.

Santa will visit around 2 p.m.

Revaluation begins anew...

request. State officials demanded a strict timetable from the town to complete revaluation.

Assessors have alleged appraiser Thomas Mahony defaulted on this contract to complete the original revaluation work. The town is suing him for $125,000 for failure to satisfy the contract. His residential property revaluation figures were rejected last year because of incomplete data.

Wilkin said the board and Mahony had underestimated the job's complexity and tried to reassess the town at a bargain price. He also blamed assessors for "being lax in supervision."

He promised voters his board would keep a close watch on the new firm. He said the Taunton assessors have excellent references and are recommended by the state.

Donna McGee of the Town Government Structure Committee said missed property assesssment deadlines have been a problem for several years. She said questions yet to be answered, include whether assessors should be appointed or elected, should there be a full-time tax appraiser and should property assessment be completed by an appraisal firm.

A 1978 town meeting recommended the tax rate should be set 30 days after the annual town meeting, after release of state aid figures or by Sept. 1.

The $116,800 appropriation was the largest expenditure by town meeting. Town Accountant Bill Signorelli said Cohasset received more revenue than anticipated in April.

A one-time MBTA reimbursement of $81,437, a smaller Water Department deficit, new construction, $54,000 less in tax abatements and more state aid gave voters $249,000 to spend.

Approval of the revaluation project, a new police contract, a new computer and $10,000 for sewer engineering plans will cost nearly $246,189.

NEW COMPUTER

Cohasset will have a new $90,000 computer by the start of the next fiscal year in July.

John Keane told voters Monday the new computer would be useful for as many as seven years and would improve government information reporting and the town's credit rating.

Departments benefiting from the computer include assessors and tax collecting, town accountant, water, sewer, police, town clerk and schools.

Tax bills will be sent out a week or two earlier and the town clerk will be able to quickly update voter and street lists.

Signorelli will supervise computer operations but no new personnel will be added. Computer expenses will equal or be less than present contract costs awarded outside companies to complete billing procedures.

The School Department will be able to process student report cards, schedules and attendance records and will improve accounting procedures to the Advisory Committee.

Keane, acting as a consultant, said town departments were excited about the new equipment and "expressed a desire to cooperate."

Five selectmen side triumphs...

Woods said it was wrong to overturn a form of government which had served the town for over 200 years at a special town meeting during the summer.

She said nearly 83 percent of communities with similar populations to Cohasset had three-member boards and the added cost of $2,000 for selectmen salaries would raise a financial hardship.

She said town hall space is limited and the executive secretary needs an office of his own. Woods added the August 21 margin vote was not a strong mandate. Woods said the August vote was highly emotional because of the fire chief selection committee's final selection of out-of-town candidates.

Tom Churchill said actions by the three-member board since the August special town meeting proved a five-member board was needed. "Now, I'm more sure we need five."

One resident asked, "If the town can't elect three qualified selectmen, can it elect five?"

Linda Henderson said if the voters intention was to replace the current selectmen, an expanded board would allow the current selectmen to return without much opposition.

Richard Leggatt of Atlantic Avenue added Cohasset's growing population meant more responsibility and new constituencies.

"The ultimate test is the quality of people who are going to run. Where you have malaise or anxiety, there is safety in numbers. The town should have better than what it is getting."

Doris Golden said the argument that major restructuring of town government should be done at the annual town meetings hasn't been proved in the past. A special town meeting two years ago reduced the school committee from six to five members. She added there are already reports of two candidates for the new selectmen's positions.

"The need for an experienced board has not changed but selectmen have shown there have been no strong policies set regarding alternatives to civil service," she said.

Several personnel transfers and resignations haven't helped the town either, she added.

Donna McGee of the Government Restructuring Committee said her committee still supports the three-member board concept and the decision to expand should be postponed to the town meeting for more research.

Following the vote on Article 3, Dan Cotton's motion for the Government Restructuring Committee to take a fresh look at town government and report to the April town meeting was approved.

Editorial

Still inspires

The event never ceases to give us goose bumps. Half a thousand and nine ordinary citizens give up their Monday night football (or the equivalent) to do for themselves what kings once did for them, and what in too many countries commissars still do to them.

Special town meeting is never without its windiness and its irrelevant remarks. But it never ceases to inspire or to grant us hope that the enormously complicated problems of this world remain soluble in such form.

A few observations, some whimsical, some serious, on Monday night's special town meeting.

...The star of the show was again Moderator Bill Weeks, who is a "moderator" in the etymological sense: he moderates his fellow townsmen, he tones them down, and he brings out the best in them. We are highly fortunate to have him, but it is perhaps a comment on the general decline of politics in Massachusetts that Bill Weeks didn't long ago find his niche in state or national office.

...The "nonstar" of the show was the noise in the vestibule, noise created by smokers, blabbers, and even constables. It pained us to see senior citizens in the back of the hall straining to hear over the din to their rear.

...Some speakers take too long in getting to the point, even a good point. The truth is some Scituate voters we have heard, though generally less articulate than Cohasset's, are better at calling a spade a spade without what the psychologists call "perseverating."

...Richard Leggett stated the case for democracy when he said, "The best government is the government of one...provided the one is Solomon!"

...The best argument against the five man board of selectmen was the number of speakers in favor of the motion who just couldn't go home without putting in their two cents' worth. We pray that not every member of the coming five man board will consider their meager stipend unearned if they occasionally shut the devil up!

...Did we imagine it, or did Rocco Laugelle blush when Doris Golden said, "You should stop voting for the pretty face!"

...Mr. Kearney, who recalled, "As I remember back in 1801 there were only 150 people in town," looked remarkably fit. Some time we must ask him about the 1834 Stanley Cup.

...Linda Henderson of Jerusalem Road made one point everyone else seemed to miss and one with which we heartily disagreed.

Her insight was that the passing of the five man board helps, it does not hurt, the chances of the incumbents for reelection. Look at it this way. For Mr. Ainslie, who comes up next year, to be reelected under the three man board he would have to come in first. But under the five man boad he would be reelected if he came in third.

Where we disagree with Mrs. Henderson is her statement that "if you like the present selectmen you're for three, if you dislike them, then you're for five." In our view we make a great error at any level of government when we confuse inept personnel with inept structure. The structure of government must, as Madison repeatedly argued, be prepared to house both the good and the bad. The cure for inept office holders is elections; it is never hysterical structural alterations.

...Mary Jane McArthur seemed to be separating herself from her colleagues both in her remarks and in her, well, situation. Where she chose to sit separated her from Mr. Ainslie and Mr. Laugelle by Mr. Thaxter and by two other bodyguard-looking types.

...When Charles DeSantis goes at it with the Advisory Committee's Bartow it's like Tunney and Dempsey — a heavyweight class act on both parts.

...Best received member of the audience was John DeBassio. He reminded us of Ted Williams striding into Red Sox training camp after a winter on the Maramichi.

...The selectmen took a few shots at town meeting, but we'll tell you this: We've taken a few shots at the selectmen ourselves, always, we hope, over issues, not personalities.

But the "shots" we have taken have never produced anything but a class act on the part of the members of the board. Some weeks our reporters have walked into town hall in the shadow of stern editorial comments the reporters themselves had nothing to do with. Our reporters have met with nothing but graciousness from Mr. Ainslie, Mr. Laugelle, and Mrs. McArthur.

In Scituate, on the other hand, we've sometimes praised selectmen save for commenting on the occasional "hair out of place." Lord, you should hear the bleating that goes on!

In selectmen's races we don't endorse and we don't not endorse. But before our votes go changing the roster of town fathers, we suggest they look at the record in its entirety.

Selectmen briefs . . .

SMALL ALLOWED TO FINISH PROBATION

Selectmen voted last week, 2-1, to allow Officer John Small to finish out his probation period and continue on to permanent status on the Cohasset Police Department.

This action was approved, despite charges by Officer Small's supervisors that he is not qualified to be appointed a permanent officer.

During the hearing last Tuesday night which was requested to remain open by Officer Small, Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie read several confidential correspondences from the officer's supervisors, suggesting the former auxiliary officer not be permanently appointed. When Officer Small finishes his probation period he will automatically be named a permanent officer, unless selectmen authorize otherwise.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur voted not to allow Officer Small to be named a permanent patrolman. She said the town should set high standards to attract high quality candidates to the police department. She maintained that an officer should at least have an associate degree and continue his law enforcement education throughout his career. A future police officer should also command the respect of his peers, which Small does not, she said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle disagreed, and said McArthur's standards are "quite high for the pay they're (police) getting."

Ainslie said some of the charges leveled against the young officer were "nitpicking" and he added he would not be "a party to discharging someone, or nipping a career in the bud based on the charges alleged in here (letters submitted in confidence to selectmen from police supervisors).

EXECUTIVE SECRETARY INTERVIEWS

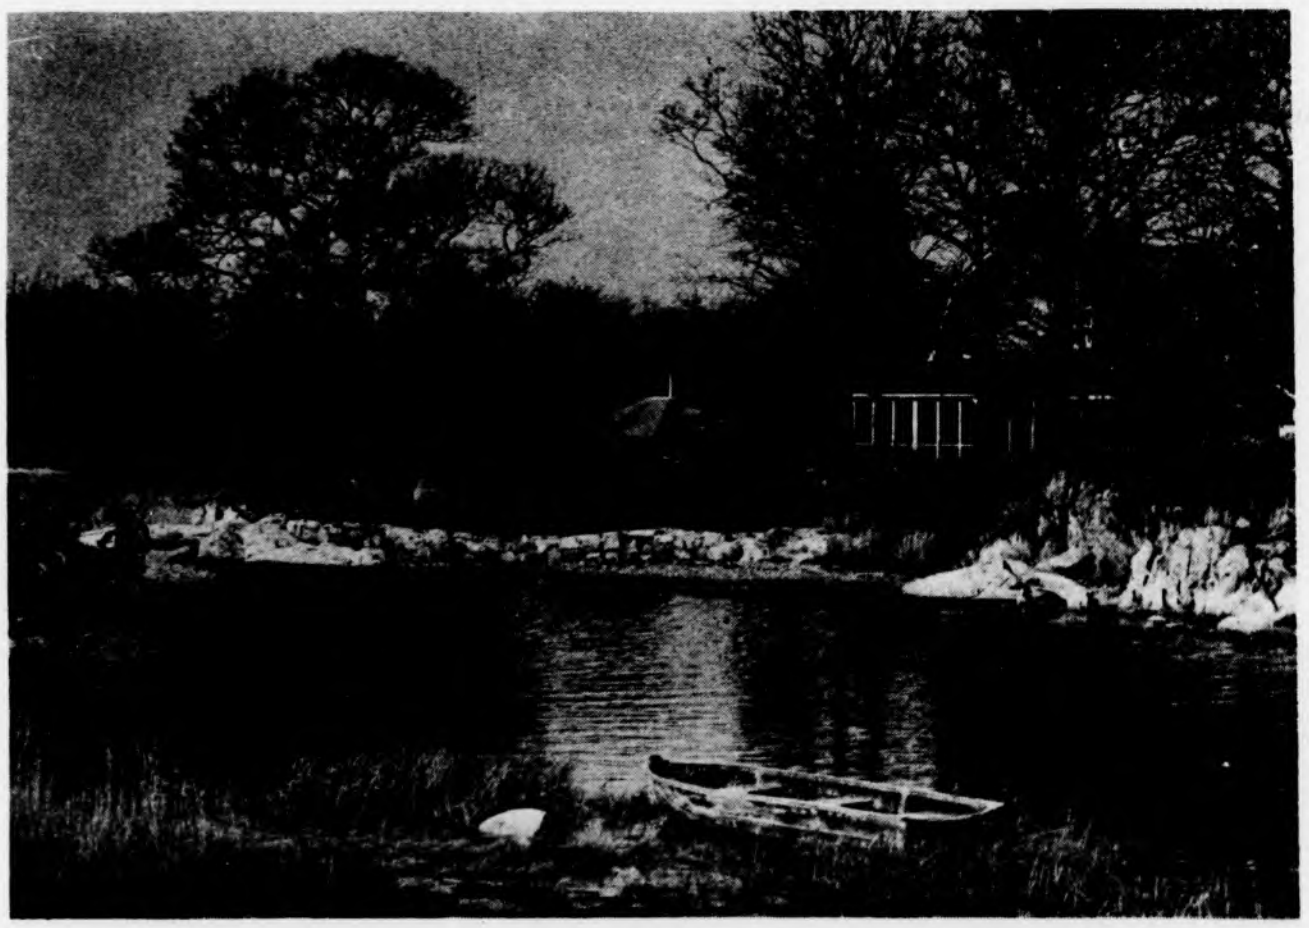
Selectmen have scheduled interviews for the position of executive secretary for Dec. 6 and 7, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Selectmen received 30 applications for the post which is being vacated by Arthur Clark. Five persons will be interviewed during the two sessions. There are nine applicants selectmen will use as backup candidates.

STREET LIGHT CONVERSION

Selectmen approved the first year conversion of the electric lights along several main streets in town. The lights will be converted to sodium vapor lights, which will save the town $2,764 the first year by using less wattage, but will provide more lighting.

After reading correspondence from a resident regarding the lack of lighting at the crosswalk at the corner of First Parish Church selectmen voted to add a 70-watt sodium vapor light at the location. Selectmen approved the suggestion because so many organizations meet at the First Parish and the location is dark at night.

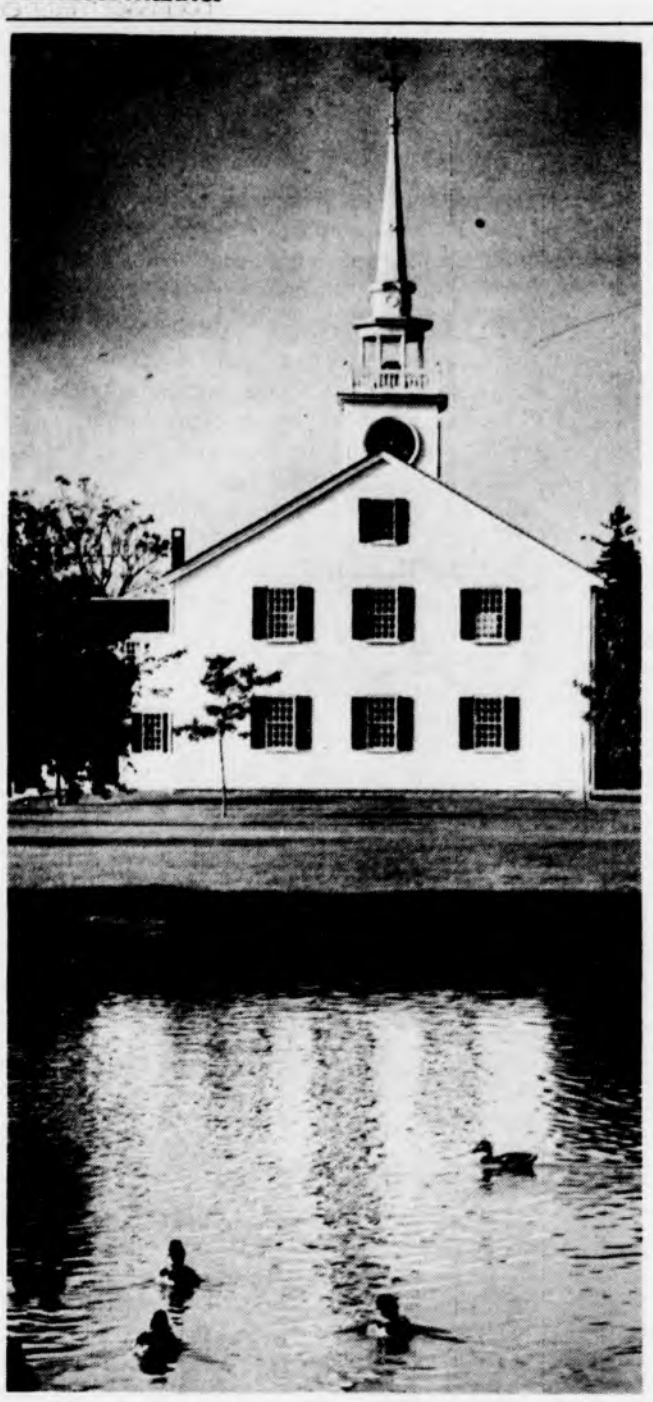
OFFICERS PRAISED



Selectmen voted to send a letter of commendation to Officers John Rhodes and Brian Noonan, congratulating them on their recent assistance to the Scituate Police. The two Cohasset police officers responded to a call Nov. 19 from Scituate Police that an armed assailant was leaving Scituate along Rte. 3A. The two officers stopped a vehicle and arrested a man who was carrying a loaded .357 magnum revolver in the car. The man was arrested following a shooting at a Lawson Road home in Scituate.

Selectman Laugelle applauded the officers for a "whale of a job."

FENCE VIEWER NEEDED



Selectmen are still seeking an appointment for Fence Viewer. According to selectmen, a fence viewer is responsible for resolving any boundary disputes or squabbles which may arise between neighbors. A viewer may determine if a certain fence is too high, or spiked, or on another's property. All interested applicants should apply to the selectmen's office.

Geriatric worker joins service league

By Ellen Woolf, Social Service League

Thanks to a geriatric counselling grant provided by the South Shore Elder Services, Inc., the Social Service League has recently been able to add the professional services of geriatric social worker Judy Basmajian to its staff.

Besmajian has been working one day a week since May in the five towns served by the South Shore Elder Services (Cohasset, Hull, Hingham, Norwell, Scituate). She reports her visits, mostly in-home, make it a "full day." She often finishes her cases long after office hours are over.

Besmajian knows her territory. Born in Boston, she has been a resident of Cohasset for 23 years and all of her five children attended local schools.

During the years she was raising her family, Judy's volunteer community involvement was aimed at the professional position she now holds. As a board member of the Social Service League, she was an initiator of the Senior Shuttle, and chaired the Meals-on-Wheels program, as well as the Casework Committee.

Besmajian's professional background attests to a lifelong committment to helping others. A graduate of Radcliffe College, she received her M.S. in Social Work from Simmons College in 1953. While at Simmons she worked at Beth Israel in the Outpatient Social Service Clinic and at Children's Hospital, where she continued working after graduation at the Children's Mission, dealing with the physical and emotional problems of children.

With her family almost grown — the eldest is 28 and the youngest 16 — Judy has returned to full-time social work. In addition to her work on the South Shore, Judy has been on the staff of a nursing home in Jamaica Plain as social worker and consultant for the past five years.

Her work with the Social Service League involves a fascinating variety of activities all crammed into her one day a week: home visits to regular clients, special one-time appointments with elders who may have temporary physical or emotional problems, psychiatric counselling, referrals to other agencies and regular meetings with Social Service League social worker Carolyn Houseman. Judy averages four or five visits one day each week in the five-town area.

With the addition of Judy Besmajian to its staff, the Social Service League is confident that it is closer to reaching its goal of meeting the needs of the community's elderly. As Judy points out, the elderly are often reluctant to make use of available community services. "We hope," she says, "that with our increased availability, no one with physical, emotional, social or economic need will hesitate to call the Social Service office and inquire about our services. After all, that's why we're here."

The telephone number of the Cohasset Social Service League office, located in St. Stephen's Church, is 383-0771.

Mourning the demise of the daily

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

Commentary

Moving reading in this week's Mariner is Bucky Yardume's piece about the decline and fall of all but one and a fraction of Metropolitan Boston's daily newspapers. As T.V. stations switch hairsprays, we mean anchors, and as radio stations switch from news to talk to punk to country western according to what the market will bear, the demise of the metropolitan daily is the more to be mourned.

These papers could, of course, be scurrilous and biased. But they tended to attract brilliant, independent minds whether on the sports page or the editorial page. Today's broadcast media by definition do not collect minds, they collect faces (as in Tom Ellis), voices (as in Streeter Stewart), smiles (as in Joyce Kulhawick), and royal families (as in Chet and Natalie Jacobson).

Nowhere in this modern form of alleged journalism do you find the Bill Cunninghams, the Harold Kaeses, or the Bucky Yardumes — the probing yet compassionate reporters who used to give the great newspapers of the past their human face. The broadcast media cover human beings the same way they cover the zoo — in "special segments" now and then.

But whether you admire Queen Natalie or envy her, remember this: On the day that her Wellesley High '62 persona stops bringing in megabucks for her corporate sponsors she will be gonzo along with Bozo, Matt Dillon, Princess Summerfallwinterspring and the other sidekicks of media profits past.

When that happens most of the public's hard information will still come from the print media. The decline of the metropolitan print media probably means that your best information will then come from your local print media ... the Mariner, the Mirror and the Ledger.

These are the places where real people still unfettered by stardom — people like Mike Berger, Judy Foley, Jane Lane, Lois Martin, and Bucky Yardume — still strive to bring you good, hard, honest news in the tradition of the giants of the printed past.

Not for their want of hairspray will these folks ever get fired, and not for their want of trying will they ever fail to bring you the news you desire and deserve.

Barbershop Christmas concerts

The South Shore Men of Harmony Barbershop Chorus will present two concerts of barbershop harmony and Christmas music during December.

The first free concert is planned for all South Shore senior citizens and will be given Sunday, Dec. 12 at 2 p.m. in North Weymouth High School. People interested in attending should contact their local Council on Aging for tickets.

The second concert will be presented for Hanover senior citizens and the students of Cardinal Cushing School at the school Thursday evening, Dec. 16.

Chorus quartets including the Taste of Harmony, the Outsiders, the Sound Foundation and Yankee Ingenuity will participate in the two shows.

The South Shore Men of Harmony, under the direction of Jim Millar of Rockland, is in its 28th year and has some 85 members from 17 area towns. The chorus rehearses each Thursday evening at the Jack Conway Real Estate building, Rte. 53, Hanover. Men of all ages who enjoy singing four part harmony are invited to attend.

Voke Tech smoking area

The student council at the South Shore Vocational Technical School in Hanover wants to establish a smoking area on the school grounds to keep the bathrooms pollution-free, but some members of the school board don't like the idea.

Student council representative Ann Barry outlined a plan to set up an outside smoking area for students for before and after school and during lunch. The students hope to keep the air in the bathrooms cleaner by permitting smoking outside.

Students would have to be 18 and have their parents permission to smoke in the area, which would be supervised by students and faculty members who usually monitor the cafeterias.

Two of the seven members of the regional school board opposed the arrangement. Robert Molla Jr. of Norwell and John Doyle of Rockland both spoke against the plan, although the proposal isn't expected to go before the committee formally until December.

Doyle compared the plan to giving the students "a drop of poison," and Molla said the area could become "an open-air pot shop."

acrylic, plastic materials and bronze. He is recognized as a pioneer in the use of carved acrylic and solid steel.

One recent work, "Winged Migration No. 2," commissioned by the National Fire Protection Association, stands over 13 feet tall and its Corten steel weighs over 6.5 tons.

He is often asked, "what is it?" and "What the hell were you thinking about?"

His explanation: "Using words to communicate with others about visual things is terribly difficult; worse to explain sculpture.

"We do not use sculpture to explain words. Yet, that is the problem. Especially today, when the vicarious experience substitutes for actual participation, words are increasingly a substitute for things.

"To explain, literally, a fleeting concept of the mind, one can talk all around, using allusions, reference, metaphor and often in my case, an ironic clue, ambivalent, demanding of others that they make a matching commitment toward understanding that there is indeed something before them, that it is life enriching and that it takes — time."

Kowal said his sculpture shows a refinement of faith in certain concepts — the most absolute being basic life itself.

"My works are aware of entropy and human scale — they are classical and sensual, symbolic and intuitive, archetypal — images imbued with historic connotations, they are a ritual of celebration — totems, ikons, monoliths, monuments and affirmations of live."

A BACHELOR

Kowal understands many a bachelor would like to be identified as a role model but he adds it comes with some loneliness attached.

Married twice, the 45 year-old father of three children said, "Man can exist independent of the traditional role of marriage. Yes, man can cook but it doesn't alleviate the problems of a relationship."

He realizes receiving these bachelor awards is fun but it's also serious. "You have to realize how incredibly lonesome these people are. We are not a frivolous piece of meat. This award carries with it a very serious human responsibility. Meeting people is a responsibility and what happens to you is also a serious responsibility.

"I think all artists share an intrinsic education and that is to instigate some dialogue, especially in your work. It seems to me that people take too much for granted. You can't buy your way out of responsibility."

Can man exist independently?

Yes, he can, Kowal answers, but it doesn't answer the questions of family, loving, caring, companionship and children.

He realizes making lots of money isn't enough and acknowledges being one of the best in the profession isn't enough either.

Kowal says he is at war with mediocrity. His philosophy is "to do the absolute best job with his talent regardless of money or any other consequences."

An average acrylic piece takes six months to a year to complete. But for Kowal, it's six months to a year of human energy spent.

Working as a sculptor means Kowal must be in good physical health because his work "possesses" him. He will work hour after hour in his studio barn which is his home. The barn has heat and electricity, a bedroom, living room, huge work area and a telephone.

"The skill of what I do is related to my physical health. So I must eat well and take good care of myself or else my work will suffer," Kowal said. To relax, he goes fishing.

His income is variable. Up until two months ago, he virtually had none. Usually, a major part of his earning goes back to his work to purchase more supplies.

Kowal acknowledges it is hard to live without knowing one's income from month to month. He added it's hard to be a New England artist because the New England tradition is "to be frugal, functional and practical."

Kowal has lived in Cohasset for 12 years and has worked as a sculptor for the past 20 years. After teaching in six different schools, he received a commission at the Massachusetts College of Art and was looking for a carriage barn. He found it on Jerusalem Road.

His love for sculpture began as a love for art in elementary school. In high school, he enrolled in tool design courses but once he went to the Art Institute of Chicago, his philosophy changed. He received a bachelor's desgree in Industrial Design and Engineering but sculpture captured him. "It captured my energy and completely consumed me."

In an article written for "Decade," a magazine of contemporary art culture, Kowal wrote, "Sculpture is what I do — it is my art — existential joy. No guarantees — artists are not professionals but they are their own best performer, audience and critic.

An arrangement of dried grasses, leaves, flowers and grain provide the necessary ingredients for an everlasting bouquet. Although the colors are mostly muted earth tones, brilliant autumnal hues are also available. After these materials have dried, they require no watering, and will last indefinitely. The most popular of the dried materials are classified as dried pods and leaves, flowers and berries, grasses and grains. Excessive humidity can be damaging to dried materials. To prevent damage, add a small amount of silica gel to the storage container to absorb moisture. Enjoy the natural look of flowers year round without ever having to replace them.

The holiday season will be in full swing now. At SIMONS GREENHOUSES, FLORISTS SHOP AND FARM STAND we can help you add a festive feeling to your home with lovely fresh flowers or floral arrangements. And at this time of year, you'll be happy to know that we make all of our own wreathes and have plantation grown Christmas trees. Come on out and see us. We're located on Rt. 123, where we're open daily. Most major credit cards accepted. 545-2400

Alternative sewer plan wins...

discarding, the existing sewer plan designed by the engineering firm of Metcalf and Eddy; hiring engineers for $10,000 to produce alternative plans; and negotiating with the state to avoid a lawsuit and penalties.

DeSantis said his alternative plan would bring the town's water pollution level within federal limits well in advance of the July, 1986, compliance date and would cost the town much less.

The actual savings was not detailed but DeSantis said whatever plan is accepted would not burden the town with $500,000 annual payments, incur financial hardships on major town departments and serve only 30 percent of the town's sewer needs.

One major aspect of DeSanti's presentation focused on the town of Granby's "innovative" and alternative solution to sewer problems.

The chairman of Granby Board of Health had told DeSantis his board would not bow to the state threats. Granby's alternatives included septic systems, gravity pipes, sludge management and pumps in individual homes and use of smaller pipes which could be installed in shallower holes.

Granby complied with pollution standards at $4.5 million and the town paid 10 percent of the figure or $450,000.

DeSantis said he looks at the town's newest clustered development condominium project on Pond Street and concludes that alternatives can be found. He said a sewer collecting system was built there for $210,000 and another $39,000 system was built on Atlantic Avenue "on the worst possible soil-bedrock."

DeSantis said he is eager to work with the Sewer Commission and wants to send letters to all qualified engineering firms inviting them to submit proposals.

He said town counsel should approach the state and tell officials negotiations should begin to modify an earlier agreement and establish a new timetable for Cohasset's compliance with federal regulations sooner than July 1986.

When asked what would happen to Metcalf and Eddy, DeSantis said the company is "on hold. If no alternative comes up, we will proceed with the present plan."

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson urged voters to reject DeSantis' proposal to avoid costly fines and to continue the "good faith effort."

He said Cohasset would not be found in contempt of court unless a federal sewer grant was offered and the town refused.

DeSantis said the narrow victory was aided by Jeffrey Bates, a Cohasset resident and environmental lawyer, who told voters "nothing is certain in litigation" and the town is not in violation of the consent agreement.

Opposed to the DeSantis article were the sewer commission, health board, Metcalf and Eddy, selectmen and the advisory board.

Stephen Bartow, representing the advisory board, said some of the arguments presented by DeSantis were valid but the board opposed the plan because no definite financial or environmental savings were outlined.

Barbara Kern, Health Board chairman, said Cohasset lot sizes were much smaller and not acceptable for on-site septic systems.

William Montouri of Brewster Road said Granby could support alternative systems because Granby has a smaller population and more square miles to dispose effluent.

Metcalf and Eddy and state engineers had argued they had studied other alternatives extensively and concluded the $13.7 million plant proposal was the best alternative. They argued that a new central facility was the answer and not an upgraded plant or on-site septic system.

Seahawks Invitational draws 24 teams to Cohasset

The First Annual Seahawk Invitational Hockey Tournament was held at the Cohasset Winter Gardens over the Veterans' Day weekend. Twenty-four teams from Northeastern US participated in the four day affair which was established as a fund-raiser for youth hockey in the Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset and Hull areas.

The tournament was dedicated in memory of Julian "Jack" Hartwell, former vice president of the Seahawks, who had died unexpectedly Sept. 25, 1982 in appreciation for his years of dedication to the program.

Jack's widow Mary and children presented the Championship Trophies to the Newton Bantams and Edgewood, R.I. Squirts and Pee Wees while Boston Bruin defenseman Mike O'Connell attended Sunday to sign autographs for the young hockey players.

In a fitting climax to an exciting tournament, Newton captured the Bantam crown by edging So. Boston 3-2 in the second period of sudden-death overtime.

The Seahawk Bantam A's just missed making the finals as they tied with So. Boston in this bracket, but lost out in the goals-scored tie-breaker. In their first contest, the A's downed Neponset 5-3. Jeff Hartwell led the offensive corps with two goals and three assists. Also scoring were Matt Glennon (2), and Mike Cooney.

Additional assists were credited to Glennon, Cooney and Kevin Richardson. In the second match, a 5-5 tie with Southie, Hartwell and Glennon had a pair of tallies each with Bobby Salvador notching the final score. Assists were garnered by Richardson (2), David Flaherty, Cooney and Jamie Chisholm. Glennon, Chisholm and Chris Tatum were the marksmen in goaltender John Belsan's 3-0 shutout of Essex, N.J. while Glennon (2) and Mike DiLorenzo had assists.

In another exciting bout, Edgewood, R.I. came on strong in the third period to beat Newton 5-3 and capture the Pee Wee A title.

The Seahawk Pee Wee A's also tied for the lead in their bracket but lost a trip to the finals in the goals-against tie-breaker. In their initial game the A's lost to Newton 4-2. Scott Cutliff and Danny Pompeo were the Seahawk "puck-poppers" while assists went to Rickie Chase (2), Pompeo and Andy Thomas.

The A's bounced back to down Brockton 4-1 in their second affair. Ned Flaherty, James Misakian and John Zimmer dented the nets while Cutliff, Andy Johnson, Thomas, Misakian and Pompeo registered assists.

Misakian, Pompeo and Thomas hit the bullseye in the Seahawks final game, a 3-2 win over Essex, N.J. while Jeremy Chalmers and Paul Norton earned assists.

Edgewood, R.I. shut out their Seahawk counterparts 3-0 to win the Squirt Championship. On their trip to the finals, the Seahawk Squirts had nipped Abington 4-3, crushed Duxbury 8-3, and whitewashed Newton 5-0 behind goaltender Damon Parsons. Mike Richardson, David Orpen, Jon Mahoney and Cole Hughes scored in the Abington affair while Richardson, Mahoney and Keith O'Connell had assists.

Mike Richardson (4), Jeffrey White (2), Mike Dundon and Brian Pompeo scored against Duxbury while Chris Sullivan (3), Mahoney (3), Orpen, White and Billy Lincoln had assists. In the Newton contest Pompeo (2), Lincoln, Mark Resnick and Richardson were the goal scorers while assists were by Lincoln (3), Mahoney (2), Resnick (2), and White.

SEAHAWK HI-LITES

The Seahawk youth hockey teams managed only four wins out of the 11 games reported by their coaches for the week ending Nov. 21.

Coach Lou DiLorenzo's Bantam A's succumbed to Quincy 7-5 despite a "hat trick" by Mattie Glennon. Chris Tatum and Philip Thomas notched the other goals while Tatum (2), Michael Cooney (2) and Kevin Richardson were credited with assists.

Coach Rick Sparrow's Bantam C's split a pair of games, nipping Marshfield 4-3 before losing to Plymouth 5-3. Rick Sparrow (2), Paul Ahern and John Goffar dented the nets against Marshfield while assists were metered out to Goffar (2), Gilbert Rebello, Danny Elmes and Brian McGovern. Goffar, Sparrow and Ron Morrison were the "target-busters" against Plymouth while assists went to John Meschino, Matt Sheehan and McGovern.

Coach Carney White's Pee Wee A's shaded Quincy 5-4 on a goal by Rickie Chase with two seconds left in the contest. Andy Johnson, Andy Thomas, Scott Cutliff and Danny Pompeo were the other A scorers while assists were registered by Cutliff, John Zimmer, Thomas, James Misakian, Pompeo and Ned Flaherty (2).

Coach Frank McGovern's Pee Wee B's also split a pair of contests, crushing Hyde Park 8-3 before being shut out by Quincy 5-0. Erik Steverman (2), Peter Buckley (2), Paul Norton (2), Pat Glennon, and Eric Meschino were the Seahawk marksmen against Hyde Park while Norton (2), Jason Clark, Billy Hingston, Danny Kessinger, Steverman and Kevin Quinn were credited with assists.

Coach Jim Consalvi's Pee Wee C's lost to the Brewins 3-2 and tied Duxbury 4-4. Christopher Gong netted the goals against the Brewins while Michael Meers and Karl Christ (2) received credit for assists. John Niland, Carmen Cimetti, P.J. Breen, and Steve Elmes scored against Duxbury while Niland, Elmes, and Tony Ventolieri had assists.

Coach Barry Resnick's SquirtA's fell to Quincy 6-5. Mike Richardson (2), Jeffrey White, Bobby DiVito and Sean Noonan hit the bullseye for the A's.

Coach Michael Dundon's Pee Wee B's lost to Braintree 1-0 despite the outstanding goaltending of Mike Dundon.

Coach James McGowan's youthful Mite skaters whitewashed Bridgewater-Taunton 5-0 behind the brilliant goaltending of Matthew Ventolieri. Goal scorers were Paul Frey, Tim Getto, John Resnick, Gary Dunham and David Lambie while Resnick, Lambie and Allison Salvador were credited with assists.

Skippers fight Duxbury to 0-0 tie

By Alana O'Brien

FOOTBALL

The CHS Skippers fought the Duxbury Dragons to a scoreless tie in a game of fumbles on Thanksgiving Day.

Each team made a lot of errors at the wrong time throughout the game.

In the second quarter Duxbury missed two scoring chances, fumbling once on the Skippers' 37 yard line and fumbling again on the 15 yard line with a minute remaining in the first half.

In the third quarter, the Skippers missed a golden scoring opportunity. Quarterback Rich Evans threw two spectacular passes to seniors Pat Broderick and Tom O'Brien to bring the Skippers to the Dragons' 34. On the next play, Evans connected with senior end Bob Meers who drove to the third yard line. However, on the next play Evans was rushed back and sacked on the 15th. Then a 27 yard field goal attempt by Evans failed going wide left.

In the fourth quarter, Duxbury's 67 yard punt put Cohasset on their five yard line and two plays later Cohasset lost possession with a fumble on the 13th. Duxbury then fumbled it back to Cohasset who returned it two plays later with another fumble.

On this Dragon possession, Skipper Pat Broderick grabbed a key interception in the end zone. On this possession, Cohasset ended up punting it to Duxbury who ran it to the Skipper 18 with a minute 43 left to play in a fourth and two. The Dragons went for the first down but were held back by the strong Skipper defense.

Cohasset fumbled twice and lost 50 yards in penalties while the Dragons had six fumbles and lost 60 yards in penalties.

"Both teams were hitting hard and we really hurt ourselves with penalties," said senior end Bob Meers.

Rockland (8-10) had knocked the Dragons out of the super bowl by defeating Bishop Stang the night before so, Duxbury's only goal was to beat Cohasset to boost their record to an 8-10 to tie Rockland and share the league title.

But to the Dragons' dismay, the Skipper defense, led by senior Dan Anderson and junior Pat Leonard, held them back to 7-1-1, and keeping them from the title.

Coach John Leone felt it would have been more competitive had Rockland lost the night before giving the Dragons a shot at the Bowl. However, he thought his team did a great job, making big defensive plays when they had to.

The Skippers were without starters Lee Wilson and Mark Lahive due to injuries and lost quarterback Rich Evans in the fourth quarter due to a broken thumb.

Evans came in third place in Division four for the most touchdown passes. He came in behind Duxbury's Chip Kispert.

The Skippers have only beaten Duxbury three times and tied them twice in the past 10 years. Overall, most Skipper fans agreed it was a moral victory for Cohasset.

ROTARY DINNER

The Rotary Club recently held a dinner for all senior girls involved in fall sports.

Awards were given to Elizabeth Glasfeld, Most Valuable Player, field hockey and Katie Clinton, Most Valuable Player, girls soccer.

HIGH SCHOOL

Spelling words to be learned this week are: PIECE, PLANNED, PLEASANT, POSSESS and PHYSICIAN.

THANKSGIVING DINNERS

Virginia Burbank telephoned to tell us that her Grade Nine humanities classes donated over $300 to feed the poor. Their gift to the Morgan Memorial Thanksgiving Fund paid for 60 dinners for 15 families.

Twenty students in the seventh period English class donated $144 of the total.

Last year Burbank's humanities classes collected over $100 for starving children in Uganda.

When Burbank arrived at school Nov. 22, she found tiny shards of glass all over her desk and the seats in her room. The custodians were still at work cleaning up the vandalism of Friday night when 55 high school and 20 Deer Hill and Osgood windows were smashed.

She would like citizens to know that not all youngsters are guilty of such vandalism. In fact, most youngsters act in a positive manner, as witnessed by the contributions from her students for the needy.

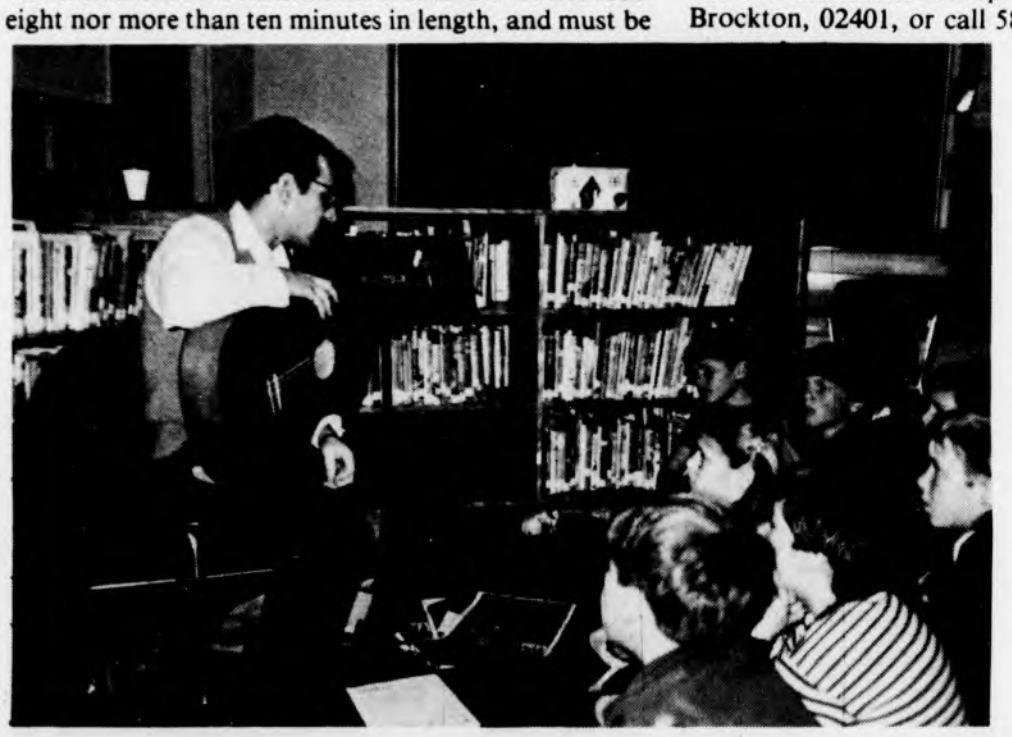
American Legion sponsors speech contest



High School students in public, private or parochial schools who live in Cohasset and Scituate will have an opportunity to compete in nation-wide speech contests sponsored by the American Legion.

Students under 20 years old, enrolled in Grades 9, 10, 11 and 12, who are skilled in public speaking or debating will have an opportunity to compete for cash scholarships.

The subject of the oration must be on some phase of the United States Constitution. It must not be less than eight nor more than ten minutes in length, and must be delivered without notes or prompting.

The American Legion initiated the program in 1938 for the purpose of developing a better understanding of the Constitution and to develop students' ability to "speak and think on their feet."

Students interested in participating should speak to their school principal and a representative of their local American Legion Post. For further information, write to Chairman Ted Sprissler, 977 Warren Avenue, Brockton, 02401, or call 583-1184.

Roger Shaffer donated a morning to the musical enrichment of Deer Hill students. Proprietor of Roger's Music Shop in Cohasset Village, he is an accomplished classical guitarist. The program was the first in a series of four planned for the year, coordinated by the PSO.

The fading and fall of the Boston press

By Bucky Yardume

At one point — no need to be a Methuselah to remember, either — Boston and suburban readers had eight metropolitan daily newspapers from which to pick. EIGHT! Count 'em!

There were five morning publications alone (a.k.a. ayems) — The Transcript, Post, Herald, Globe and Record. Plus three afternoon papers (p.m.s) — The Traveler, Evening Globe and American. That's not counting the internationally-oriented Christian Science Monitor.

Before going tabloid, The American was a broadsheet (full-size) with peculiar peach-hued front and back jacket pages. Every afternoon, newsboys would be out hollering, "Globe, Traveler and A-me-ree-can!"

Now the rollcall is down to one — The Globe — plus a question mark! For months, The Herald-American has been reported as finished. Now, 'tis said, unless Australian media magnate Ruppert Murdoch buys the carcass or the H-A will shut down. Even if Murdock strikes a deal with Heart's H-A, those in the trade have trouble visualizing more than one and a fraction Hub daily, judged by Murdoch products like the New York Post. Likely the Murdoch entry would duel The Phoenix. That doesn't figure to be a race for a Pulitzer.

Some may not recall The Transcript, an arch-conservative but respected paper. The Post was liberal and very big, but the Herald-Traveler, Morning and Evening Globes and Record-American were right up there claiming their share of readers. They were, respectively, conservative, liberal and sensationalist. Intellectuals sneered at The Record, charging its popularity was due only to late afternoon editions carrying 'The Number,' illegal medium for numbers betting; lurid stories and sexy photos. Republicans claimed only Democrats read The Globe whose readers regarded Herald-Traveler readers as GOPs and Brahmins.

Be that as it may, they all had their standout reporters, columnists and editors, each with loyal followings. Some come to mind more readily than others, time eroding memory as it does.

...Bill Cunningham, Bill Mullins, John O'Connor (of inimitable Chartreuse Gallagher wit); Charlie Collins, Will Cloney (til recently BAA Marathon director); George Minot and Duxbury's Alison Arnold among the stars. Arthur Duffy and Al Hirshberg of The Post. Arthur (Izzy) Siegel, Bill Gavin, the late Bill Liston and Tom Monahan (both from Scituate as is Cloney) of The Traveler. Vitriolic Dave (The Colonel) Egan of The Record. Austin Lake of The American (realtor Jack Conway once toiled for the same paper). Louis Lyons and Uncle Dudley's editorials of The Globe, each a story that bears telling another time and place.

And the publishers! The Taylor clan of The Globe and Glaziers of The Post. Robert Choate of The Herald-Traveler (they called him 'Bobby the Boy Publisher' after The Globe's comic strip character, 'Billy the Boy Artist.' Hap Kern of The Record-American, fronting for William Randolph Hearst.

The Post and Globe were located on Newspaper Row in the Hub's lower Washington St. Each had blackboards out front where late headlines were scrawled in chalk in that unelectronic age. People would stop and 'tune in' to the latest news.

The Post building was reminiscent of some condemned Boston buildings torched these days. Some of the latter look better. Pressman climbed up and down a vertical ladder to far-below-ground levels that would have scared a submariner. Any fire inspector worth his credentials would have declared the place off limits. If there was an elevator, it isn't recalled. Bad enough to venture the rickety wooden stairs, hoping nobody dropped a match.

The Globe across the street was a conglomeration of three ancient buildings with holes knocked through walls for access from one to the next, each with different floor levels. There was an elevator. You could beat it up or down via the stairs.

The Transcript and Herald-Traveler were further removed. The Record-American operated in Winthrop Square in a structure that wasn't the Park Plaza.

They all had something in common — watering holes.

Thompson's Spa, once a fixture for a cream soda, served both The Globes and Post, as did a couple of pubs in the immediate vicinity for those with tastes for stronger libations. If you wanted to get ahold of somebody at the Record-American, you stood a better chance calling Barsanti's or Wormuth's, flanking the office building. Same with The Herald-Traveler after it moved to Mason St. with the Bamboo and Hotel Avery bars a gulp across Avery St. And Dinty Moore's.

The Transcript didn't last long enough to move.

The Post followed the route down the tubes after an abortive takeover and attempt of revival under new owner/publisher John Fox.

Harbingers of more to come!

Boston never was designed for motor vehicular traffic. Its cow-path streets which accommodated Herefords and Jersies never could handle newspaper trucks. It wasn't so bad for the morning papers, loaded after midnight. But the afternoon editions (at one time The Traveler put five editions on the streets and The Evening Globe a like number) created a truck-clogged nightmare akin to the Expressway at rush hour. The H-T moved again, this time to what was envisioned as a fine new development on Harrison Avenue in the South End, once the realm of pushcarts and small food stores, aromatic smells of garlic, cooked crab, fish and greens everywhere. The area never did improve much beyond the turf of winos, derelicts and muggers. Employees, particularly the women, were afraid to go into the streets. They cab-pooled for lunch and to the T stations. "Choate's Folly," they called the site. It was handy for Chinese Food, Chinatown being a short walk off.

The Globe built its present plant on Morrissey Boulevard, once part of the Atlantic. The Record-American hung on in Winthrop Square longer than anybody figured the building would last.

With The Transcript and Post gone, The Globe, Herald-Traveler and Record-American were left to fight it out for readership and incursions by radio and TV.

Competition was often less than by Marquis of Queensbury rules. Newspaper people to this day relish scoring a beat (Hollywood calls it a scoop) over competitors. But some went to extremes. Richard Nixon didn't invent dirty tricks. Just one stratagem was trying to disrupt and confuse competitor circulation vendors.

At one point in the in-fighting, the Herald-Traveler tried to buy out The Globe and came within a whisker of pulling it off. Hard to believe today!

Meanwhile, the H-T acquired first radio station WHDH, then the license for WHDH-TV, Channel 5. That was to prove both its making and breaking.

Also came a change in H-T managerial structure — referred to unfondly by H-T graduates as, "The Clancy-Akerson regime" (Hal Clancy and George Akerson), imported by Publisher Choate. There began a power struggle with all the intrigue, wheeling-dealing, factions, fractionalizations and plotting worthy of J.R. of Dallas. Sound editors and staffers who had built the papers into an enviable position were harassed, demeaned, insulted and demoted with inexperienced if not incompetents as replacements. Bitterness grew and demoralization ran rampant.

At the same time, emphasis was placed on TV operation and the two newspapers allowed to deteriorate. The Globe concentrated on its business and slowly but steadily forced a solid wedge into H-T readership and advertisings which suffered further as many disenchanted staff members quit. Some gave up years towards pensions disgustedly saying, "I can't take any more of this!"

Contributing to the decline were colossal boners in editorial judgment, nit-picking over unbelievably insignificant style guidelines and adherence to conservative philosophies at a time liberalism was running wild.

There were other factors, like ever-mounting union demands and inflating operational costs. But they were no worse for one paper than the others.

Then the guillotine blade dropped. The H-T lost its big money-maker — Channel 5 — when its manipulations in getting the license didn't sit well with the FCC. The corporation fought revokation of its license. The prolonged legal battles and costs were astronomical. In the end, the license still was lost. With the newspapers run into the ground and the fiscal equalizer gone, the handwriting was on the wall. Choate died, some said mysteriously, leaving Clancy and Akerson to squabble over the scraps.

The Traveler went down the pipes first following The Transcript and Post. The Record discontinued publication of The American, leaving the afternoon market entirely to The Globe.

Finally, The Herald also fell. It wasn't a quick process, more like slow, agonizing torture. It began with rumors, the case at every paper that failed. Every day a new rumor! Imminent shutdown...a buyer who'd rebuild...rumors you couldn't believe, yet dared not. During the Jack Kennedy era, that family reportedly was going to buy the paper, the role of publisher being appropriate for a former President. Whether true or not, assassination ended that talk. Everybody but Nick the Greek was reported as interested. It reached the point employees didn't want to hear the latest tale, yet couldn't resist listening, hoping, however unrealistically.

The end finally came, and The Herald went the way of so many papers in Boston and nationwide.

The H-T building was purchased by The Record which had to do something before its Winthrop Square plant collapsed. So was born The Herald-American. From the outset the union was regarded as stranger than even many political bedfellows; the staid Herald wed to the free-wheeling Record! Not a marriage made in heaven. Clearly, the Hearst people hoped to inherit Herald readers which with their own readership would make operation viable. The new combine went broadsheet, abandoning its old tabloid format. That didn't go over! It reverted to tab form and sensationalism. But fortunes continued to dwindle ($11 million in annual losses), and the rumors started. Now management admits if the Murdoch deal doesn't go through, the paper will close.

When the H-T toppled, some staff caught on at The Globe — Bud Collins...Dave Wilson...Izzy Siegel... Dave Farrell among others. Some turned to the newspaperman's escape hatch — public relations. There was a grimmer wake! Many became ill...there were nervous breakdowns...not a few died prematurely. The coronary rate must have been triple the national average.

Those who survived know the anxiety, insecurity, anger, frustration and heartache being endured by Herald-American workers now like those at The Post, Transcript, American, Afternoon Globe and every paper that collapsed Coast to Coast and in between.

Cities far larger than Boston and its suburbs have wound up with only one metro daily.

To the victor go the spoils in free enterprise. But newspapers aren't the same as selling beer.

Despite TV and radio, newspapers keep millions of people informed and provide far more depth in news and advertising scope than other media.

No monopoly is good for the consumer.

In the area of providing public information, it's dangerous.

SKATING PROGRAM

The Recreation Department is accepting registration by telephone for various levels of instructional skating classes to be held at Cohasset Winter Garden.

Classes are scheduled to begin Sunday, Dec. 5, at 5 p.m. and continue for five weeks. The fee will be $15. Classes taught by professional instructors will be offered in the following areas:

Children and Youth — four to 16 years-old, Beginner classes; Children and Youth — four to 16 years-old, Intermediate classes; Adults — 17 years-old and over, Beginner and Intermediate classes are available.

HOCKEY SKATING LESSONS

Children and Youth — four to 16 years-old, Beginner classes; Children and Youth — four to 16 years-old, Intermediate classes; and Adults — 17 years-old and over, Beginner and Intermediate classes are available.

Advanced classes in both Figure and Hockey are available to children and adults at 6 p.m. Those interested may sign up for these classes at the same cost.

The cost for five weeks of instruction will be only $15 per person. Skate rental, for those who require skates, is included in the fee. This class will be limited to Cohasset residents only.

To register and take advantage of these reduced rates, call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 immediately.

AFTERNOON SPORTS PROGRAM

Telephone registrations will be accepted for a game/sports program for Kindergarten and first graders at the Deer Hill School gym, Monday afternoons for the Kindergarten group, and Tuesday afternoons for the first grade group. Both times will be from 3:30 to 5 p.m., beginning Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 6 and Dec. 7.

Christine Riley will conduct the program which will consist of low-organized games, team sports, and special activities designed for each age group. The fee is $6 per person for the six-week program.

For registration, call the Recreation Office at 383-6791, as soon as possible because classes will be limited in size.

GUITAR LESSONS

The Recreation Dept. will accept telephone registrations for Beginner and Intermediate Guitar lessons which will be taught by Roger Shaffer, of Roger's Music of Cohasset. The fee for this self-supporting program will be $16 per person for five weeks of lessons. The program is open to anyone, eight years-old and over.

AEROBIC EXERCISE CLASSES

Registrations will be accepted by telephone for both a morning and evening Aerobic Exercise class which is held in the Town Hall auditorium, Monday evenings from 6:45 to 7:45, and Wednesday mornings from 9:30 to 10:30.

Classes are taught by professional instructor, Margaret Watson.

Sessions are eight weeks and the fee is $15 for one class of eight weeks, or $22.50 for those who wish to take both the morning and evening classes (16 sessions). Classes will be limited in size. Please register as soon as possible.

STREET HOCKEY

The Recreation Dept. will conduct registrations for the Street Hockey League, for girls and boys, six years-old (by Dec. 1, 1982) to 10 years-old (no older than 10 by Oct. 1, 1982), Saturday morning, Dec. 11, from 8 to 10 at the Town Hall.

The fee will be $6 per person and a 50 percent discount will be offered to other children registering from the same family. There will be an additional later charge of about $2.85 for team shirts.

The program will be held Saturday afternoon, at the Cohasset High School gym. Time of games will depend on the divisions players are assigned to.

Bob Beggan will be the Recreation Dept. Coordinator this year. Play is scheduled to begin Saturday, Jan. 8.

Please make every attempt to register on time as late registrations will be accepted on space available basis only.

Panic set in when I turned the calendar page this morning. How can December have arrived so quickly? Could it be our deceptively mild November days that lulled me into this spot, so totally unprepared? If I can't blame the weather, I'll just have to confess that the holiday spirit has yet to catch up with me. So, just to get in the mood, I'll try a little baking for the holidays, starting with one of Millie Carr's recipes for

FRUITCAKE COOKIES

2½ c. mixed candied fruit
1 c. raisins
1/2 c. brandy or apple juice
2 eggs
1/2 c. light brown sugar
1/3 c. butter, melted
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. cloves
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1½ c. flour
1 c. chopped nuts

Soak the candied fruit and the raisins in the brandy for at least 12 hours. Beat the eggs and sugar with a fork. Blend in the butter, soda, spices and vanilla. Gentle stir in the flour, nuts and candied fruit with remaining liquid. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls onto ungreased cookie sheets. Press a piece of candied fruit on top of each cookie. Bake in a preheated 375 degree oven for 15 min. Makes 4½ doz.

Just imagine being so incredibly well organized that you could do all your Christmas shopping in one day! To illustrate how popular shopping by mail order catalogue has become, "Time" magazine tells of a Chicago executive who is constantly on the road. Toni Smith says, "I cull out the most interesting catalogues beforehand, then I do comparison shopping from one to another." In just one day, her shopping is all done by mail. Well, I think our Lori Thomae must be pretty efficient, for she writes to tell of a surprise dinner party and baby shower she gave recently and includes the menu and recipes for Chicken Dijon Style, A Different Pilaf, Salad Delight with Mandarin Dressing, Indian Summer Punch and Perfect Marble Cheesecake. Now, her neighborhood is planning a progressive Christmas dinner party and she has promised us the recipes, but for want of space, we'll have to content ourselves now with just this one recipe for

SALAD DELIGHT

Add the following to bite-sized pieces of red-leaf lettuce: cucumber wedges, sliced celery, peeled carrot strips, thin strips of canned red beets, mandarin orange and pineapple segments. Drain and reserve 2 T syrup for dressing. Slices of red onion. Toss with following salad mandarin dressing:

1/4 c. salad oil
2 T sugar
2 T vinegar
1 to 2 T syrup from mandarin orange and pineapple segments
2 T parsley of oregano
1/2 tsp. salt
Few drops red pepper sauce or tabasco.
Serves six.

It was a relief to learn at bridge club the other evening that I was not alone in being a little late in holiday plans this year. We were all quite content to spend a few hours together, relaxing over dinner; Christmas and bridge far from our thoughts as we enjoyed Ethel Page's tasty chicken casserole, hot breads and salad. The latter recipe was from a book Ethel picked up on vacation in Port Clyde, Me., one of the best collections I've seen for a long while. Called "Cooking at Yorkies Restaurant," by Betty Koelle of Camden, Me., here is the salad Ethel served:

BLUEBERRY SALAD

1 3-oz. pkg. lemon jello
1 3-oz. pkg. black raspberry jello
1 c. boiling water
Dissolve jellos in water. Add:
1/2 c. cold water
1 T lemon juice and gradually stir into 1 21-oz. can of blueberry pie filling.
Chill until firm. Use an 8x8x2" dish for 9 to 12 servings.
Dressing:
1 c. sour cream
1/4 c. sifted confectioners sugar

Fold just till blended. Spread over gelatin on serving day, as it bleeds into topping while in storage.

Arthritis Foundation fights to find cure

"A charitable donation should be evaluated like any other investment," said Robert Alexander of Marshfield, treasurer of the Arthritis Foundation's Massachusetts Chapter. "So when you make the decision to contribute your hard-earned money, you should be sure that it will be spent in the most productive, most efficient manner."

The Arthritis Foundation, which receives no government support, raised $21.4 million across the country. These funds went to research (34 percent), patient and community services (10 percent), public education (16 percent), professional education (16 percent) and chapter support and fund raising (17 percent). Management costs were only 7 percent of the Arthritis Foundation's budget.

Merry 'beep beep' Christmas, Lois II

By Lois Martin

If not this Christmas, then it'll be next year. But, ultimately, I'll get a clone for Christmas.

I should have expected it. This new fascination with computer stuff has not escaped me. And though I haven't shared the addiction to the keyboards, that new language of soft and hardware, whose difference I have yet to understand, I'm aware that others are drawn to computers.

Why I don't know. I don't even do calculators. Some of us who scored "2" on the mechanical portion of those aptitude tests are still wrestling with vacuum cleaners and can openers.

PATCHES

Others don't share my ignorance. They talk about "an Apple," and their computer program courses. And their little eyes light up when they use their 'beep' talk.

Last week, though, I learned what we are really in for. Brian Martin, a nouveau Californian who would have warmed to the gold rush, called to say he's thinking of going into 'artificial intelligence robotics.'

At first I wasn't sure whether or not to be alarmed. It takes a while to understand those words. I knew he didn't mean the Army. But I feared he was suggesting membership in some of those ultra new wave things they do in California.

Instead I think he means the application of computer agility in the form of humans, only robots, clones. Provocative.

I know he'll make one for his mother.

I assume my little clone will be fashioned after me, as Brian's memory or perception enables the creation.

She'll be programmed to put on her bathrobe early on a winter evening. Her hair (Brian, don't send me some bald clone) will be slightly askew and if I send her to get the groceries she'll overbuy real butter.

Naturally that'll be part of her basic programming, the groceries. I don't know what robots do when they get a lame cart. But my clone will have to have some kind of response built in to chicken so she'll pick up plenty.

That's not my greatest anticipation though. I can't wait to send her out on car inspections. Last time I drove in to get my Monza checked for a sticker, the man said wryly, "Lady, this isn't the Indy 500." I won't have to worry about that anymore.

And she can go to the registry in February to get my new license. Her picture will be an improvement. (Brian, have her weigh no more than 120 pounds. One time in my life I'd like to have a license that doesn't lie). She'll have a swell time down at the registry. Clones don't mind standing in line for an hour and then learning they've been in the wrong line. And they don't keep looking for robust hearty-laughing people to wait on them.

And my computer alter ego can go to the dentist for me, rake the leaves, wax the kitchen floor if she's prepared for that electronically.

I've even toyed with the idea that she could fill in for me at the doctors, the old annual exam, you know. Let her put on that little paper nightie and give me a break.

Possibly I could rent her out, but that might not be a good idea because I expect her program to be a bit erratic now and then. She'll definitely be a morning clone in order to be compatible. At about 9 p.m. her monotone voice will start to fade and her metal eyelids will waver. But when her motor's humming, she'll want to do everything. She won't be a whit athletic, but she'll be a good sport.

I'm thinking of a name, something warm and pleasant (I don't want any robot, Brian, unless she nudges people a lot and laughs at her own jokes). Plug those quips in so she doesn't embarrass herself with a smart mouth. Oh, never mind, it's my clone, she'll have an appropriate sense of humor.

Anyway I'm looking forward to it. Hope they box her kindly for her flight from California. One disadvantage is she will be one of the first on the street, never mind out of the factory. So I'll want her to have a warranty.

All I need is another me that short circuits.

ANNOUNCING
An Exciting New Place
To Live in Hingham...
The MEADOWS
FURNISHED MODELS
NOW OPEN!
You'll love living at The Meadows, a superb new community of attached single family homes now being built by The Green Company in Hingham. Expert construction crews have completed the first group of two and three bedroom homes, and the exciting furnished models are now ready for your visit.
Our pride in the design and construction of The Meadows is well justified as you'll see when you visit. There's a wonderful spaciousness to the homes . . . an exceptional flow between rooms achieved through the use of large foyer areas, vaulted ceilings, expansive glass with views to the out-of-doors, and rooms opening into each other yet subtly separated by custom dividers.
There are many gracious details: tray ceilings; large country kitchens with sunny breakfast bays—even one designed as a greenhouse; walk-in bay windows; and exceptional master suites, some including secluded fireplaced sitting rooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights.
The combination of location, space and amenities make these homes an exceptional value at $153,000 to $210,000. We suggest a visit soon for early selection. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, keep left to our entrance, or call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

Lothrops were important to Cohasset

By David Wadsworth

Historical notes

A new and increasingly prominent feature in Cohasset's cultural and social scene is the Cohasset Historical Society's new headquarters on Summer Street. The Lothrop House, as this fine brick-ended Georgian mansion is called, is not new at all for it was constructed in 1823 by Caleb Lothrop, a member of an old Cohasset seafaring family.

Both the house and the family whose name it carries have played an important role in the history of our community.

The name of Lothrop goes back in American history to the year 1634 when Reverend John Lothrop, a religious dissenter within the English Church and pastor of a Parish near London, England, arrived in the Scituate Colonial settlement to found that town's first church.

Six years later, in 1640, Rev. Lothrop and some of his congregation left Scituate and went to the Cape Cod town of Barnstable to begin a new church.

Through succeeding years the Lothrop family established itself in the Cape Cod area. Rev. John Lothrop's grandson Thomas married Mayflower descendent Experience Gorham whose ancestry traced to Plymouth Colony's John Tilley and John Howland.

By this time, the Lothrop family had spread out into numerous places, and grandson Thomas with his wife resided in Hingham. They had a son named Thomas who was destined to become a leading figure in Cohasset's history.

By the time this young son had reached seven years old, his father had died and his mother had married again and moved away from Hingham.

The boy was taken in by a Cohasset relative, Deacon John Jacob, and came to live with the Deacon's family in their homestead on the road now called Spring Street.

The young man Thomas Lothrop grew up in his adopted town to become an important figure in its local government.

He served as a lieutenant in the French and Indian War from 1757 to 1760, and in the American Revolution and became the town's highest ranking military officer as a lieutenant colonel.

In 1759 Ruth Nichols became Thomas' wife. The grandson of Colonel Thomas Lothrop, Caleb Lothrop, born in 1799, built the Summer Street home now called the Lothrop House.

Caleb married Mary Snow, the daughter of a Cohasset seafaring family in 1819, and soon constructed his new dwelling on Summer Street. He followed the seafaring tradition of many 19th century Cohasseters to become a shipowner and ship chandler.

A year after the Summer Street house was built Caleb and Mary had a child whom they named for an American President. Born in 1824, John Quincy Adams Lothrop grew up in the Summer Street house and in later years became one of Cohasset's most devoted public servants.

In 1854 J.Q.A. Lothrop was elected to the office of selectman, a position he held at five different times until his death in 1894. He also served as moderator, representative and county commissioner. In 1848 he married Eunice Bradish Bates of Cohasset and later, their son Caleb inherited the Summer Street property.

Caleb was born in 1849, made a career for himself as an Insurance Agent, for years served as treasurer of the town's first financial institution, the Cohasset Savings Bank, and was a member of the School Committee.

In more recent years, Caleb Lothrop's widow and son became the last of the Lothrop family to own the handsome old house at Summer Street.

After nearly a century and a half of ownership by the Lothrops, it passed to the Archdiocese of Boston as part of the property purchased for the construction of the new St. Anthony's Church.

In the mid-1970's the Cohasset Historical Society purchased the house and adjacent grounds. Since then the Society has been actively engaged in reconditioning the Lothrop House in a major project now nearing completion.

Inside, the work is almost done and antique furniture now graces the restored rooms. The Historical Society's library and archives are being organized for the benefit of future historians. Behind the newly constructed caterer's kitchen an old woodshed has been miraculously transformed into a modern administration office for the Society.

A number of community groups have used the Lothrop House's facilities for meetings, and out-of-town Historical Societies have visited and toured the fine old building.

One cannot help but think that the doughty old Revolutionary soldier Col. Thomas Lothrop would approve of this and so would his descendants Caleb and John Quincy Adams Lothrop.

The Historical Society's Lothrop House, now approaching its 160th year, is both a symbol of Cohasset's past and an active part of its present.

Latter Day Saints hold program for young people

How can young people withstand the pressure of immorality in a society where they see it on television and movies, among peers, and hear it glorified in popular songs?

One church is using television to fight that problem—and is inviting its young people, ages 12-26, to watch.

On the South Shore, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will broadcast a film and talk dealing with the problems. It will air at 8:30 p.m., Dec. 5, at the chapel of 379 Gardner Street, Hingham, live from church headquarters in Salt Lake City, Utah, via satellite.

The programwill be in a 'fireside' format—a meeting held in the evening, in addition to standard Sunday meetings. The fireside will be the first time the satellite system is being used for church programming, apart from the General Conference which has aired over the system in the past.

The gathering will be conducted by Dr. Brent W. Lambert, Stake President for this area.

"We feel it's important to teach our youth to be moral in their behavior, despite negative forces in society that might pull them in the opposite direction," Pres. Lambert said.

Six reasons not to buy a VW Rabbit GTI.

1. It goes too fast.
0-50 in 7.2 seconds. Top speed is 107 MPH.

2. It stops too fast.
If it goes fast it better be able to stop fast.

3. The ride is stiff--cornering is taut.
There's a totally new suspension package with added stabilizer bars and tighter coil springs. It was designed by German engineers — so what do you expect?

4. Your wife won't want to drive it.

5. Your son will.

6. The price won't impress your friends.
It's less than $8000.

If you insist on a test drive call. But don't say we didn't warn you.

$7990. [illegible]

Nothing else is a Volkswagen.

School board may offer reward for arrest of window breakers

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell will explore whether the school committee can legally offer a reward for information leading to the capture of these responsible for November's school vandalism.

School committee members and the superintendent debated member Joe Nedrow's suggestion to offer a reward for information on the perpetrator(s) who broke 75 windows in the three schools Nov. 20.

Crowell had opposed the idea when the police investigating officer recommended it. Crowell said he was "uneasy creating a situation where you pay to make informants out of youngsters." Crowell is afraid of what might happen if student's confidences were exposed, that there might be a "comeback" on the youngster.

Karin Bartow, a Cohasset resident, opposed offering a reward because "you are giving the student body a message that they should be paid for this. I prefer just pleading for information."

Committee member Richard Conley said he would like to see a reward, but not have it raised by the students.

COUNCIL RAFFLE

Paul Johnson, student representative to the school committee and student council vice president, told members about the raffle being held by students to help pay for the damage. Crowell estimated the total to be $4,000, including "$769 in custodial overtime."

Johnson stressed that the students do not feel responsible for the damage, since there have been no rumors that it was done by Cohasset students.

The students, however, were embarrassed by the recent smashing of 57 windows at CHS.

The raffle is meant as a show of school spirit and a way to boost morale among administrators, teachers and students.

The 24-member council includes four representatives in each of the seventh through 12th grades.

"It was a unanimous vote," said Council Chairman Justine Hoffman.

"We were all embarrassed by the vandalism and what the vandalism has done to our school. We had a meeting and the consensus was, 'Let's do something about it.' We decided on a fundraiser."

No arrests have been made yet but police have some suspects and believe the vandalism was not committed by a student but by a town resident.

The fundraiser, the council believes, helps prevent the vandalism from spoiling student activities and the quality of education.

Each raffle ticket will cost $1. Money will be raised to buy three certificates for groceries from the Stop & Shop on Route 3A. The certificates are for $25, $50 and $100.

Salvador: Sewer plant needs upgrading

By Jane Lane

Following the simultaneous breakdown of the sewage treatment plant's two pumps on Nov. 29, and the subsequent shellfishing ban in Cohasset Harbor and in Scituate, plant operator Manuel Salvador says the present plant must be upgraded.

In a letter submitted to The Mariner, Salvador said, "This is not (a letter) for a new sewer plant or an alternative study. It is to inform the people of the requirements that have to be done to the present plant."

Nov. 29, the main pump in the treatment plant broke down after the motor overheated, and the backup pump also malfunctioned due to mechanical failure. For four hours, while Salvadore "prayed a lot," a gasoline-powered pump was used to force the raw sewage into the James Brook.

Ordinarily, the main pump is used to pump the sewage from underground street pipes into the treatment plant tank to be biologically treated.

After the pumps failed Nov. 29, the gate to the tank was closed and the sewage backed up into the pipes. If the gasoline pump had not functioned as "fantastically" as it did, Salvador said the untreated sewage would have eventually backed into the residences.

Because the raw sewage was dumped into the James Brook, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) ordered that all shellfishing for clams and mussels be banned from Windmill Point to Strawberry Point in Scituate. Fishing and lobstering is still allowed in the restricted area.

Salvador said the state will perform fecal and chloroform counts in the waters this week. He predicts the area would be reopened because the waters have been diluted enough for the bacterial count to drop.

In his letter, Salvador asked what the cost would be for a new outfall system to Cohasset Harbor which must be installed in 1983, according to requirements set for them by the EPA. Will that outfall upset the excellent environmental condition of Cohasset Harbor, he asked.

Salvador said new settling tanks are also needed in the treatment plant, but what will the costs be?

Executive secretary search down to five

By Mike Berger

Selectmen have narrowed the search for an executive secretary to five candidates and one of the finalists is Richard Silvia of 445 Beechwood Street.

The other four are Warren Rutherford of Boylston, Mark Lanza of South Yarmouth, Richard O'Leary of Medway and James Overmyer of Lenox.

Lanza, O'Leary and Overmyer were interviewed by selectmen Monday night; Silvia and Rutherford scheduled for Tuesday night.

Silvia attended one of the interviews. He has attended many committee and town meetings and is familiar with the operation of the selectmen's and executive secretary's position.

Selectmen received about 25 applications and screened them down to five finalists. Executive secretary Arthur Clark will resign Dec. 31. It is the selectmen's goal to hire someone who is an excellent planner, organizer and can improve community relations between the public and the selectmen's office.

Selectmen are offering as much as $21,000 for the position.

MARK LANZA

Selectmen were impressed with Lanza's interview. He is the assistant executive secretary for Yarmouth and supervises personnel, finances and data processing for the town.

He also served as an administrator for Wayland and was responsible for the town receiving $300,000 in public housing after submitting a grant.

Lanza believes the executive secretary should be an advisor, researcher and investigator for selectmen.

Lanza works for a five-member board of selectmen in Yarmouth, a seacoast town whose population reaches 50,000 residents in the summer.

Lanza has a master's degree in public administration from Suffolk University and is seeking a salary of nearly $24,000.

Sen. McKinnon expects to stay put

State Sen. Allan McKinnon said it is still premature, but unlikely he will accept a job as state Insurance Commissioner or any other post in the Dukakis administration.

Meanwhile, Republican State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray isn't ruling it out, but will consider the race for state senate if McKinnon accepts a new job.

Governor-elect Michael Dukakis is nearing a decision for his cabinet heads. Recently it has been speculated in the media, McKinnon may be offered the post of state Insurance Commissioner.

McKinnon strongly supports Dukakis in the 1982 campaign and Dukakis is known to agree with many of McKinnon's consumer oriented insurance positions. McKinnon is the state Senate Chairman of the Insurance Committee.

McKinnon told the Mariner he has no immediate plans to change jobs.

"Right now it is premature but I have no plans at this time to change jobs. It is unlikely in the immediate future I will be going into the new administration Jan. 1. It doesn't fit into my personal plans at this time. I haven't been offered a job, but I can't say I never will in the future. But I can say in the immediate future, the answer is no," he said.

Murray told the Mariner she has been approached by many constituents to run for the senate seat if McKinnon is chosen and accepts the position.

However, she said reports are "premature at this stage. Allan hasn't received the offer yet.

"It's too early to do it but I don't rule it out. I enjoy serving my constituents because I'm closer

Supplement correction

In the Mariner's recent Christmas supplement, the advertisement of The Linen Chest, 5 Brook St., Cohasset, read there is a charge for the firm's special Christmas gift wrapping service. It should have said, there never is a charge for gift wrapping.

No Mariner December 29

This is a reminder...there'll be no Mariner in your mailbox Dec. 29.

Nothing to be upset about...at least for long. On the contrary, it's a thorough vacation for the Mariner staff, who will close the doors to the office at 58 Main St. Thursday, Dec. 23, not to reopen them until Monday, Jan. 3.

Remember to bring in pertinent copy or advertising for publication Dec. 22, our last in 1982. But that will be a zinger, including, lest you're worried, the annual Christmas list and the winners of the junior high Christmas Art Contest.

The Jan. 5 issue will be on schedule, as will 1983.

Early release day

Thursday, December 16 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Junior/Senior High School — 12:20 p.m., Deer Hill School — 12:40 p.m. and Joseph Osgood School — 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee in order to allow staff members at the Junior/Senior High School to take part in Curriculum Update Workshops.

The release time at the Joseph Osgood and the Deer Hill School will be devoted to Parent Conferences.

This early release day is in addition to the early release day December 9.

Police chief selection

Selectmen have received 53 applications for the position of permanent police chief. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested before screening the applications, the board should meet to discuss "exactly what we're looking for in a police chief." Selectmen may discuss the issue Thursday.

Body Language correction

A photograph in the November 24 edition of the Mariner of Christine Pierce and Sylvia Schuler demonstrating self-defense techniques incorrectly identified the location as the Body Works. It should have said the demonstration was held at Body Language Health Spa and Center of Jonathan Livingston Square, Rte. 3A, Cohasset.

Casino bill refiled

State Sen. Allan McKinnon of Weymouth, a staunch casino opponent, filed one bill to legalize casino gambling as a courtesy to Hull selectmen. But he has made it clear to the Legislature he will oppose it.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray also opposed it and said she will fight it again and again.

Another gambling bill was filed on behalf of the state AFL-CIO by Rep. Michael Flaherty of South Boston. The two bills are essentially the same bills which have already been filed in each of the past seven legislative sessions.

Opponents argue casinos will result in increased crime and traffic and reduce the quality of life, while supporters including Nancy Burns, a Hull selectman, cite new jobs and tax revenue as benefits.

Sen. McKinnon...

to my own people. The senate district is much larger.

"I'm not saying yes or no. I'm saying it's too premature. But many people have told me if McKinnon is chosen and I decide to run they would vote for me," Murray said.

The senate district includes Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

McKinnon beat opponent Republican Thomas Barry of Duxbury by a 2-1 margin, 29,776 to 14,558 in the November election.

School reward...

The tickets will be sold at the high school, throughout town, and at all school athletic events.

The drawing will be held at halftime at the December 17 Cohasset-Duxbury home basketball game.

Donations will be accepted at the high school front office or may be mailed to high school vice principal Gino DiGiralamo.

Police records fee

The state Legislature and the governor have allowed police departments to charge 50 cents per page for the police log and other reports. The charge for mailing motor vehicle accident and fire insurance reports will be $5 for not more than six pages and 50 cents for each additional page. Any person requesting a public record will be charged 50 cents per page.

Cable Committee to review final specs

The cable committee was scheduled to meet Tuesday night with the four companies which have submitted preliminary bids.

The committee will review contract specifications which were finalized during the committee's meeting last week.

The final package came close to the system identified in Abington, according to committee chairman Joseph McCool.

The cable committee will meet with selectmen next week to decide when to publish the bid specs. The bidders will have 30 to 40 days to respond. When all bids have been received, the committee will review them, hold a public hearing, and make a final recommendation. Selectmen will award the contract by mid-May.

McCool said the contract specifications are similar to the state of the art equipment required by Scituate. But the overall conditions of the contract are more similar to those required by Abington.

Although the committee compared its needs to those specified by Hingham, Norwell, and Hull, the final product resembles the requirements established by Abington.

McCool said because the costs among the companies are so competitive, there is a tendency to cut certain areas within the contract. McCool said his personal priority is the schools receive attention from the cable company, and that a system be established which contains cable capabilites within the schools.

After all bids have been received, the cable committee will hold a public meeting. At that time, the companies will make a formal presentation, outlining the individual systems specifically designed for Cohasset.

Selectmen have final authority to grant the provisional cable license. The cable committee was established to assist in the selection process and to make recommendations to the selectmen.

Executive secretary search...

RICHARD O'LEARY

O'Leary has been active on several local government boards in Medway. He has served as a selectman, town moderator, library board and finance committee member, town hall renovation, zoning board of appeals and cable television advisory commission member.

However, it is unlikely O'Leary will move to Cohasset. He told selectmen because of family problems and his commitments to the Medway boards, he could not move to Cohasset.

He estimated travel time at 44 minutes and traveling expenses at $1,850. O'Leary also requested a salary range of $23,000.

Selectmen were impressed with his accomplishments for Medway. He introduced the first library card system and chaired a 12-member Finance Committee which approved the lowest amount of money from the town's Reserve Fund in 10 years.

As a selectman he negotiated the first contract with police and moderated the first town-wide departmental meeting. He is the only Medway selectman to become President of the Norfolk County Selectmen's Association. He also chaired the Town Hall Renovation Committee which paid up a $254,000 project in one year.

O'Leary works for a book publishing company.

He believes the role of an executive secretary should be presenting the "yes's and the no's of an issue" to selectmen and leaving the decision to them. He also believes the executive secretary should help prepare the town budget and agenda for selectmen's meeting and research issues, especially for the annual and special town meetings.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said an ex-selectman serving as executive secretary does concern him because of the different job responsibilities. But O'Leary's presentation, he said, calmed some "of the fears I have with the statements you made."

JAMES OVERMYER

Overmyer, a former news reporter for The Berkshire Eagle, is now working as a research planner with the Berkshire County District Attorney's office.

He previously served as a trial clerk and helped prepare criminal cases for the D.A.'s office.

He was the Berkshire Eagle's chief criminal justice reporter and also served as the paper's Bureau Chief for Pittsfield. Overmyer is a member and clerk for the Lenox Zoning Board of Appeals.

For three years Overmyer said he was "the man behind the scenes" in preparing criminal court cases. He scheduled witnesses, organized files and helped organize the county's first full-time office of district attorney.

Two new sewer commissioners to be named by month's end

By the end of December, sewer commissioner Joseph Gwinn will nominate two persons to fill the vacancies on the sewer commission.

The names will be given to the selectmen, who must act on the nominations within seven days.

In the meantime, Gwinn has begun to prepare next year's sewer department budget as the sole member of the administrative board.

Commission chairman Gerard Stanton and member Janet Daggett submitted their resignations to selectman Henry Ainslie following last week's special town meeting. Voters at the meeting rejected the commission's plan for a $13.7 million central sewer system. They adopted a measure proposed by Charles DeSantis to explore less expensive alternative disposal systems.

In his letter to selectmen, Stanton said his resignation from the commission was necessary following the vote of special town meeting.

Stanton said he would not be party to the town being held in contempt of court, following town meeting's endorsement of Article Four.

Since he did not support that article, he could not implement it, he said. He also believed the commission members lost the confidence of the townspeople. He suggested that proponents of the alternative plan be appointed to "carry out this action."

Daggett said it was the duty of the town to carry out the mandate of town meeting, but the vote would require her "to perform in contempt of court action."

Selectmen accepted the resignations with regret. Rocco Laugelle said the town had lost two good persons. "I hate to see them resign, and I hate to accept the resignations," he added.

During the selectmen's meeting last week, Atty. Richard Henderson advised the board that he would immediately begin to re-negotiate the terms and conditions of the superior court agreement between the state Division of Water Pollution Control and the town.

The re-negotiation would allow the sewer commissioners to prepare an alternative facilities plan, as mandated by special town meeting.

Henderson said he would attempt to meet with a representative of the attorney general's office to begin the re-negotiations immediately. If that attempt is unsuccessful, Henderson said selectmen should follow with a plan for modification of the court judgment. If both these measures fail, Henderson said, "we are back to where we began."

"The town meeting directed a course of action, but that does not change the fact that a court order is still in effect," Henderson warned.

In the meantime, regardless of the outcome of the negotiations, the lone sewer commissioner should proceed to file an environmental impact statement with the EPA, as previously mandated, Henderson suggested.

Although the attorney was unsure whether a single member could legally act as a full board, he said the letter should be filed immediately.

Nothing contained in Article 4 of the special town meeting relieves selectmen or the board of sewer commissioners from complying with their obligations under the court agreement, until, and if, it is re-negotiation or modified, Henderson said.

During selectmen's meeting, water commissioner William Montouri commented that $10,000 appropriated by town meeting for an engineer's study of the town, will be insufficient to cover the costs of an extensive study.

"No facilities study can be done for $10,000," he told selectmen. Montouri added that $10,000 would buy the town "two engineers" and "two weeks" of work.

The article proposed by DeSantis would necessitate extensive soil testing and a new environmental impact statement which would require "a great deal of money and would take a long time," Montouri predicted.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur told Montouri that selectmen are aware $10,000 will not cover the costs for an alternative facilities study plan.

Christmas Stroll brings warm temperatures and high spirits

By Ellen Morrissey

Santa brought warm temperatures and high spirits at the second annual Christmas Stroll sponsored by the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association.

A haywagon, capable of holding 50 children at a time, pulled by white horses, traveled through the Village from 4 to 6 p.m.

Brownies, Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts carolled on the candlelit steps of St. Stephen's, while group leaders dodged the traffic to keep up the beat.

Everyone had a wonderful time. Santa enjoyed himself so much that he swung back into town Saturday for the Village Fair.

Special thanks to the following who helped make the Stroll happen: Carmine, Strawberry Parfait; the town wiring and tree departments; Kenneally Carriages, E. Bridgewater; St. John, St. Nick; Hugo's; Harrington's; Tina, Cohasset Hardware; Hope, In Stitches; June, Red Balloon; Tinker, Linen Chest; Connie, Cohasset Historical Society; Lainie, Red Lion Inn; Reflections; Hagarty Co.; Charlotte Stylists; Pilgrim Bank; Carousel; Village Sports; and the bell concert.

Gov. Island Wharf

Town officials will meet Thursday, Dec. 16 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall to discuss the reconstruction of the Gov. Island Wharf. The public is invited. Bill Richardson of the Cohasset Harbor Commission said discussion is expected to focus on preliminary sketch plans, cost estimates and dredging plans.

Richardson said the chief problem to solve is where to dispose of the dredged materials.

The conservation commission, planning board, selectmen, the coastal zone management commission, the lobstermen and fishermen's associations and the Fishermen's Pier Working group, a subpanel of the Harbor Study Commission were invited to the meeting. Richardson said the plans call for the wharf to be extended to the right by as much as 150 feet in the northeasterly direction towards the tip of Bassing Beach. The extension will allow for mooring tieups of six to eight boats. During low tide, boats cannot tie to the wharf.

As many as eight trucks will be allowed to park on the wharf after expansion .

Parking will be expanded on the west side for five to 15 vehicles.

Anderson Nichols, Inc. is the preliminary engineer and has met with the Fishermen's Pier working group and informally with the Conservation Commission.

Much of the guesswork, heaving lifting and mistakes can be taken out of interior design by making a floor plan on paper. By using one-fourth inch graph paper, it is possible to draw a scaled-down version of your floor plan. Careful measurements will show exactly how much area is available for furniture, traffic and storage. The plan will prevent costly mistakes in buying overly large or misshapen furniture. You can also get an overall view which will aid in achieving room balance. Take into account furniture height as well. Explore different schemes and plans.

When the weather starts to get colder and attention turns indoors make your home warm and inviting with a seasonal spruce-up. Is it time to change shades? Wax your furniture? Repair draperies? Paint? Sewer plant needs upgrading...

The state Division of Water Pollution Control has mandated the waste material produced at the treatment plant be in a dried state, rather than liquid form now produced at the plant.

The dried sludge would be disposed of at the sanitary landfill. What would the cost be for drying the sludge, Salvador asked?

"If all the septic tanks and fields could be rebuilt in the Hillside and Veterans project, where do we empty them?" Salvador said. "The state says we must accept some septic waste. How? Where? How much?

"We must address ourselves to these questions. The EPA and the state will not fund the above unless we enlarge the present plant or build a new one. Should we build a new plant at the present location with an outfall to Sutton's Rock?" he asked.

Throughout the debate at special town meeting regarding Charles DeSantis's proposal for alternative sewer studies, nothing was mentioned about upgrading the present plant, he said. "I think people missed the point. We must update what we have. What will it cost us?" he asked.

According to Salvador, the closer the plant is to the ocean, the less the cost of building an outfall. And the cost of pumping the sewage is also decreased.

At a meeting at the Whale Meadow site, residents said they weren't as concerned about costs, as they were that a treatment plant not be located in that area, he said.

"Can we really afford that position?" he asked.

Salvador said engineers have estimated according to 1982 prices, a new sewage treatment plant with no septage handling will cost $1.8 million. A plant with septage handling would cost approximately $4.5 million.

The plant operator was concerned that in view of the most recent plant breakdown, people should be aware the present facility must be updated to meet state and Federal requirements. This will cost money, in addition to any alternative sewer studies endorsed by special town meeting, he said.

Tax bills coming

Property tax bills may be sent out next week. Assessors and other town officials are urging residents to pay their bills before Jan. 1. This would allow them to deduct the amount from their federal income tax.

Originally the bills were to be issued last week but the state ordered the town to issue bills based on existing property valuation and last year's tax rate of $54.75 per $1,000 valuation. Assessors had to calculate construction improvement to property completed in 1981.

Once the state approves the tax rate the town will turn the figures over to the Arlington Trust Company which prints the bills. All but about 100 residents will pay the same tax they paid last year. Those who built garages, porches, sheds or additions will pay more.

Unresign

The issues involved in the disagreement between Charles DeSantis et al and the Sewer Commission were complicated. DeSantis argued that the Commission's 13.7 million dollar plan to put Cohasset in compliance with a Superior Court consent decree to stop the pollution of James Brook is too costly and would provide sewerage for only 30 percent of the town.

His proposal, adopted at last week's special town meeting, would seek a less expensive and more generally beneficial alternative. Should none be found the original plan will be made operative once again.

The risk of the path DeSantis successfully urged upon the town is that a great deal of money will be spent in restudying a problem that has already been studied at length and no preferable alternative will be found. In the meantime construction costs will have risen. Thus, far from saving the town money, the DeSantis plan could end up costing a bundle.

At this point, whichever side of the argument one has been on, one's present duty is clear: make the DeSantis plan — now the law of the town — work. The majority of our people have spoken, and nobody's interest is served by cacophony from the many thoughtful people who were on the losing side of the argument.

That is why we regard the sudden resignations of Water Commissioners Janet Daggett and Gerard Stanton as unfortunate. Hey, if the typesetters resigned every time our editorial writer blundered we'd have to hire more help than Carter has pills. The absence of experienced sewer commissioners in the coming months can only make the task at hand more unwieldy. In no way are these resignations good for Cohasset.

The argument advanced by the departed commissioners that they don't want to be party to the town's being held in contempt of court for violating the consent decree doesn't grab us. Under the DeSantis plan — we really ought to start calling it the Cohasset Plan — the town will merely seek to renegotiate the consent decree. Clearly, if the Superior Court is not of a mind to enter into such renegotiation the "Cohasset Plan" becomes inoperative and the original 13.7 million dollar plan rises again.

It's no fun to see one's own hard work discarded or to see the town embarked on a course one regards as unwise. But for all of us who care about Cohasset enough to "get involved," more than occasional rejection just goes with the territory. The selectmen get kicked around and joked about and must sometimes wonder if we aren't populated by 7,600 Don Rickleses.

So we would love it if the able and experienced resigned commissioners Daggett and Stanton would, for the good of Cohasset, suck in their annoyance and their reservations about the course of action our people have voted, and unresign.

A change of address by decree

By Laura Doherty
3 Cedar Acres Lane

Dear Friends:

Stop! Before you send holiday greeting, please note our change of address.

No, we have not moved. The office of assessors has just notified us that street numbers have now been established for Cedar Acres Lane and Drive.

After quoting Massachusetts general laws down to chapter, section and clause, we have been informed that "the address you should be using is 3 Cedar Acres Lane." Further, we have been asked to "please mark your house appropriately."

After 10 years at 36 Cedar Acres Lane, having our address changed without moving takes adjustment. Here we are in the same familiar house and yard with the same old leaves, but at a different address.

Then, there's our mailbox. For years, it has been like a beacon to first time visitors. We would instruct them to look for the orange mailbox with the black and gold numbers 36. Without it, most people probably would never have found us.

I remember one caravan of friends, all arriving at the same time. Down the street they came, circled one cul-de-sac and continued down the other end to circle the other. Finally they reached us. It was like the wagon trains of old, all because someone forgot to watch for the orange mailbox.

Cedar Acres Lane is a double cul-de-sac with an entrance at the middle. It has a unique numbering system. Our neighbor on one side is #1 and on the other, 79. The lane is well known to delivery men who have explored it end to end in search of an address.

It also has had numerous problems developing a specific identity having been first classified a street, then a drive and, last I heard, a lane. I may be wrong, since according to the assessors' letter, numbers have been established for a lane and a street.

Added to these problems, there is the confusion with Cedar Street and Cedar Lane. I've met many people returning packages that way.

I'm sure the change will bring about a more orderly process of living but I have to admit to mixed feelings. I will miss some of the surprises. Like the one last year when on a gray day two dozen long-stemmed red roses were delivered to my door. It took a great deal of effort to explain the number problem to the delivery man, especially since he was most insistent that they were for me.

It's been exciting living at #36. Two weeks ago my husband came in with a puzzled look asking if our house was for sale. "Not that I know of," I replied, expecting a joke. Unconvinced, he asked why there was a for sale sign out front.

The real estate people were very nice. They explained that some children probably moved the sign. All of the children were in school and the sign was not there when they left. I had my doubts but thanked them when they offered to remove the sign.

The incident was forgotten until a week later. It was early one Monday morning — not the best of times — when the doorbell rang. "Hi, I've come for your Open House," said a realtor who looked a lot better than anyone should at that time of day. Seeing my incredulous expression she asked if perhaps she had come to the wrong house. "I certainly hope so," was my earnest reply.

Though it took 10 years, I agree that the numbers should be synchronized. Life will be easier for police, fire and delivery men.

I remember a recent town meeting when a fireman explained the difficulty in finding streets and house numbers in town. Visitors will have an easier time finding us, which in most cases will be for the better.

So, if anyone has need for an orange mailbox numbered 36 and the stationery to go with it, we can now be reached at the above address.

When the potatoes touch the peas

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon held up a plate filled with relatively undamaged roast beef, oven roasted potatoes and peas.

"Why," he bellowed, "didn't Tanya eat her dinner? Everything's cooked to perfection."

I glanced casually at the plate.

"Easy. The meat is touching the potato. And one of the peas is nestling right up to the bread. Tanya won't eat anything if it's touching anything else."

"That's ridiculous," he growled. "She eats stew, doesn't she?"

"The last time she did," I replied, "Beechnut made it. She will eat cooked vegetables, though. Eileen would only eat them if they were raw."

"Is she the one who was a vegetarian?"

"No," I told him. "That was Mary Claire. Remember, she bought all those books about cooking with soy beans? I cornered the soy bean market on the South Shore so she'd get enough protein, but then all she'd eat was pizza, popcorn, and potato chips."

"How about Maureen?"

"Ah," I smiled. "There was a joy. She ate everything."

"Yeah," Breida interjected, "including everyone else's food."

"I always wondered," I mused. "Is she the one who stole the M and M's I had for Kevin's birthday cake?"

"Nope. That was Jay, but he told her he'd make her bed for a week if she took the blame."

"This is crazy," the Dragon roared. "Why must we devote so much time to making them eat the things they should and keeping them from eating the things they shouldn't?"

"Because," Skipper explained reasonably, "the things that are good for us all taste like turnip."

"Or liver," Breida agreed. "Or broccoli or cauliflower."

Larry agreed. "Why can't they invent a vegetable that tastes like Hershey bars?"

"Anyway," he added, "it's more fun finding the stuff you don't want us to have. Like, remember the time Ma hid the cookies in your sock drawer?"

Breida giggled. "And she forgot about them and they were all green when you found them."

"By the way," she asked, "how come you hadn't looked in your sock drawer in three months?"

"Because," he snarled, "I'd given up hope of ever finding socks there. Are you trying to tell me that there's no way we can keep you from finding the snacks we buy?"

I smiled knowingly and whispered in his ear. "Of course there is. Just put them under the dish towel or behind the furniture polish."

Charles DeSantis expresses his thanks

Letters

To the Editor:

I extend my gratitude to all of you who listened, questioned and endured my presentations regarding an alternative to the presently proposed large central sewage plan. I wish to indicate my respect to all who made the effort to express themselves by voting at Town Meeting.

I wish to express my admiration to the present sewer commissioner, Joe Gwinn, and to former commissioners Janet Daggett and Gerry Stanton who have worked so hard on our behalf to carry out the former will of the town.

We can all be proud of our present Board of Selectmen, who although sincerely opposed to our proposal, have displayed true statesmanship by accepting the will of the town and have directed the town counsel to immediately commence the procedures to modify the Agreement for Judgement.

I wish to extend my thanks and appreciation to the press who have covered the topic so fairly. They have all displayed a rare ability to digest and communicate a rather complex issue into terms that all of us were able to grasp.

I appeal to all to give our search for an alternative to a large central sewage treatment facility your support. I certainly solicit your time and energy. I know of no endeavor that can have more potential reward for us and future generations than this project.

Our task is so difficult, but I am confident that we shall prevail. We simply cannot afford to do otherwise.

Murray, McKinnon oppose Sunday hours

The repeal of the Sunday Blue Laws allowing stores to open Sundays year round has divided area legislators.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset has joined state Sen. Allan McKinnon of Weymouth in opposing the measure. Both say Sunday should be a family day.

State Rep. Philip Johnston of Marshfield supported the measure because of the economic benefits, especially to the unemployed.

The bill will allow retail stores and supermarkets to open after noon on Sundays with the exception of legal holidays. Liquor stores are exempted and will be closed.

In addition the bill prohibits store owners from forcing employees to work on Sundays. Employees who refuse Sunday work cannot be discriminated against, dismissed or face reduced work hours or other penalties. These will be considered unfair labor practices.

The bill also requires stores with more than seven employees, including the store owner, to pay time-and-a-half to Sunday employees.

The bill passed both the House and the Senate and was sent Tuesday to the Governor's desk. It is not known if Gov. Edward King will sign the measure but he has said he favors keeping Sunday a family day.

The law will take effect 90 days after it's signed by the Governor.

MURRAY

In addition to her family belief, Murray said a family only has so much money.

"If there are Sunday openings, what about Monday and Tuesday? Will they be dead? We only have so much we can spend."

Regarding the argument for keeping the stores open on Sunday for the working woman, Murray said, "I can appreciate the plight but how about extending the hours Monday through Friday?"

She noted the South Shore Chamber of Commerce opposed the repeal because it would hurt small businesses which can't afford to hire Sunday help and also increase business operating expenses.

Murray added, "What about the Ma and Pa owned stores? Does this mean they are out the door?"

McKINNON

"I am a traditionalist and tend to believe society is going too fast. A day of rest will do good things for all of us."

McKinnon added his vote was one to preserve family life and like Murray, supports the philosophy that families have a limited amount of money to spend.

He said the Sunday repeal measure does have some advantages such as increasing jobs. But he believes the jobs created will be minimum wage jobs.

Although the bill contains anti-discrimination measures, McKinnon believes "there are subtle ways employers may force their employees to work Sundays."

JOHNSTON

Although he supported the bill, Johnston has mixed thoughts on the issues. He said there are strong arguments on both sides of the issue. It was one of the more difficult votes for him.

The two most persuasive arguments causing him to support the repeal were the economic benefits to the community and the increase in jobs.

He also was called by many working women in his district who told him Sunday openings would make their lives easier because they have a limited amount of shopping time each week.

Shopping on Sunday— How do you feel?

Do you think the Cohasset stores should be open Sundays? Would you shop in them if they were open? Or do you think the stores should stay under the Blue Laws as they now exist?

The Mariner believes store openings should be the option of the businesses. We are aware of the argument that says Sunday shopping obliterates family day. But that has no clout because of the number of types of stores now open on Sundays, never mind those in neighboring states, which have no Blue Laws.

We also recognize the burden that may be placed on businesses if they feel coerced into competition when other stores are open. The overhead of overtime, heat and staff (if they're willing) may be a financial disadvantage rather than a boon.

Here we are asking residents to let businesses know how they would respond to Sunday shopping.

Please use the space below for your opinion. Send your response to: Sunday Shopping, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield.

Selectmen briefs...

BROOKS CLEANED

Selectmen want to know what brooks and streams have been cleaned in the past year. They received a letter from South Main St. resident James Leonard, requesting culverts on that street be cleared.

The stream in the back of his property has become swampy and is blocked. The culvert has become a breeding ground for mosquitoes, he said.

Selectmen agreed Bound Brook also needs to be cleaned. They want to know if these waterways are under the jurisdiction of the DPW.

PROSECUTOR WORK WEEK

Quincy District Court Judge Albert Kramer notified the police department he would like a prosecuting officer in the court five days a week. Attorney Richard Henderson told selectmen Cohasset now has an officer in the court four days. The five-day work week would be a violation of the police association contract. But, Henderson added, the police prosecutor has informally agreed to work the five days in court. Contract modifications will be worked out with the officer, he added.

THOMPSON APPOINTED

Warren Thompson of the Cohasset Yacht Club, was named a member of the Harbor Study Committee. Selectmen approved Thompson's appointment as the yacht club representative to the board.

UNION CONTRACT CHANGE

Cohasset Police Association attorney Joseph McFarland notified selectmen last week, because police work a 37½ hour work week, they were not being fully compensated for holiday pay as required in their contract. The officers lose about $4.27 per holiday due to the current calculations. Selectmen voted to compensate the officers as mandated in the union contract.

LICENSE CHANGE

Selectmen changed the times of the liquor license at the Red Lion Inn from 1 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Sundays, to 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. on that day. The inn requested the longer hours so it could serve Sunday brunch at the restaurant.

NEWS FEATURE/EDITORIAL – At one point Boston and suburban news readers had eight newspapers from which to pick. Decline of metro print news medium probably means best information to come from local newspapers where real people 'unfettered by stardom' continue striving to bring readers honest news in the tradition of waning print news giants

"...OK...besides doing news features for the Globe, a column for the Herald, sports for the Record-American and an international for the Monitor...what else can you do...?"

Lost faith in T.M.

(Following is a copy of a letter to Town Moderator William Weeks. Ed.)

Dear Mr. Weeks:

I have lost faith in the Town meeting form of government in Cohasset.

During discussion of a very serious manner, sewerage for Cohasset, I tried to be recognized eight times and be allowed to speak without success. It has always been my practice to be brief and to the point in my expressed thoughts. In this particular situation, I had substantial information which should have been heard.

Why did the moderator feel I should be denied the right to speak? I guess my attendance at Town Meeting is no longer worthwhile.

School Committee briefs...

EXPANSION OF SOUTH SHORE LEAGUE

High School Principal Richard Streeter said the South Shore League voted to offer membership to Scituate and Whitman-Hanson. They have until Dec. 15 to accept or decline.

Holbrook, however, has applied to switch to the Mayflower League. Last year their application to combine with Mayflower was rejected.

The South Shore League voted to expand from the present 10 towns to a membership of from 12 to 20 towns in order to permit competition among small schools and large schools. Small schools would prefer to play other small schools in football, because large schools, with a larger student body, can field much bigger and heavier players on the average.

DRUG AND ALCOHOL POLICY BEING COLLATED

The new Drug and Alcohol Student Policy has been xeroxed and is in the process of being collated, according to Supt. Crowell. It will be distributed before Christmas.

CONCERT

High School instrumental and choral groups will give a holiday concert on Wednesday, Dec. 22.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Crowell announced that he had extended the leave of the school librarian due to a "family medical emergency" for the remainder of the school year. She has submitted a resignation, but he preferred not to accept it. A professional librarian substitute is being employed; her salary now will change since she will be a permanent substitute for the remainder of the year. Crowell anticipates a savings of up to $10,000 in the library account this year.

BASIC SKILLS IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

Crowell read a communication from John Reynolds noting approval of Cohasset's Basic Skills reading Improvement Plan by the State Department of Education.

BUS SEPARATION

Committee member Martha Gjesteby praised Crowell and bookkepper Linda Jorgensen for separating out repair expenses for each bus. Crowell said the separation will help administrators decide which buses should be replaced.

He will detail utility expenses and substitute costs in the same manner in the budget. Crowell said calculating substitute costs takes about a day under the current system of hand-bookkeeping. He supports the School Dept. using the new $90,000 computer which the town authorized at the recent special town meeting.

CHANGE ORDER APPROVED

The school committee unanimously approved $341.40 for a change order for MacDonald Sprague to use heavy flashing on the high school roof. Crowell had previously sought and received verbal approval by telephone from the members while the work was in progress. The roof work has been completed and just awaits the architect's approval of payment.

GOALS DISCUSSION POSTPONED

The school committee again postponed discussion of its goals until a meeting later in December. The date and time are yet to be decided.

Property tax payments

Donald Bates, executive vice president of the Cohasset Savings Bank, announced that the bank will cooperate fully with mortgagors to make property tax payments to local towns before Dec. 31 so that individuals may claim these payments as deductions from their 1982 income taxes.

Noting that tax bills for both Scituate and Cohasset are still to be issued, Bates said that the bank will not exercise the right to a 30-day grace period in the payment of these bills for persons having mortgages with the bank.

Concern had been expressed by town officials that the delay in the issuance of the tax bills in Cohasset and Scituate might jeopardize the income tax deductions normally claimed for tax payments. Cohasset Savings Bank holds mortgages on more than 1,000 homes in the two towns.

Three hundred honor former Postmaster Keating

Retired Cohasset Postmaster Gerard Keating called his night something he will never forget.

"Quite a cosmopolitan group — from all walks of life — came. I couldn't have been happier with the kindness from everyone," Keating said.

Over 300 people came to a testimonial dinner held last week in Keating's honor.

The highlight was receiving a telegram directly from President Ronald Reagan in Brazil. The telegram, signed by the president, recognized Keating's 42 years of service as a federal employee and wished him well and good health in the future.

Keating, 63, of Black Horse Lane, has also served as a school committee member. He was Cohasset Postmaster for 34 years.

Ken Coleman was master of ceremonies for the testimonial. He is the current Red Sox announcer and executive director of the Jimmy Fund.

Other speakers included state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murry, regional Postmaster Philip Sullivan and Town Historian Bertram Pratt.

Margaret Keating, her four sons, Larry, Tom, Steve and Brian, and 30 relatives attended. Their fifth son, Chris, could not attend because he was told he would be the starting linebacker for the Buffalo Bills in last Sunday's contest against the Green Bay Packers.

Sullivan gave Keating two citations and recalled that Keating began working when the late President Harry Truman was elected to office.

Keating also received citations from selectmen, the state Legislature and Gov. Edward King.

Fifteen classmates from the Cohasset High School Class of 1937 attended. One flew in from San Francisco to attend the evening's festivities.

Bob CiCiotte organized a slide presentation called "This is Your Life," a photo history of Keating from birth to 1982, called "This is Your Life."

Clark Chatterton presented Keating with a color television and a photo album was presented by local post office employees.

Also attending were 20 present and former postmasters. Other head table guests were Father John Keohane of St. Anthony's Church and Rev. Richard Muir of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Margaret and Gerard Keating with four of five sons: Larry, Steve, Brian and Tom — Chris was absent from his Dad's testimonial. (Greg Derr photo)

Moonin', lightnin' and jivin' all are on the minds of "Grease's" cast.

Mia Graham, who plays Marty, sings about her Marine "Freddy."

Rockin' with 'Grease'

Yes, a "Doody" (Skip Urmson) would really strike up a tune in Rydell High's corridors — it was all a part of the 50's scene. That's (L-R) Frenchy (Maureen Buckley), Marty (Mia Graham), Danny (Linton Young), Eugene (Kurt Hochkeppel) and super rah-rah, Patty (Jillian Ayer) with the guitar man.

They go together — Pink Ladies and Burger Palace Boys — poodle skirts and tee-shirts — grease and lipstick.

'Grease' will get your blood pumping

By Jane Lane

A review

Hey, all you fellas and gals, grab your leather jacket and chiffon scarf and head down to the high school this weekend for a groovy and very hip class reunion.

The high school music department is presenting the 1950's rock n' roll musical "Grease," and if this doesn't get your blood pumping, you must be dead.

The play, held Friday, Dec. 3, will be presented again Friday and Saturday nights, Dec. 10 and 11. The play starts at 8 p.m. at the high school auditorium.

How a bevy of such talented high school students enrolled in one school is beyond me. These kids, in grades nine through 12, can sing, act, dance and even get a half an automobile up onto a stage.

This prop, known as "Greased Lighnin'," seemed to be the chopped-off front end of a severely impaired car. It is an important "vehicle" in the play, and worked surprisingly well — even entering on cue.

"Grease" is a romping, playful look back at what appears to have been a more carefree time. The girls had to worry about such things as hiding hickies on their necks. The uniform for the boys — a leather jacket over jeans and a white tee-shirt — would gain you entrance into school.

Although most of the action centered around the school, it seemed as if academia was the last thing on the mind of kids 30 years ago.

Now, I have no intention of divulging my age, but seeing the play does bring back memories of my...older sister, attending high school. The poodle skirts, the huge hair rollers, the pajama parties, are all part of my past (spying on my sister and her friends, of course).

But aside from the memories, it's the music that really gets this play off the ground. And that's where these kids are to be commended and awed.

Just about every song, with the accompaniment of a very capable combo, had the audience literally electrified. The songs, especially solos by Linton Young as Danny, and Lilly Carbone as Rizzo, were simply "marvie." I hate to single out individual performers, because they all were wonderful, but these two individuals stood out from the remainder of an outstanding cast.

Throughout the play, I kept thinking that "Grease" was a wonderful selection to have the high school produce. These kids obviously loved every minute of their performance on the stage, and that of course, is contagious to an audience watching them.

Why, when I was in high school, did we always have to do Agatha Christie? Not that there is anything wrong with Christie, but our productions were traditionally staid, dry attempts that only our devoted mothers and fathers and an aunt or uncle would obligingly attend.

"Grease" is a play that the entire community will enjoy. And certainly those mothers and fathers should feel extremely proud of their kids who are participating in this production.

From the courteous ushers who greet you in their poodle skirts and white anklets — temporarily replacing their Calvin Klein's and leg warmers — to the choreography, the flavor of the Fifties surrounds the audience. It sets an appropriate mood which never extinguishes until the last song is completed.

A standing ovation greeted the cast as they returned for the final curtain. It was well-deserved applause from a thankful standing-room-only crowd.

It would be futile to nitpick the minor flaws in this production — although I would admittedly be hard pressed to find any. This is a play everyone will enjoy and should attend. The entire student body should be proud of this accomplishment, and indeed the community should share in that pride.

One problem for the front seat viewers might have been amplification of the band. From my seat in the second-to-last row, the band sounded great and I could hear the kids' voices over the instruments. But I was wondering if the folks in the closer seats were swallowed within the wails of electric guitars and saxophones directly in front of them. I'm not sure there is a solution to this problem.

There is not a lot of extra space in the auditorium to seat the orchestra elsewhere. But the music may have been more a nuisance than an enhancement to the patrons in the front rows.

Director Bryon Marks should be commended for putting together such a success. It's not an easy task to so deftly coordinate the 50 or so students who participated in the performance. Each student had his or her own chance to shine in this production which allows for several solos, comedic interplay, some fancy dance numbers, and a few dramatic moments.

It would not be worthwhile to relate the storyline of "Grease," and it would be difficult to uncover one. That's not the important element here. The long-running success of "Grease" is that it is a "happening" which is to be enjoyed, not interpreted.

Ship Goes Down With Advisors

Only a few people would believe that a staff of high school students could produce a paper of such broad scope and diversity. They are, in alphabetical order, geriatrics who spit cranberries at Edaville Railroad cars, African tribesmen who wear panty-hose and snort Cruex, nomadic driving instructors, people who do Neil Sedaka impressions, and everyone else who has never read the Cohasset Lamplight. None the less, we are not an elitist paper. In fact, even the most incompetent, nauseatingly perverse of students can be editors.

So far this year, the Lamplight has put together one independent issue and one dependent one which you are reading now as your five year-old son chases the Persian cat through the living room with a lawnmower.

We are very lucky this year to have a staff which is both hungry and God-fearing. Hungry because the lunch ladies still refuse to wear hairnets and God-fearing because the advisors shriek Moslem war cries during the layout meetings. Reaction to our first issue has been mixed. Some disliked it. Some hated it. As a matter of fact, our mothers were told never to show their faces in Bible Study again. Our English teacher forced us to walk down the halls while beating a bell and shouting "Unclean! Unclean!" We are not easily deterred.

We would like to thank this merchant community whose support in the way of advertising has been more than inadequate. As the immortal Kahlil Gibran once said: "I am poor and have no money; please release my oxen." We think the relevance is clear.

We would like to encourage the parents of this town to become more actively supportive of The Lamplight instead of sitting home watching game shows and wondering what it would be like to be fed Sugar Pops intravenously. Sorry, it won't happen again. Maybe we're not the National Enquirer and maybe we don't have pictures of 500 pound babies and ads for the removal of unwanted limbs, but we need and deserve your attention.

If your son or daughter would like to join our staff, the faculty advisors can be found in the junior high boys' room almost any free period. We intend to prove this year, if nothing else, that high school students of all ages really care. There have been a lot of rumors lately that we have become bitter and frustrated. This is unfair and we think whoever started these rumors should have one of his kidneys ripped out and spend the rest of his life chained to a dialysis machine.

Thank you for your attention.

Vol. 5, No. 2 Fall Cohasset High School 1982

Teacher Profile

By Andy Long

In this, the second installment in a continuing series of teacher profiles, we delve into the personal life of one of the most student respected teachers in the Cohasset school system.

Focus: Mr. Joseph Bouchard.

Four years ago, Mr. Bouchard arrived in Cohasset. Bringing with him a unique teaching style and much knowledge of, and experience with, kids of many ages, he fit right in with the Cohasset sense of responsible education. That first year, Mr. Bouchard, a history teacher, started out in the American Studies Program. In 1979-80, he was moved to the 9th Grade Humanities Program, where has stayed, spouting his theories on "cul-cha," amid New York accents, up until the present. Mr. Bouchard seems to be very relaxed in this suburban community setting. He "loves" all teaching. But working in Cohasset especially has made him "very very happy."

Mr. Bouchard was born and raised in Fort Kent, Maine, a town considerably smaller than Cohasset, and not sub-anything. However, when he was 16 years-old, his family moved to Queens, New York. It was here that he received his most important high school education. But, like many high school graduates, he didn't know what he wanted to do. Even during his first year at Marist College, he had no idea of what he wanted to get into, although he liked many of his history courses. Near the end of sophomore year, however, he decided that a career in education was what he wanted most. Upon graduation, Mr. Bouchard started teaching Physical Education and French for a few years. Four years after College, he went back to school to earn his Masters Degree at Seton Hall University. Here, he found that he still had a strong interest in history. But teaching history rather than taking courses were what really interested him. After a few years of teaching in New York with his Masters, he finally made it to Cohasset High.

Mr. Bouchard, the man, seems to be just as interesting as Mr. Bouchard, the teacher. A good softball or football game, or coaching baseball, are enjoyable for him in his free time. In the time that is not free, he immensely enjoys life with his wife and two small kids. Referring to the relatively recent addition of the two small members of his household, Mr. Bouchard states, "I used to travel a lot, but this is just a whole new life."

Another very rewarding aspect of his life is the summer. For the past 16 years, a summer camp for boys in New Hampshire has had Mr. Bouchard as its Programming Director. He talks about this with great enthusiasm and respect. It's obviously a very important part of his life.

Excellence is evident. Besides establishing a beautiful rapport with the kids in his classes, Mr. Bouchard also uses previouis experiences to help instill a sense of fairness and respect in his work. "If you are fair to them they will respect you. And vice-versa," he espouses. He goes on, "You can have all the doctorate knowledge you can get; if they don't accept you, you can't teach them."

The greatest common denominator, though, of Mr. Bouchard's philosophy, is that one should "Just be yourself." He relates to kids and contemporaries alike in this way. There are no false conceptions misreprenting him, it seems. His educational philosophy is a very effective and stimulating way to teach. One of the greatest satisfactions he receives is knowing that the kids he teaches learn what is presented. Knowing that, Mr. Bouchard is just who he is, "himself." He must go home each June feeling very happy and satisfied.

Powderpuff

By Susan Hobson

The girls of the Junior and Senior classes met once again for the annual Powder Puff football game on Sunday, Nov. 21 at Cohasset High School. At this confrontation the Seniors emerged victorious with a score of 36 to 0. As a senior, I am not sure which was the more intense feeling — the thrill of victory or the agony of my battered limbs. It seems that at this game any pretense of charm or civility vanished, revealing the true aggressive inclinations that lurk in girls. The girl who in school scarcely makes a noise surprisingly turns out to be one of the most dreaded and enthusiastic of players, while the usually loud student becomes even more so. As a result, everyone was excited at the chance to play football and to prove what they were truly capable of.

Before the game all the Juniors and Seniors banded together to form two rival caravans of decorated cars. We drove through town, as most of the town probably remembers, loudly declaring our superiority over the other class. The police stopped us only in front of the churches to make sure we were quiet enough so as not to disturb Sunday services. However, once we were out of the quiet zone, we were as loud as our car horns and voices would allow.

Then it was time for the game. I'm not sure we did not look terribly professional in our line-ups or huddles from the sidelines, but we were having a great time anyway. As a defensive player, I knew my objective was to "kill the guy with the ball." For the offensive players, the objective was to get the ball throuigh the charging girls and over the white line at the end of the field. On Sunday, Mr. Di and Mr. Ekberg's mastermind plans worked without a flaw as Gia Barresi, Karen Ekberg, Nancy Kuntz and all the other offensive players played remarkably. Equally impressive were Mr. Fallon's defensive plans which worked just as well as the offensive plans. Maureen Kelly, Katie Clinton, Maureen Buckley and the rest of the defensive unit made key plays. Ignoring the occasional violent temper, I think everyone had the fun that the game was created for.

Then the Powder Puff game was over. The Seniors, as it was meant to be, were victorious. But worry not, Juniors, your time will come next year, when it will presumably be your turn to win.

Leaf it for Mother Nature

By Lois Martin

Guilt makers have achieved new heights with their latest use of the art form.

They bug you to death about your leaves. They cast aspersions and derisive glances at oak fettered lawns till you feel as if you'd put the cat in charge of doing the dishes.

What is all this fuss about leaves! Gosh, people who live on the Kansas plains or on the Nevada desert would give anything for these rustic rewards. They're probably out there buying leaves for fall decorations. Here we throw them away. If we didn't have them in our area we'd spend good money, grind them up and call them mulch to spread on the lawn for winter protection.

I've never learned to be offended by leaves. I've tried because it's classier. Oh, I've even raked a few myself. But this year I find no fault in them.

Others have found it for me. They tell me about their arduous hours of raking on Sundays, how they've tugged or blown them away. They heave their weary bodies on my couch which has been previously warmed by my loitering presence. I tell them it took me hours to get my leaves spread out as they are, that I hope they didn't disturb the arrangement when they drove in. My little chuckle echos among the silent, neater people.

The truth of the matter is this. My rake motor's in the shop. And the man's so backed up there's no telling when he can get to it.

I've considered scuffing out a warm message for the motorists and joggers..."Hi!" in oak leaves as they pass by.

Or I could go out evenings when I've got a little time on my hands, swish around the leaves to the edge so that I have a potential bequest for the neighbors.

That wouldn't make me feel guilty. Many neighbors have one of those leaf blowers. I've been longing for a leaf war between two blowers.

But I'm going to adopt a more serious posture on my leaves. I said to Terry this morning that our position on the leaves is as follows: We raked like the devil for three and a half days and darned if a brisk easterly wind didn't blow them right out of the woods and back on the lawn.

He liked the idea right away and said so far as he was concerned he was really ticked off about the leaves being back and he wasn't about to rake them again.

So we've settled on that. While other homes are fronted and backed by still verdant lawns, ours has earth tones. You people whose grass suffers winter-kill needn't come running to me for sod next spring. Any sensible New Englander knows you've got to cover your lawn if you want those roots protected.

But I'm not big on causing guilt. Call me in April if you need to reseed or spread some lime...though I'm not sure if my little spreader motor will be fixed by then.

ANNOUNCING
An Exciting New Place To Live in Hingham...

The MEADOWS

FURNISHED MODELS NOW OPEN!

You'll love living at The Meadows, a superb new community of attached single family homes now being built by The Green Company in Hingham. Expert construction crews have completed the first group of two and three bedroom homes, and the exciting furnished models are now ready for your visit.

Our pride in the design and construction of The Meadows is well justified as you'll see when you visit. There's a wonderful spaciousness to the homes . . . an exceptional flow between rooms achieved through the use of large foyer areas, vaulted ceilings, expansive glass with views to the out-of-doors, and rooms opening into each other yet subtly separated by custom dividers.

There are many gracious details: tray ceilings; large country kitchens with sunny breakfast bays—even one designed as a greenhouse; walk-in bay windows; and exceptional master suites, some including secluded fireplaced sitting rooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights.

The combination of location, space and amenities make these homes an exceptional value at $153,000 to $210,000. We suggest a visit soon for early selection. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, keep left to our entrance, or call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

Developed, marketed and managed with pride by Green Hingham, Inc. (An important part of the Green Company family)

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

The good news is that while Christmas shopping I discovered a treasure trove of hand-crafted gifts. The bad news is that Crafts Unlimited closes Christmas Eve, not to open again until April. I give you fair warning that you'll want one of everything, for in the little shop on Ocean St. next to Papa Gino's in Marshfield is a charming array of 28 different crafts. This little gem of a store is operated as a co-op, each item juried before being accepted for sale and the staff consists of members who have to play shopkeeper for eight hours each month. Richelle Saunders and Karen McNiff were doing their stint the day I stopped by and I was given the grand tour, viewing such delights as Marilyn Hassett's scrimshaw pieces, raffia dolls, Karen's colonial floor mats and Richelle's stencilled pieces. Jackie Johnson's two-faced sleeping dolls and much, much more will enchant you. But, back to the kitchen. Here is a holiday recipe from our Millie Carr, called

SUGAR PLUM PUDDING

2 c. all-purpose flour
1½ c. sugar
1¼ tsp. baking soda
t tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. allspice
1 tsp. cinnamon
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
3/4 c. salad oil
3 eggs
1 c. buttermilk
1 c. cooked prunes
1 c. chopped walnuts, optional

Sift dry ingredients together three times. Add other ingredients in order given and mix well. Grease and flour bundt pan. Pour in mixture and bake at 375 degrees for 40 to 45 min.

Glaze:
1 c. sugar
1/2 c. buttermilk
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. white corn syrup
1/2 c. butter

Put all ingredients in a pan. Stir. Bring to boil. Pour over cake while cake is hot and still in pan. Cool before removing. Serves 16 good-size servings.

When you open the door to the little shop next to the Cohasset Savings Bank on Elm St., the aroma that fills the air is sheer heaven. Almond rings, Portuguese bread, whole-wheat honey rolls, cardamon bread; all contribute to the fragrance in The Bread Shop. Sine Pounder, a former schoolteacher who loves to cook, has the whole family involved in her first commercial enterprise. Her yeast breads are made in full view of the customer and you may wish to try out this bread recipe in your kitchen, called

EGGNOG HOLIDAY BREAD

3 c. flour
3/4 c. sugar
1 tbsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1½ c. eggnog
1 egg, beaten
1/4 c. melted margarine
3/4 c. chopped walnuts
3/4 c. of candied fruit, chopped

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and nutmeg into large bowl. Combine eggnog, egg and margarine, stir into sifted ingredients. Stir in walnuts and fruit. Turn into buttered loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees about 1 hour (may need extra 10 min.) Turn onto wire rack and cool.

Though hobbies sometimes have a way of developing into lucrative careers for many, the joy of creating is reward enough. I like to think that serving a pleasant meal, trying out new recipes and having a knowledge of good diet habits, is a hobby in itself. Instead of ending up with a houseful of ashtrays made in pottery class, or everything from the sugar bin to the living room walls covered with stencilling, cooking is a hobby that can go on and on through the years. Hobbies should be fun and so I thought our good cooks here on the South Shore might care to join in our little holiday contest. No box-tops, no jingles, no coupons; just send us a copy of your family's favorite holiday recipe and we'll have a holiday plant for the winner. In order to meet our Christmas deadline, send your entry to me at P.O. Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051 no later than Dec. 15. P.S. Lois promises a few MARINER gift subscriptions for those winning honorable mention. Do join in the fun!

Christmas presents for the Greek Orthodox Church

By Patricia Anne Walsh

For Christmas Eugenia Syrmopoulos would like to be able to pay off the $85,000 mortgage on the Greek Orthodox Panagia Church on Jerusalem Road. At the least she hopes to raise $10,000 for the mortgage fund.

She also wants to obtain pews for the church.

For Christmas, Father Dean Mendrinos, called "Father Dean" by the parishioners, said he "would like to see peace throughout the world." He also wants to erect a Christmas tree hung with icons in the church.

"Panagia" stands for Nativity and Assumption of the Mother Mary. The Cohasset Church was founded by Eugenia Syrmopoulos, Michael Vallas and Ernest Sofis, who held the first liturgy two years ago in the building formerly known as Pope Memorial Church.

Pope Memorial was built in 1900 for $300,000 by Col. Albert Pope, as a memorial to his son who drowned at 18 years old. Pope was the wealthy manufacturer of Columbia bicycles, owned the first bicycle factory established in the United States and had a "pretentious" country estate on Jerusalem Road, opposite Straits Pond.

Syrmopoulos says many visitors believe the church might have been designed by the famous architect Richardson, who built Trinity Church in Boston and Bellarmine House, a summer Jesuit retreat on Cohasset Harbor. The Church is also famous for its Hutchins organ, one of only five in the country, pumped by air, water and electricity.

The Church was Methodist until the congregation dwindled in the 1970s. Then it was rented to the Nazarenes for a short time.

Syrmopoulos wants donated or inexpensive pews because the Methodists sold the old pews for $10 each from the front lawn before relinquishing the church.

Now parishioners have to sit on metal folding chairs.

Although the congregation stands through most of the service, the metal chairs are awkward and noisy.

Until September the services were conducted by visiting priests. Father Dean, 39 years old, studied at Holy Cross Seminary in Brookline and was ordained in 1981. He teaches vocal music at the Seminary three days a week. He lives in Medfield with his wife Roxanne, and two children, Alexandra and George. A priest's wife is always addressed as "Presbetera," by members of the church.

From the original three founders, the congregation has grown to 102 families with over 220 members. Members come from Braintree, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Plymouth, Scituate, Weymouth and Cohasset. The other nearest Greek Orthodox Churches are in Hyannis, Boston and Wollaston.

At Christmas, Greeks serve Christpsomo (bread of Christ) decorated with almonds and Kourabiedes covered with powdered sugar, which are also called Melomacaroma when soaked in diluted honey.

Since the Presbetera often receives these as gifts, she concentrates on cooking Baklava with walnuts and sweet syrup and spinach and cheese pies.

The Church will have a Creche, and Father Dean wants the Christmas Tree to be erected in the church and hung with icons to remind the congregation of the religious significance, rather than the commercial significance of the day.

Icons are holy pictures of sacred Christian personages. The tree will be hung with icons of the Nativity, Assumption, Mother Mary, Christ and eight saints whose feastdays are in December. Such a tree is not traditional in Europe, but it has become a custom in this country.

Father Dean has a true gentleness and shows great consideration and politeness to everyone. The liturgy of the service, he said, is the same as written about 400 A.D. by St. John Chrysostom, Patriarch of Constantinople. It was taken from a longer version which goes back to St. James, the Apostle and was first celebrated in Jerusalem.

The Sunday service in the Cohasset Church begins at 10 a.m. and lasts until almost 11:30.

Two-thirds of the worship is in English and the remainder in Hellenistic (not modern) Greek. Most of the service consists of chanting, singing and the responses of the congregation. The church does not give allegiance to the Pope in Rome, but the service is similar to the Catholic service in the use of vestments, gold vessels and bible cover, incense, young altar boys, communion lines and the recitation of the Creed and Lord's Prayer. The service differs in the Sign of the Cross which is made from right to left, instead of left to right. The collection, sermon, and announcements come at the end of the service.

On a recent Sunday, over 100 people attended the service. The long continuous singing, chanting and responses brought an awareness of reverence. No musical instrument accompanied the voices.

Father Dean's sermon was about St. Barbara whose feastday was the previous day. She was tortured daily by order of Emperor Diocletian, Roman Emperor from 284 to 305 A.D. At night she prayed and her wounds healed. Finally, in anger, the Emperor ordered that she be beheaded.

The priest related her sufferings to sickness and sin, exorting the parishioners with a sincere, gentle voice.

At the end of the worship, the people queued up to receive a final, extra gift of cubes of bread (not the previous communion) and kissed the hands of the priest. Father Dean said this was a derivation from feeding the poor in the early days.

The Ladies Guild, which does philanthropic work, will visit a home for senior citizens in Canton next week.

School Committee postpones naming new business manager

Does the school department need a business manager?

The school committee has delayed filling the position to save money and to ensure prospective candidates are certified.

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell said, "The School Committee talked it over in executive session, and instructed me to send delay letters to candidates. That has been done."

He said the top five candidates had been selected; final screening will be delayed for four months.

The position has been vacant since the end of October when John Raftery resigned as business manager. He now heads the Bureau of Nutrition at the state Department of Education.

Crowell said a new person would be unfamiliar with the budget which he has been working on with Steve Hart, Assistant to the Superintendent for Special Education, Federal and State Grants, and Metco.

By the end of February Crowell said the committee will be making budget decisions and will decide if it is "fiscally prudent" to fill the position. "We are holding our options open," he said.

Chairman Diana Kornet said the committee hoped to hire someone for a lower salary than the former business manager received. That was $33,488 plus $600 travel allowance for this year.

She said several of the candidates were re-certifying, or reopening certification, and "we don't want to make a decision until we find out if they are certifiable by the state."

Crowell said Hart was helping with the budget and warrants, and that school principals John Creamer and Kenneth Ekberg were responsible for applying for state and federal funds. The purchase order system has been changed so the three principals have a more dominant role in the process. They initiate purchase orders and are responsible for scrutinizing them.

School Committee member, John Langmaid said, "In looking at the position at budget time, we will explore reports from Hart and the Supt. to see if it is possible to continue these delegations of responsibility and procedures over a longer time, as well as take financial considerations into account."

Clergy speaks...

By Rev. Edward T. Atkinson
Minister, First Parish in Cohasset

A Christmas song which our Youth Choir sings with great gusto is, "I'm gettin' nuttin' for Christmas 'cause I ain't been nuttin' but bad..."

At first their enthusiasm for this song baffled me. How could they sing with relish a song about not receiving any Christmas presents? But soon I came to see that the song gave the children an opportunity to express their rebellion against the popular practice of manipulating behavior with the promise of gifts or the threat of punishment.

No one likes to have their actions controlled by another person through threats, or what may be worse, bribes, since the control in the latter case is more subtle and difficult to combat. Punishments may induce conformity, but they also breed resentment. Rewards rob good actions of their virtue if the good is only done for the reward.

Punishments and rewards may be promptly and reliably meted out in the carefully structured environment of one of B.F. Skinner's famous boxes, but in the larger world we should realize that the imposition of similar order would mark an end to human freedom.

Life, God, the Universe, human beings are far more complicated, untidy, and wonderful than the simplistic belief that some people are good and some bad, some deserving rewards, others punishment. Each one of us is a mixture of good and ill living out our lives in a world that presents an intricate tapestry of good fortune and bad.

Whether in the distribution of Christmas gifts or in our national and international policies we continue to attempt to control the lives of others through threats of punishment or promises of reward we will fail to bring peace or good will to our world. Intimidation and bribing of people has not saved us in the past nor can it serve to save us in the future.

Very much to the contrary the first Christmas gift was an unconditional gift of love, a prophet born to save us through the teaching and example of forgiveness and love even for those who have been nuttin' but bad.

By this standard, true Christmas gifts are given unconditionally, not because we are good or bad, but because God is love and we are made at one with God as we extend the gift of unconditional love to others.

'Spring Fever' juried show

All New England artists are reminded that entires for "Spring Fever," the South Shore Art Center juried show, must be delivered Friday, Dec. 10 between 12 and 4 p.m. or Saturday, Dec. 11 between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Cash awards will be made in all categories which are: photography, painting (oils and acrylics), watercolor, drawing and pastels, prints, three-dimensional and mixed media.

In addition, there will be a $200 Best of Show award, the $100 Marion Huse Award and the Grumbacher Gold Medallion for painting.

The exhibit will open at the South Shore Art Center on Jan. 9 and continue through the month.

No entries will be accepted after Dec. 11. Jurors for the exhibit are Neil Rennie, instructor at the Maine Photographic Workshops; Jane Ritchie, professional painter affiliated with New York and Boston galleries; Cindy Stone, consultant to Art Museums and member of Boston Museum of Fine Arts education department.

For further information, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

Blue Ribbon Show winners

Artists from all over the South Shore were winners in the Blue Ribbon Show currently on exhibit at the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset.

Vice president Sheldon Ripley, assisted by Gallery Coordinator Linda Summers, announced the awards at the Center's celebration party.

Best in Show went to Jim Ann Howard of Scituate for her forceful oil-on-paper "Bald Eagle."

The Blue Ribbon 1st in watercolor was awarded to Mary Lizotte of Norwell for a richly patterned still life "Aunt Con's Vase" with Honorable Mention in watercolor given to Peter Spataro of Hanover for "Scotts News," a strong yet subtle rendering of the familiar landmark at Hanover Five-Corners.

"Texture Series," an abstract collograph by Berj Kailian of Weymouth, captured the Blue Ribbon 1st in printmaking with Honorable Mention awarded to Don Lettis of Hingham for his intricate "The Unicorn."

Thompsen Hughes of Cohasset received the Blue Ribbon first in painting for "Little Harbor" done in oil with liquid brushstrokes that evoke the feeling of water and light in a non-traditional approach.

"Surf" by Jeanne Armin of Cohasset won the Blue Ribbon for Collage and is a small abstract black and white study with an impact found in larger work; Honorable Mention in collage was awarded to Sonja Rosenfeld of Randolph for "Agean Landscape" done in bright, mosaic-like patterns.

Constance Flavett Pratt of Norwell captured the Blue Ribbon 1st in pastels for "Old Man," a portrait rendered in a forceful almost-painterly style while Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman of Weymouth received honorable mention in pastels for her softly-rendered figure study titled "Sally Ala Russe."

Gail Bryan of Cohasset received the Blue Ribbon in photography for her sensitive black and white "Sexuality Series XX." The Mixed Media Blue Ribbon went to Roy Thompsen of Hingham for "American Indian," a portrait of the chief in full regalia superimposed on the American Flag.

"Acrobat" by Walter Horak of Minot was awarded the Blue Ribbon in sculpture; the small ceramic on wood piece captures the sense of motion to perfection.

The Blue Ribbon exhibit is an annual event open to all Center members and this year fills the two galleries and upstairs studio with a wide variety of quality work.

Award jurors were Dennis Kowai, sculptor, of Cohasset and Norman Baer, painter and graphics artist, of Hingham. The exhibit will be on view Monday-Friday, 10-5, and Saturday, 10-2, through Dec. 30 at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

Singles Group tennis night

The South Shore Singles group will be having another Tennis Night on Saturday, Dec. 18. This will be at the Cohasset Tennis Club from 7:30 p.m. on. Come and play a good game of tennis or just socialize. Reservations can be made with Lydia at 749-0222 or with Bev at 878-7277.

☐Barbara Weisenfluh and Sally Wood, who are associated with Petersen Realtors, 26 South Main St., successfully completed Course One of the 1982 Fall Realtors Institute of Mass. held recently at the Sheraton-Rolling Green, Andover.

The Association sponsors Institutes throughout the year for realtors as part of its continuing education program. Upon completion of three 30-hour courses, Institute participants receive the nationally recognized designation GRI (Graduate, Realtors Institute).

☐Happy nineteenth anniversary, Clark!

☐Robin Suhrbier called last week to say she and her family drove to Killington for a day of skiing. The trip took three hours and 15 minutes, non-stop. She wanted everyone to know that it can be done in a day, and that it's not a bad trip. Good to know for those who can't find a room to stay.

Robin said the skiing isn't really great yet; by the end of the day they could see the grass peeking through. It was crowded with college students who were enjoying the first ski of the season. And, it was warm.

☐Troop 4550, and other Brownies, Girl, Cub and Boy Scouts took part in the caroling on the steps of St. Stephen's the night of the Village Stroll — a nice sight (and sound) to behold.

Watching the little ones on the hayride with eyes big as saucers was worth the trip...the shops looked festive, the steps full of singers, the streets with hay, put the Holiday mood in full swing.

Outstanding job, Ellen Morrisey and Tina Watson.

Dramatic Club to produce 'Dangerous Corner'

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will stage a winter production of playwright J.B. Priestley's mystery "Dangerous Corner."

This 1930's three-act play is scheduled to be presented at the Town Hall on Thursday through Saturday, March 3 to 5.

Tryouts for the winter show will be held at the Town Hall auditorium on Sunday, Dec. 19 from 2 to 5 p.m. and on Monday, Dec. 20 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The cast of characters for "Dangerous Corner" includes four women and three men:

Miss Mockeridge: a novelist, unmarried with a strong personality; she is "fortyish" in age; Olwen Peel: a thoughtful and sympathetic person, aged 30 to 40, and a publisher's secretary; Frieda Chatfield: bright, charming and emotional woman, the wife of the head of a publishing firm; and Betty Whitehouse: in her 20's and highly strung. She is the wife of Gordon Whitehouse: in his mid-20's , he is a very tense and emotional man and is the brother of Frieda Chatfield.

Also, Robert Chatfield: about 40, he is the head of a publishing firm and is a conservative type. He seems to be in charge of his life and is self-assured; and Charles Stanton: about 50, with a large or tall build, he is cheerful and a "man of the world." All of the characters are English and the setting is an English country home.

Directing this year's winter show is Judy Holmes of Hingham and production manager will be Betty Miessner.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club invites everyone interested in participating onstage to attend the Town Hall tryouts. Playbooks for "Dangerous Corner" are available at the main desk of the Paul Pratt Library.

At the Rec Department...

BLUE HILLS SKI LESSON REGISTRATION

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct Ski Lesson registrations at the recreation office, Town Hall, Thursday, Dec. 16 from 1:30 to 4 p.m. It is essential that parents register children as a permission form must be signed.

Program fee includes five one and three-quarter hour ski lessons as well as bus transportation to the Blue Hills Ski Area.

The program is open to children and youth aged six to 18 years.

Checks should be made payable to "Town of Cohasset."

Lessons are scheduled to begin on Friday afternoon, Jan. 7, and continue for five weeks, ending on Friday, Feb. 4.

The program will be limited in size and participants will be registered on a first-come first-enrolled basis. Equipment rentals are available.

Buses will leave Town Hall at 3:20 p.m. sharp, and return to Town Hall at about 6:45 p.m.

ADULT MORNING SKI PROGRAM

Adults who wish to take ski lessons at Blue Hills may register with the Recreation office via phone. Classes will be Wednesday mornings, from 10 to 11:45, for a five week period, beginning Wednesday, Jan. 5.

Transportation will be up to the participants; however, car pools may be arranged. It is also for those who just wish to ski. Tickets may be purchased for a half day of skiing, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

If interested in either program, call 383-6791. Adult lesson cost will be $30 for a five week session.

School budget cuts

By Patricia Anne Walsh

It will not be a happy Christmas present for school committee members.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell will send the committee a budget that must be cut $139,000 to meet the advisory board's guidelines.

Crowell sent the school committee a "confidential" budget forecast last week, a think report. When the media requested a copy, Crowell refused to release it.

He acknowledged it contained a suggestion for athletic "user fees."

Crowell said the large budget book with backup information will be completed and sent to the committee members before Christmas. The public can look at copies placed in the library, town hall or in his office.

The budget will be "level funded," not "zero based," an must be cut $139,000.

Crowell said he and his budget managers Steven Hart, and principals Richard Streeter, Ken Ekberg and John Creamer will be considering a priority list of cuts over the next few weeks, which he will be prepared to recommend to the committee.

'Minot's Light Cup Plates'

By David Wadsworth

In the year 1880 a manufacturing firm specializing in finely-made ornamental household goods was founded in New Bedford.

The Paripoint Manufacturing Company produced superb examples of silver, glass and chinaware for 14 years.

Once in close association with an older glassmaking business, Mt. Washington Glass Works, the Pairpoint Company absorbed its glass-making neighbor in 1894 and took the name of Pairpoint Corporation.

Since then the Pairpoint Corporation (later known as Gunderson-Pairpoint) has become world famous for its production of fine hand-crafted glassware.

During its long career, the firm has enjoyed enormous success, producing artistic creations in glass equal to the best found anywhere. The name of Pairpoint denoted the highest degree of craftsmanship.

Over the years unique designs emerged from the Pairpoint factory for such items as bowls, vases, paperweights, pitchers and plates.

In 1956, however, glassmaking stopped at the Company's New Bedford plant as hard times hit the industry. Production began again, albeit briefly, in Wareham.

With the closing of the glassmaking factories, the "glass-blowing gangs" began to disperse. (These "gangs," in reality, were groups of highly trained and artistically innovative craftsmen.)

But the name of Pairpoint refused to vanish, and in 1967 a new factory opened in the town of Sagamore on the shores of the Cape Cod Canal.

It was to this modern glassmaking company with the historic name that the Cohasset Historical Society turned several years ago for a specially designed commemorative glass plate known as the "Minot's Light Cup Plate."

Cup plates represent an interesting tradition dating back to the early 1800's when tea was served in cups having no handles. Hot tea was poured into saucers to cool and the cup itself was then placed on a small glass plate to avoid staining the linen tablecloth or polished tabletop.

The Historical Society's Minot's Light Cup Plates recreate this old tradition with delicately fashioned Pairpoint glass plates of about three-and-one-half inches in diameter featuring the likeness of Minot's Lighthouse in an ocean storm.

Since their introduction just a few years ago, these exquisite small plates have proved to be popular among collectors of fine glassware. Carrying the image of Cohasset's most famous landmark, the Society's Minot's Light Cup Plates have been eagerly sought by members of a nationwide Pairpoint glass collector's club, and are equally popular among Cohasset residents and visitors.

These finely handcrafted cup plates are currently featured in a variety of colors including amethyst, amber, cobalt blue, clear, and green. As individual plates or in the complete set of five different colors, the Pairpoint Minot's Light Cup Plates make a unique and lasting gift for the holiday season, or for other occasions when a thoughtful gift containing fine craftsmanship is desired.

Also available from the Cohasset Historical Society and suitable as a valued gift is the newly reprinted edition of Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's monumental volume of our town, "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset," the story of the birth and growth of a small New England town.

The Historical Society also has something unique to offer which could prove to be a one-of-a-kind gift or a "stocking stuffer." Raffle tickets for the Society's 1982 Cohasset Commemorative quilt, a product of local craftsmanship, are currently available and can be purchased from Society members.

Should you want to give any of the above described items this holiday season, from cup plates to quilt tickets, or the Bigelow history, please call the Society at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

Seahawks post a 5-2-1 week

The Seahawks got back onto the winning track once again as they posted five victories and a tie in the eight contests reported over the Nov. 26-27 weekend.

Coach Joe Greco's Bantam B's crushed Canton 6-1 as Robbie Vinal scored a "Texas Hat Trick." David O'Donnell and Eddie Parent scored the other B goals while Rick Sparrow (2), Billy Resnick (2), Jon Hoyler, John Goffar, and Parent contributed assists.

Coach Rick Sparrow's Bantam C's lost a 3-2 squeaker to Pembroke. Danny Elmes netted both C scores while John Goffar received credit for the lone assist.

Coach Carney White's Pee Wee A's blanked Canton 4-0 behind the superb goaltending of Scottie MacKay. Andy Johnson (2), Andy Thomas, and Scott Cutliff scored for the A's while Thomas (2), Danny Pompeo, James Misakian, Rickie Chase and Jamie Hoffman had assists.

Coach Frank McGovern's Pee Wee B's tied Canton 2-2. Paul Norton and Dennis Peacock dented the nets for the home team while assists were doled out to Erik Steverman (2), Steve Boardman and Kevin Quinn.

Coach Jim Consalvi's Pee Wee C's white-washed Middleboro 6-0 behind the excellent cageminding of Joshua Goulart. Carmine Cimetti (2), Stephen Elmes, Christopher Gong, Justin Hughes, and Beau Bousquet were the Seakhawk scorers while assists were registered by Gong, John Niland, Adam Belmarsh, Stephen McCoy, Mike Anderson and Karl Christ.

Coach Barry Resnick's Squirt A's annihilated Braintree 16-1 and swamped Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 9-3. Sean Noonan blasted in four goals to lead the scoring parade against Braintree. Other goal scorers in the one-sided affair were Brian Pompeo (2), Jeffrey White (2), David Orpen, Gregg Salmaine, Cole Hughes, Chris Sullivan, Mike Richardson, Jon Mahoney, and Bobby DiVito.

Orpen received a "playmaker's patch" for his four assists, and Mark Resnick, Billy Lincoln, White (2), Salmaine, Noonan, Hughes, Sullivan, Keith O'Connell, Richardson, DiVito, and Mahoney also had setups.

Richardson (2) and Mahoney (2) led the Squirt marksmen against Whitman-Hanson-Kingston, while Lincoln, Resnick, Pompeo and Orpen also hit the bullseye. Assists were metered out to Sullivan, Pompeo, Resnick, Richardson, DiVito, Hughes and Mahoney (2).

Coach Mike Dundon's Squirt B's were shut down 1-0 despite the fine netminding of Michael Dundon.

Coach Jim McGowan's youthful Mite skaters continued their winning ways with a 3-0 shutout of Pembroke. Goalie Matthew Ventolieri earned a "Mr. Zero" patch for his outstanding efforts in front of the cage. Gary Dunham (2) and Paul Frey supplied the offensive punch for the Mites.

Accused of killing sheep dog

Great Dane ordered restrained

By Jane Lane

A Great Dane believed to have slain another dog could be destroyed by the dog officer if the animal is seen roaming the streets again.

The Great Dane, owned by William Carter of Stockbridge Road, was ordered to be permanently restrained on his property. Selectmen made the determination after listening to testimony presented by Louis Strong of 51 Elm Court. Strong accused the free-roaming dog of killing his Olde English sheep dog Dec. 2.

The Great Dane had attacked his dog in August and November. An autopsy performed on the dog revealed the animal died by suffocating on its own blood, caused by lacerations and punctures to the head and neck.

Although no one saw the sheep dog attacked, several neighborhood children saw the Great Dane drag the carcass onto a lot adjacent to Carter's residence.

According to Strong, the Carters' dog continues to roam free in the neighborhood. In written testimony presented to selectmen last week, Strong feared the dog might still be motivated by a killer instinct, and that the animal might possibly attack children and animals who still carry the scent of the dead sheep dog. His dog, Strong stated, was a mild-mannered animal who was very friendly to children.

Strong did not recommend the Great Dane be destroyed, or that they receive monetary damages because of their dog's death. He requested selectmen order the animal to be permanently restrained. Although they paid $600 in veterinarian bills, Strong said they were fearful their losses could be greater if the Great Dane was not controlled by its owner.

Selectmen expressed outrage at the incident, and ordered the animal to be restrained on Carter's property. A registered letter will be sent to Carter from the selectmen regarding that mandate.

Mary Sullivan of Elm Court asked selectmen what would happen to the Great Dane if it was seen on the streets again.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said selectmen could order the animal to be permanently removed from the town. Dog Officer Richard Yocum said he had the option of immediately destroying the animal if it is not under restraint.

In a related incident, Jean Salvador of Elm Street complained that a pack of about five dogs, several of which are unlicensed, attacked another stray dog Oct.

A conversation with the dog officer

By Patricia Anne Walsh

"I would estimate 30 to 50 Cohasset residents are bitten by dogs in a year," said Dog Officer Richard Yocum. "Not all cases are reported to me, some are reported directly to the Board of Health."

In addition to investigating dog packs, Yocum handles such irregularities as skunk and squirrel burglaries.

Richard Yocum, 26, is serving his second term as the town's fourth dog officer. He was appointed by selectmen.

Yocum graduated from Cohasset schools and has 35 credit hours in law enforcement from Massasoit College toward his associate degree.

He was employed for nine years by the Hingham Animal Clinic. He rents an apartment on Bancroft Road, with his wife Mary and 21-month-old son. He is also a policeman on the night shift.

The Post Office thought a burglar had removed a ceiling tile and broke some ashtrays. However, it was discovered that a squirrel was running around the mailroom and Yocum was called to remove it.

Recently, Yocum also removed a skunk from the cellar of a home on Hillside Drive, using a dog noose. "It was a cold day," he said, "and the skunk was a bit slow so I got him outside before he let go, and I was not sprayed."

He also transported a dead seal that washed up on the beach to the aquarium.

At the May 4, 1976 Town Meeting, Barbara Williams of Stockbridge St., whose labrador retriever had been attacked and bitten by another dog, called for a strict dog leash law.

Her article read: "Any owner or keeper of a dog who shall permit the same to be in a street or public place without being effectively restrained by chain or leash under the direct and positive control of such owner, keeper, or other person, or who shall permit such dog to run upon property of another without expressed permission of the owner or occupant of such property, shall be punished by a fine of $10." The article said the dog officer could impound such an animal, and the owner would have to pay a pound fee of $15 and board expenses.

The article was amended and provided for a part-time dog officer. It says: "No person shall keep any dog which by biting, barking, howling or in any other manner disturbs the quiet of any neighborhood or endangers the safety of any person, and no dog shall be permitted to run upon public or private property without expressed permission of the owner, occupant or custodian of such property." Many town officials consider this to be a "half-leash law."

Yocum said a lot of problems with dogs would be solved if the bylaw was stricter.

Mirrors to stop publication Dec. 29

The Mirror Newspapers, including the Cohasset Mirror, will close down Wednesday, Dec. 29, it was learned this week.

Members of the editorial staff were informed of the decision Monday afternoon by publisher Roger Miles. Those who would comment expressed disappointment and shock over the announcement.

The Mirrors, with weekly newspapers in Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham, are owned by the Memorial Press Group in Plymouth which in turn is owned by the Lowe family of Cohasset.

Neither Miles nor other executives of MPG were available for comment on the Mirror closings Tuesday, but sources did say the newspapers will be replaced with shoppers some time after the first of the year.

The Cohasset Mirror, the newest of the Mirrors, was established in 1979, several months after the weeklies were sold by the South Shore Publishing Co. of North Scituate. Prior to that it was incorporated with Scituate as the South Shore Mirror. The oldest of the papers, the Scituate Mirror, was established in 1948.

Mike Donovan, former editor of the Mirror Newspapers from 1976 to 1977, expressed shock at the closing of the three weekly newspapers. He is now assistant city editor of a daily newspaper outside New York City.

"It was enormously unfortunate, particularly for a newspaper as vital and important to the community as the Mirror when I knew it," he said.

"Community journalism in a weekly newspaper is far from an easy task. It requires an enormous invest-

Selectmen seek prompt action on sewer replacements

Selectmen last week strongly opposed sewer commissioner Joseph Gwinn "taking (his) own sweet time" about nominating two replacements to the three-member board.

Gwinn told selectmen he would like to persuade the two members who recently resigned, Janet Daggett and Gerard Stanton, to rejoin the commission.

The two members issued letters of resignation to selectmen following special town meeting's vote to pursue alternative sewer plans.

Although selectmen agreed the two members were to be commended for their work on the sewer commission, they would not allow them to regain membership on the commission after their resignations had been accepted.

Gwinn said his plan was to delay nominating any candidates to the commission so he could persuade the two former members "to change their minds."

Gwinn has 30 days to nominate replacements to the commission. He said he would use that time to urge the two former members to reconsider their resignations.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle told Gwinn selectmen would not allow the two to regain their membership on the commission. He charged that it was a "ridiculous way to go about this (nominating replacements.)"

Although Gwinn said he has received a number of applications from persons interested in serving on the sewer commission, he was "waiting for another type" to apply. He said the applications have been made by "highly prejudiced" persons who are either in favor, or against the plan to pursue alternative sewer systems. He was looking for someone "who is not for or against anything."

Gwinn told selectmen he wanted a commission which could work harmoniously. "I don't want combat," he said.

Another dilemma which concerned selectmen was whether the sole sewer commissioner had the authority to prepare a budget for the sewer department. Gwinn said he was also confused as to whether he had the authority to spend the $10,000 allotted by town meeting for alternative sewer proposals, and whether he would actually prepare the alternative plans.

Charles DeSantis, a proponent of the alternative studies plan, expressed his concern that the proposal continue without delay. He said he would draw up some proposals, but he added it was imperative the town continue without delay.

Gwinn did not know what authority he had to commit $10,000 for any alternative study.

DPW contract awarded

The Mass. Department of Public Works has awarded a contract to D.P. Donnelly Electrical Construction, Inc. of Hull for traffic signal reconstruction of Ripley Road at Sohier Street.

The work will include "removal of the existing traffic signal equipment, application of pavement markings, installation and relocation of signs, installation of wheelchair ramps and...a complete... signal system."

The contract cost is $31,595 and the scheduled completion date is June 15, 1983.

No Mariner December 29

This is a reminder...there'll be no Mariner in your mailbox Dec. 29.

Nothing to be upset about...at least for long. On the contrary, it's a thorough vacation for the Mariner staff, who will close the doors to the office at 58 Main St. Thursday, Dec. 23, not to reopen them until Monday, Jan. 3.

Remember to bring in pertinent copy or advertising by Monday, Dec. 20, for publication Dec. 22, our last in 1982.

The Jan. 5 issue will be on schedule, as will 1983.

Storm report

Other than the usual vehicles stuck in snow, dead batteries, hazardous road conditions and medical calls for the Fire Department, Cohasset escaped without much damage in Sunday's seven-inch snowstorm.

Highway Superintendent Harold Litchfield said there were no problems clearing or salting roads and streets. Crews were sent out at 6 a.m. to sand and began plowing operations at 10 a.m. Plowing and sanding operations finished at 9 p.m.

Thirteen snow trucks were used. Five trucks are owned by the town and eight were contracted.

A foot of snow fell in Plymouth and other southeastern Massachusetts communities. Nine inches of snow was reported in Abington with about seven falling in Cohasset and Hingham.

Refuse containers almost ready

Refuse containers at the landfill should be in operation within the next two weeks. People will be asked to drive their cars onto the paved area just beyond the center and dump their trash into the red containers.

When a container is full, the shovel dozer will be utilized to pick up and move the containers to the rear of the landfill site where it will be emptied. The trash will be compacted and container returned to the paved area.

This new operation facilitates a greater compaction rate because refuse dumping is done in small confined "cells." The rate of compaction is a critical factor in the lifespan of the landfill area.

Because the flow of traffic in and out of the landfill is particularly important with this new operation, people are encouraged to dump their trash in the early morning and week days. Please call the Board of Health office if you have any questions.

Newspapers must be recycled. They are not to be dumped into the red containers. Recycling of all glass and aluminum is also strongly encouraged.

In the next few months the Board and the Recycling Committee will be working to set up a waste oil collection area near the recycling center. This will be available to the "do-it-yourself mechanic."

Fishermen's Pier group is formed

By William Richardson

The Harbor Study Committee has formed a Fishermen's Pier Working Group to recommend improvements for Government Island Wharf in Cohasset Harbor. Anderson-Nichols, Inc. of Boston has been assisting the group with concept plans and preliminary cost estimates.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter has provided soundings of the bottom in the vicinity of the wharf and fisherman Bernie Salvador has compiled economic data on the fishing fleet. Bill Richardson, a Scituate native and one-time sternman on a lobsterboat, is managing the project for Anderson-Nichols and the Harbor Study Committee.

A public workshop will be held Thursday, Dec. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium. The general public, members of various town boards and the Fishermen's Association are invited to attend.

The preliminary concepts, potential impacts and the estimated costs will be discussed. Comments from all interested groups will be encouraged.

The wharf has been a bottleneck for local fishermen. Out of the 42 lobster boats in the harbor, only two boats at a time can tie up to the float at low tide. Considerable delays build up when 1,200 linear feet of boats try to use a 100-foot long float.

Conflicts develop when 12,500 lobster traps are set out during the Spring. The congestion from stacked traps, pickup trucks and boats vying for position causes inefficient delays.

Lobstering, tuna fishing and gilnetting are an industry netting $1.6 to $2.5 million annually in Cohasset. Lost fishing time means lost income to the 40 to 60 employees in this industry, one of Cohasset's largest.

Preliminary concept plans show a 150-foot extension of the wharf to the northeast toward Bassings Beach. Six to eight boats will be able to tie up simultaneously. The new wharf will reach out along the six-foot depth contour.

This will reduce the amount of dredging to provide sufficient depth at low tide. Depending upon the type of construction, costs will range from $250,000 to $750,000. Coordination will be required with the Conservation Commission on the disposal of the dredged materials.

The preliminary concepts are to extend parking alongside the wharf toward the ledges on the west side. Minot Light Park could be extended by moving the bulkhead out 15 to 20 feet. Both would require a Wetlands Permit.

A spirited sight on Beechwood Street — the Litchfield house is a splash of Christmas lights.

Local merchants oppose Sunday shopping hours

By Jane Lane

Family-owned businesses in the Cohasset-Scituate area are opposed to opening their doors on Sundays.

It is the large, corporate-owned chain stores which are the impetus in the drive to repeal the state's centuries-old Blue Laws.

As the Mariner went to press this week, the bill that would allow Sunday openings awaited Governor Edward King's signature. But most local merchants surveyed by this newspaper were hoping that the Governor would veto the proposal.

It would be the small, family businesses which would suffer if the Blue Laws were repealed, they said.

Owners would have to work seven days a week, and schedules would have to be juggled among the few full and part-time employees at the stores.

All local merchants voiced the same sentiment — they would only open on the Sabbath if they were forced to by the competition.

As Jim Goddard, owner of Goddard's store on Front Street in Scituate explained, "I would only open my business on Sundays if Woolworth's in Cohasset and at the Hanover Mall were open."

Cohasset Woolworth manager John Hathaway said the company has not yet issued any directive about possible Sunday openings, but he suspected that the corporation would test Sunday openings if the Blue Laws were repealed.

He said that Woolworths in other states such as New Hampshire and Connecticut are open on Sunday, and the company would probably have the Massachusetts stores open for at least a trial run.

If the venture paid off, then the stores would probably remain open seven days a week throughout the year, he predicted.

But one of the South Shore's largest employers, Angelo's Supermarkets, said that corporation had no intention of opening the stores on Sundays.

Advertising director Tom Clarke said the company would definitely not open on Sundays, even if the law is eliminated.

"We don't see Sunday as a day for shopping," he said. "We see Sunday as a day for employees to be with their families. That's our position at this time, and that's how it will remain."

Angelo's, which operates 19 stores in Massachusetts, employs more than 2,000 persons. The store does not open Sundays before Christmas, which is currently allowed in the state.

Noble's camera stores in Hingham and Cohasset, has not made a determination regarding Sunday openings. The owner will decide after the Christmas season whether to open every Sunday. Currently, the stores are open the four Sundays before Christmas.

Verne Messigner, who owns The Children's Shop at Cushing Plaza in Cohasset, said she stands defiant against Sunday openings. Although she opens the children's boutique on the Sundays before Christmas, she is determined not to open the store any other Sunday.

"I don't feel there is a need for retail stores to be open on Sundays. Most people will do their shopping during the week. Sundays are just a little more convenient for people who work the rest of the week," she said. "It will not add that much business to retailers.

"I can't ask my girls to come in every Sunday. And besides, I'd have to work on Sundays. I don't think there'd be enough business to warrant opening on Sunday."

The store employs four persons and the owner said evening hours and Sundays would not add any noticeable profits to her business.

A next door neighbor at Cushing Plaza, the Casual Male, will likely be open if the Blue Laws become extinct.

A spokesman at the store's corporate headquarters in Shrewsbury said the approximately 20 Massachusetts stores would be opened if the governor signs the legislation. The corporation's stores in neighboring states have always been open Sundays. In fact, Massachusetts is the only state in which The Casual Male is shut down on Sundays.

The Welch Company in Scituate Harbor is not open on Sundays, even during the Christmas shopping season. Company president Steve Warner said he had not given the idea much thought, but his personal preference would be not to open the store a seventh day. He would prefer that the Blue Laws stay in effect, he said.

Stacy's of North Scituate is owned by a large corporation. That store would most likely open Sundays once the law was eliminated. Fashion World, Inc., which operates 19 stores in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania, would likely open the business in Scituate, the assistant manager said. This is the only state where the stores are not open on Sunday, she said.

A neighboring clothing store, Gates, would prefer not to be open for business on Sundays. Although no firm decision has been made by the Gates family who own the two Scituate stores, immediate plans are not to open on Sundays.

Gates has been a family-owned business for more than 60 years. They employ about 14 persons in the two stores, and are open the three Sundays before Christmas. A company spokesman said the store policy would remain flexible, and if customers express an interest in Sunday openings, they might acquiesce to their wishes. Many employees now work six days a week, and they would prefer not to have anyone work every day of the week. "We're stuck. If we open for business on Sundays, it will only be because we are forced into it," the spokesman said.

In Cohasset, the owner of the Kit and Kaboodle gift shop said he would probably not operate the store every Sunday. Bob Fesler said he could legally open the store now on the Sabbath, but he prefers to remain closed. For the foreseeable future, he will remain closed, but added, "We may see the day when I am open every Sunday of the year."

Gift shops have traditionally been immune to the Blue Laws, he said. Because of the tourist trade in the state, the gift stores are allowed to open their doors. Fesler operates his business on Sundays from July 4 through Labor Day and from Thanksgiving to Christmas. He does not wish to extend that schedule.

Cohasset Hardware employees said there hasn't been any talk about Sunday openings. Although they doubted the store would open every Sunday, they couldn't guarantee that policy.

The store is open the last two Sundays before Christmas. A couple of years ago, the store opened the four Sundays before Christmas and there was no business the first two days.

Last year the store never opened on Sunday. This year management decided to operate the store the last two Sundays before Christmas. The feeling among the eight employees in the store was that they would not open every Sunday if the law was repealed.

Opening family-run businesses mean seven days of work for owners like Jim Goddard and changing work schedules for his family who help out at the store.

Goddard is also anxious about the wording contained in the legislation pertaining to an employee's requirement to work on Sunday and whether they should be paid time-and-a-half for the seventh day.

ment of time, and a commitment of resources and a real devotion to the life of the particular community that you are trying to portray every week. It takes that kind of investment to make a community newspaper effective.

"You can't cheap it out with a community newspaper. It has to be real. You have to care about the community," the former editor said.

"This will leave a challenge to the remaining weekly newspaper not to get soft or complacent. Competition in a market like that makes for a better newspaper. This will be a challenge for Mariner Publisher David Cutler to strive for better quality in community journalism without the impetus of journalistic competition in the market," he said.

Former Scituate reporter and editor of the Mirror, Nancy Murray Young, expressed extreme sadness at the closing of the newspaper.

She said she was saddened that her former employer was closing the paper, but she was further discouraged because the town would miss the competition provided by two weekly rivals.

"I think competition makes the papers better," she said Monday night. "It's easier for one paper to just slack along. Competition is very healthy for newspapers."

As a former editor, Young recalled the glee she would feel when she "scooped" the Mariner. At other times she expressed outrage when the "other weekly" published an exclusive story.

"The Mirror was part of this town for a long time. I can't begin to imagine Scituate without two papers. I really enjoyed reading three papers and I will miss that. It's a very sad thing when a newspaper folds. I'm really sorry this happened," she said.

Young, who was editor for four and one-half months in 1981, praised community editor Judy Gilman's role in keeping the paper alive during the past year. "She was an excellent editor," Young added.

Irving Greenblatt of Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, the original founder of the Mirror Newspapers, was unavailable for comment. He is living in Florida for the winter.

Selectmen seek prompt action...

Selectmen have referred the matter to town counsel who will make a determination by December 15. They said Gwinn has the authority to sign bills, but they did not know if he could prepare a budget for the department.

Peter Pratt, who attended the meeting, urged the commissioner not to delay implementation of Article 4 of the special town meeting. Any delay by the town might be construed as contemptuous by the state.

By delaying implementation of Article 4, the town would be violating the direction of town meeting, and would be acting contrary to the agreement of judgement between the state and the town, he said.

He suggested selectmen appoint a committee to deal with the state Division of Water Pollution Control, and to seek immediate modification of the court agreement.

Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie said the state has allowed the town to act within a reasonable time, and 30 days is a legally-allowed period in which to appoint replacements to the commission.

In the meantime Atty. Richard Henderson is seeking a modification of the Superior Court agreement.

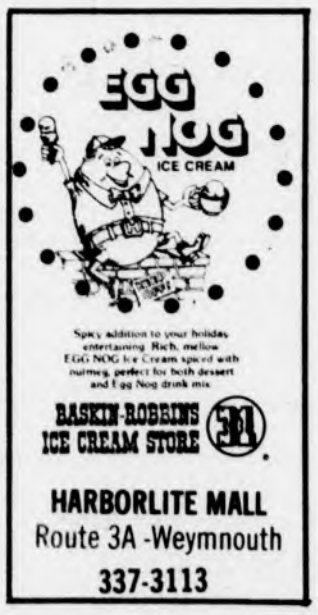
Casino opponents name new directors

North Shore political activist Lloyd Waring and South Shore insurance executive M. Greely Summers are recent additions to the board of directors of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc.



C.A.C.G. board chairman and Retired Justice of the State Supreme Court Paul C. Reardon of Hingham, and C.A.C.G. president Carol Oteri of Hull, said five Massachusetts counties are represented on the anti-casino group's board.

They said that Waring and Summers have "distinguished records of philanthropic and charitable involvements," and they "look forward to adding the particular strengths possessed by Waring and Summers to those which have enabled us to prevent the ruination of this state by the imposition of casino gambling."

Waring, of Rockport, is well known in state and national political circles, serving presently as a member of the Executive Committee of the Republican National Finance Committee.

Summers, a resident of Hingham, is a General Agent Emeritus for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company and is prominent in national associations of insurance underwriters.

Reardon and Oteri said that two new casino bills were filed in the state legislature Dec. 1. Both expressed confidence that sustained hard work by anti-casino forces will continue to prevent the legalization of casino gambling in Massachusetts.

☐The C.H.S. football team ended its season with a super effort...tied Duxbury to keep them from winning the League Championship. Great game, congratulations team!

☐On Sunday, Nov. 28, members of St. Anthony's Eucharistic Adoration Society attended the Annual Archdiocesan Nocturnal Adoration Society Mass held in St. Clement's Shrine in Boston. At the Communion Breakfast following the Mass, the members of the parish were recognized and commended by the Most Rev. Thomas Dailey, D.D., Archdiocesan Director of Nocturnal Adoration Societies on the completion of 25 years of All-night Adoration.

This devotion is conducted each First Friday after the 5 p.m. Mass and throughout the night of adoration on Dec. 3. Alfred Odermatt and Jane Tilden are the coordinators of this Eucharistic Adoration.

☐Ensign Michael Fichtner USNR is temporarily assigned to the Navy Recruiting District Office in Boston. He recently completed a 15 week aviation officer candidate and Navy pre-flight course at Pensacola, Florida, the home of Naval Aviation. He was commissioned to his present rank on Nov. 24.

Following his recruiting duty, Michael will return to Whiting Field, Milton, Florida, by Jan 10 to undergo Navy flight training.

☐Cohasset has another celebrity among its ranks! Scott ("Elvis") Anderson leaves for his first national tour shortly. He will be the lead vocalist for Roy Buchanan, a guitarist, who was part of Elvis Presley's band and played with the Rolling Stones. It will be an eighteen day concert tour, with Pittsburgh, Lone Star (a well-known club in New York) and Boston among the 30 stops they will make.

Scott also signed with a major recording company and says he should have a record coming out soon. He is finally realizing his dreams...remember when he used to imitate Elvis Presley to whoever would listen? Then he starred at a few local spots (The Cliff Hotel, Kimball's-By-The-Sea one New Year's Eve) to name but a few.

We'll be hearing a lot more from Scott. Good luck and many congratulations to him.

☐Last week Brownie troop 4550 held their investiture at the Parish House. Parents applauded as 16 girls received their pins and recited their promise. The troop meets twice a month at the Community Center under the leadership of Carol Wyman and Gail Convery. The members are Kate Brown, Cara Convery, Elizabeth Deveny, Priscilla Goff, Kathleen Hanlon, Karla Kennedy, Bonnie Krueger, Julie Larrabee, Katie Norris, Courtney Norton, Katie O'Connor, Kara Protulis, Katie Ridge, Brooke Sherrin, Emily Spenser and Kristin Wyman.

☐Ernie and Norma Grassey announce the birth of Timothy Vincent, born at South Shore Hospital on December 1. Timothy, who at one week won his Dad's $50 office football pool, weighed eight pounds, one ounce and lined up at 20 inches at his arrival.

At home "loving him enormously," are Kristin, age 8, and Matthew, age 5. Matt has discovered he can trade his old toys for Timothy's new ones and his younger brother doesn't object.

Grandparents are Luciano and Rose Grassey of Natick and William and Mary Vincent of Haverhill.

If December first wasn't exciting enough, Norma celebrated her birthday on the second. A "gorilla" showed up at the hospital during evening visiting hours and sang Happy Birthday, as well as a personal tune attesting to Norma's weaknesses and strengths...everyone who was visiting South Shore Hospital on the evening of the second knows that Norma swears on the tennis court and "freezes everything that comes into the house."

Everyone is at home and doing nicely...Ernie is keeping Norma away from the chocolate cigars. Congratulations, Grassey's!

☐Christopher Abbruzzese of Old Pasture Road earned a varsity letter in football at Bowdoin College during the fall sports season.

☐Mark Young, son of Mrs. Carole Young, Stockbridge Street, has been selected as one of the country's most outstanding campus leaders and will be named in the 1983 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

A senior at Stonehill College majoring in biology, Young achieved this honor based on his academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

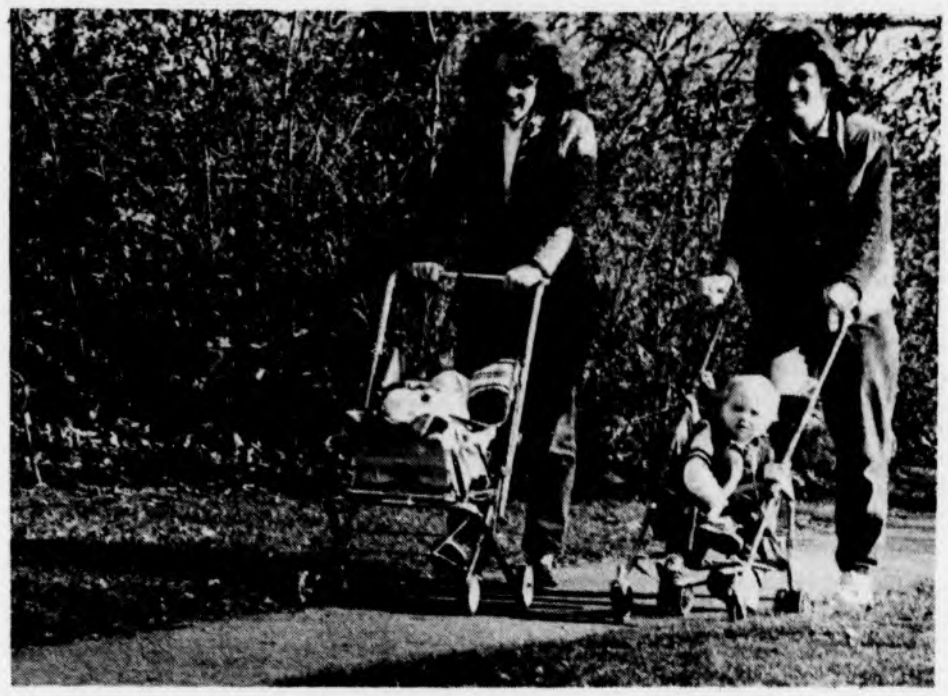
Young has been active in campus affairs as a member of The Ames Society, the Biology Society, member of the Stonehill Theatre group and on the staff of the student-run radio station, WSHL-FM.

☐Cohasset has two new residents. Congratulations to Ernest and Norma Grassey, Ledge Way, on the birth of their son (see separate entry elsewhere in Around Town), and to John and Paige Nugent of Highland Court, whose daughter was born on November 30.

☐Had a nice chat with Rich Tibbetts' Mom the other day. Rich, a government major at St. Lawrence University, is spending his junior year abroad. He is living in Madrid, Spain, with a young family (complete with very young baby), and he loves it.

He enjoys travelling around and is thinking of spending Christmas in Morocco. Rich graduated from C.H.S. in 1979 and was a member of the basketball team that went to the State Finals.

☐Marsha James Carthaus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob James of Ripley Road, sent a very newsy Christmas letter. She and her husband, Dick, are busy people. Among some of their many accomplishments is the fact that their dog, Mandy, won her first dog show and is now a national champion!



Marsha is State President of the Special Education directors in Edina, Minnesota, as well as chairperson of the Boston University Alumni in Minnesota.

☐Lee Wilson was operated on last week, due to his "football knee" which is hopefully on the mend. He probably wasn't sorry to be in that mammoth cast this weekend...no shovelling that long driveway! Lee is missed by our hockey team; sure hope he's up and around soon.

☐Gert Reed (daughter of Leslie Reed, formerly of Jerusalem Road) sent a note packed with news...she and her husband Terry are still living in Billerica with their two girls, Heather and Hillary. Gert reports that the girls are growing by leaps and bounds, her husband is in Arkansas flying C-130 airplanes with his reserve unit and her Dad is loving his new home in Hingham.

☐There are many disappointed people who tried unsuccessfully to get last-minute tickets to the high school production of "Grease." Many have said they'd love to see it again.

A conversation with the dog officer . . .

Although he handles many problems on his own, he appears before the selectmen several times a year to recommend they exert their statutory authority to have certain dogs permanently restrained, abolished from town, or destroyed. Records show that since 1980, 89 chickens, two goats and other animals were killed by dogs, and many humans and animals were attacked or bitten.

Due to financial constraints, Yocum usually acts only when he receives a complaint. When Prop. 2½ went into effect the dog officer's salary was reduced from $3,000 to $2,000, and he is allowed $1,075 for expenses.

There are 706 dogs presently licensed in Cohasset. The $3 fee for dogs three months and older and $3 for unspayed females must be paid each year.

Many citizens don't seem to realize this is an annual fee.

Yocum estimates there may be an additional 700 unlicensed dogs. Because of 2½, the town clerk's office did not send out notices last summer to those known dog owners who failed to pay the license fees due last April. Yocum says he was not given a list of licensed or unlicensed dogs by the clerk's office.

Last week Yocum was before the selectmen again. In the past few years, several dogs and cats in the vicinity of Elm Court, Stockbridge St., and Stevens Lane have been severely wounded or killed by what veterinarians have diagnosed as "dog bites."

Residents say many of these attacks have not been publically reported because citizens wanted to avoid trouble with their neighbors. "MYOB (mind your own business) has been the code around here," one person said.

However, the recent killing of an English Sheep dog, owned by Louis and Rita Strong of Elm Court, caused six residents to appear at the selectmen's meeting last week.

As a result of the hearings five large dogs, two dobermans, a great dane, an afghan and a husky, were ordered permanently restrained. Evidence was introduced to show that they sometimes roamed as a pack. Selectmen told Yocum that he may take two of these dogs, who are unlicensed, into custody.

The Strongs emphasized that they were not asking that any dogs be destroyed; however, they wanted a restraining order. They said they feared for the safety of their four-year-old child, who still retains the odor of their sheep dog on her clothing. They cited a recent case of a three-year-old child killed by a dog in England.

Strong's dog had suffered previous dog bites and its head was bandaged as the result of one recent attack. The dog was killed by wounds which an autopsy showed were caused by dog bites.

Dog Officer Richard Yocum handles much more than dogs.

Selectmen order Great Dane restrained . . .

4 on Elm Court.

Salvador said she was issuing the complaint because she was "sick of seeing these dogs chase other dogs, cats, or anything else they can chase."

One of the dogs involved in this latest attack was also accused about two years ago of killing a pig in Hingham, she said.

Laugelle said the solution would be for the dog officer to ensure that all dogs are restrained on their property, as required by the town bylaw.

Mary Sullivan told selectmen the two Dobermans who were seen attacking the stray dog in October have also chased her cats, and killed one. The two Dobermans are owned by Robert Burns of 39 Elm Court. Although Sullivan said she had talked with the owner about restraining the pets, the dogs continue to run loose. "They are a menace," she said.

The dog officer said he had spoken to Mrs. Burns about keeping the animals on her property, but he received no response, he told selectmen.

He also added that he had the authority, according to town bylaw, to take any unlicensed animal from its property and impound the dog until a license is issued.

Selectman McArthur stressed that all loose dogs must be restrained, and are not allowed to wander on to neighboring property.

Bless our stately home

By Claire McDonough

"Christmas shopping rots when you don't have any money," Skipper observed glumly. "I need a way to strike it rich within 12 days."

"If you hadn't spent all your money on video cartridges..." Breida interjected.

Larry looked up from his newspaper. "By George, I think I've got it. The Duchess of Ballingham opens her ancestral home to the public one day a week. It says here that she soaks the commoners a couple of quid apiece, and it enables her to hold onto the old manse in spite of killing taxes and galloping inflation. We could lower the drawbridge over the moat every Friday and let people in to see the Dragon's Lair."

"Yeah," Patrick agreed. "They'd probably pay big money to see the dent in the livingroom wall where you hit it with a baseball. Then you could show them the curtain your cat shredded. And how about our eclectic ancestral silverware garnered from the best yard sales on the South Shore?"

"Go ahead and laugh," Larry told him. "But when I'm rich and famous people will stand in line to see where I grew up. They could get in now at bargain rates."

"Sure," Skipper agreed. "And Ma always calls Breida and Tanya's room the 'Blue Room.' That sounds pretty classy."

"I call it that because every time I go in I get depressed," I snapped. "What if someone looked under their beds?"

"We could have a contest," the Dragon offered. "The tourist who classifies the most flora and fauna in a five minute period gets a free return trip."

"No one," Patrick assured him, "who correctly identifies what's growing under their beds will ever want to come back."

"Your own quarters aren't exactly out of 'House Beautiful'," Breida sniffed.

"You say that," he informed her, "because you don't recognize pop art when you see it. Rumpled Twinkie wrappers are definitely in. Also, Ma always calls our kitchen set 'Early G.I.' Does that stand for something wonderful?"

" 'Generous Inlaw'," I explained. "I don't think it's all that rare."

Skipper sighed. "Maybe we'd better scratch the idea for this year. We can work on making it worse, and by September we should be able to start charging admission to our Stately House of Horrors."

Mirror's demise

In commenting on the demise of the Mirror (see Jane Lane's front page story), we will try to be candid with you rather than insult your sensibilities with either crocodile tears or gratuitous gloating.

The fact is this news is a tremendous loss for the capable staff that gave of their love and toil for the Mirror over the last 35 years. When a newspaper folds, all the loss that happens when any other business folds, such as unemployment and the disruption of lives, happens...and much more.

A newspaper is part of the life of the community it serves and it is part of the lives of the people who serve it. Working for a newspaper is a collegial experience that isn't replicated in most jobs one is likely to have in the course of a life. That is why folks who worked for the Mirror 20 years ago are likely to feel its closing nearly as much as the present staff.

It's also a fact that this news is a tremendous victory for the Mariner and its staff, who have labored for the last four years with the near-certain knowledge that sooner or later either the Mirror or the Mariner would prevail and the other would not survive.

With local radio stations, with shoppers, with direct-mail coupons, with stiff competition from the Patriot-Ledger, and with the coming of cable, we rest from our toil at our extreme peril. But the Mariner staff will, we hope, be forgiven if we take pride in the fact that our survival to date in this economic world has been accomplished with love and toil and without what in the financial district is called "venture capital."

The effect of the Mirror's closing on the town is potentially very bad. Whether it turns out to be so is up to two parties: us and you. If we decide to simply rake in as much of the Mirror's advertising dollar as we can while letting our editorial product fend for itself, the town, and particularly town government, will lose. We hope you know us well enough to have confidence that isn't likely to happen.

But we also need your help if we are to serve the town properly as its single newspaper. In our view we have never gotten as much criticism as we would like. Too often our writers spend long hours on strong stories only to be greeted with silence from you.

We give out our share of criticism, as we believe it our duty to do. But like the objects of our criticism, we need criticism if we are to be successful in the pursuit of excellence. We simply must hear from you more often now that there is no Mirror presenting another side of controversial issues.

POLICE CHIEF APPLICATIONS

Selectmen have received 48 applications for the position of police chief. Among the applicants are Acting Chief Joseph Kealy, Capt. William Stockbridge and Sgt. Richard Barrows.

Selectmen will be reviewing each resume and making brief comments about each application before candidates are eliminated. They scheduled a meeting for Dec. 28 to review the applications. Interviews with the final candidates will be held in early January, they said.

CIVIL SERVICE HEARING

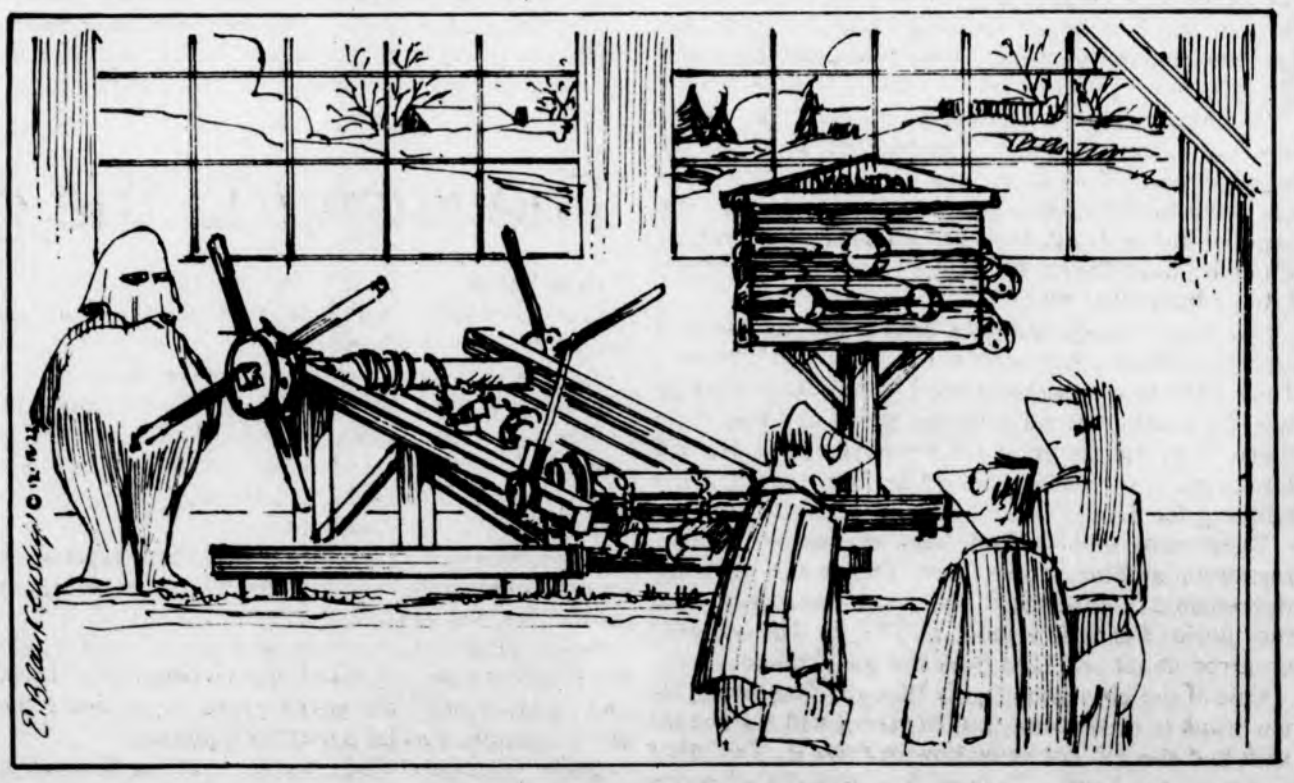
Selectmen were ordered to attend a Civil Service hearing December 16. Francis Chafee of Chamberlain Run, Hingham, claimed selectmen unfairly bypassed his appointment to the Cohasset Police Department three years ago.

Although the current selectmen were not all members of the board which made that decision, a representative is required to attend the hearing. Three years ago, selectmen bypassed Chafee because he was not a resident on the list of candidates applying for the police position.

ROAD RACE REQUEST

Selectmen approved a request from the Rotary Club to hold its annual road race on March 27 at 1 p.m. A club representative will meet with selectmen in the spring to discuss details of the race.

WOODSIDE CEMETERY DEED



Town counsel will investigate a request from Anthony Sidney that his name be added to the deed for two lots at Woodside Cemetery. Sidney wrote to selectmen that as sole survivor of the Sidney brothers, his name should be included in the deed. He requested they order a change of ownership of the two cemetery lots. Selectmen said this was not a matter for them to decide. They referred the matter to town counsel, along with a copy of the property deed.

Survey results

Residents by about 5-1 oppose Sunday shopping. That information is based on readers' responses to the Mariner's question last week asking for opinions on the possible repeal of the Blue Laws.

Some suggested Sunday afternoon shopping would not interfere either with family outings or church activities. But, emphatically, in some cases, most people want the shopping schedule to exclude Sunday.

A young man talks about driving drunk

By Jane Lane

'Of course, you shouldn't be drunk and driving,' they say, 'but everyone does it.'

[Ed. Note: The Mariner recently interviewed a 19 year-old Duxbury man arrested for drunk driving. His name will not be released, but here are his thoughts on the charge].

He acknowledged if he had not been drunk, the accident on that early November morning would not have happened.

Normally, he says, he can control the troublesome throttle in his aging truck. But with the slippery roads and stomach full of beer, his driving abilities were impaired.

He slowed down at the lights and the throttle got stuck. As he maneuvered to release it, the truck slammed into a telephone pole, slightly injuring his two female passengers. The 19 year-old driver was taken away by police and arrested for driving under the influence.

Today, he awaits his court hearing and possible suspension of his license. He knows he will have to attend "drunk classes," and pay a fine. But he is anxious about the possibility of losing his license. Although this was his first driving offense, he is afraid of the new tough laws against drunk driving.

Was it worth the chance to drive home drunk — would he drive drunk again? Hopefully no, he says, but he won't make any promises.

The Duxbury resident says when he occasionally drinks too much at a party or a friend's home, his judgment becomes impaired. He can't make rational decisions. And now he's worried that maybe he'll get behind the wheel again and something worse could happen.

"I just hope that if I do get drunk, someone will stop me from driving," he says.

"I hope I have more brains and I won't drive if I get that drunk. I know that if I see someone now who is drunk, I won't let them drive. I hope they will do the same for me," he says.

His two female companions agree that they were also drunk that night, and it made little difference to them at that time that they were going home with a drunk driver.

"Of course, you shouldn't be drunk and driving," they say, "but everyone does it. No matter how tough the laws get, people will always drink and drive. They think nothing is ever going to happen, so they continue to take the chance that it won't."

The youths say they never thought their friend was too drunk to drive them home safely. One of the girls said at one point she thought about asking "Tom" not to drive, and to drive home with another friend, "Sam."

"He didn't really seem that drunk, he was walking and talking okay, so I thought he'd be all right. Besides, we were drunk too so we couldn't really tell if he was gone or not," she says. "He usually can drink and drink and not get drunk."

The two girls both underaged, cannot be "served" at public bars. But they easily get around that restriction by having Tom buy them beer at local liquor stores. Tom, who is of legal drinking age, buys at any liquor store, and then returns to their homes where they consume the liquor.

On this particular night, Tom drank a six-pack with his father at home and later drove to Scituate. From the time he first began drinking early that evening, until the time he stopped, about midnight, Tom and the girls had "polished off" a case of Molson beer.

"I'd have to say I was drunk. I took the breathalyzer test and scored .11 on it. You have to be .10 to be legally drunk," Tom says. "But I don't think it means the same for everyone. Two people can register the same on the test, but they are affected differently. I shouldn't have driven, but I didn't think of that before I drove home that night."

The three friends had been driving around the area after they drank a few beers at one of the girl's homes. They went to a local restaurant where they work to wait for another friend who was going to meet them there. They did not enter the restaurant, but drank a few beers in the parking lot while Tom searched the building for Sam.

They were told to find Sam at another nearby restaurant and they drove there. They sat in the truck the remainder of the night and drank some more until they decided to return about 12:30 a.m. The accident occurred about one mile from the girls' homes.

One of the girls temporarily thought Tom might be too drunk to drive home, but the truck had a standard shift and she did not know how to drive it. The other girl does not have a license. She thought of going home in Sam's car, but Tom repeatedly insisted that he was capable of driving.

"He was driving fine, but then near the harbor he started screwing around. The other kid passed our truck and Tom was trying to catch up with him. That's the only reason we got in the accident. Tom was fooling around, just trying to catch up with the other car," one of the girls said.

As the truck approached an intersection, Tom slowed the vehicle and it slammed into a telephone pole. Tom's head hit the windshield. One of the girls braced her legs against the dashboard and was not hurt. The other girl's leg was badly cut under the dashboard and she was taken by police to the hospital.

Tom was handcuffed and brought to the police station.

"One of the officers said, 'You know you can get in a lot of trouble for this,' and I said, 'I know,' but he didn't do anything to me. They brought me home and that was it." one girl remembers.

"If someone had asked me not to drive that night, I doubt I would have taken his advice," Tom recalls. "I would have figured I was all right. I seemed to be alert. Besides, I had to work the next day and I had to get home with the truck. When I'm drunk I don't think straight anyhow."

Tom remained in the police station until his 8:30 arraignment in Hingham District Court that morning. His parents were notified about the incident, but Tom insisted they not waste money on bail because he would be in court in a few hours.

Tom's court hearing is scheduled the end of this month. He thinks about it frequently, but it is not constantly on his mind. He more often regrets the loss of his truck which was totaled in the accident. He had planned to rebuild the vehicle and then sell it at a profit.

He figures he lost a lot in that accident. The subsequent hike in his insurance rates, the court fine, the towing charge and the loss of the truck totaled about $1,200, he estimates.

That's a lot of money for some kids who just wanted a cheap night out.

Criticizes sewer commission editorial

Letters

To the Editor:

I read with dismay your editorial concerning the resignation of my father, Gerard Stanton, as Chairman of the Cohasset Sewer Commission. The tone of the editorial implies that his resignation was somewhat capricious and based on a feeling of annoyance rather than a sense of responsibility. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The resignation came after a great deal of thought and consideration of the issues involved. Anyone who knows my father would attest to his deep sense of responsibility and personal integrity. He was advised and accepted counsel that it would be unlawful of him as an agent of the town to implement Article 4 as it was written in the warrant.

To him and Mrs. Daggett, who had spent hours and hours in meetings with Town Counsel and the agencies involved in the consent decree, there was no "renegotiation" of the consent decree; the legality of the matter was clear and he did not feel he could work outside of the law.

It was no "fit of pique" that determined his resignation from a position he took very, very seriously. I know I speak for my brothers and sister in saying that we are immensely proud of the role both our parents have taken for over three decades in the civic affairs of the town. My mother served 12 valuable years on the School Committee and has spent a great deal of her time both in the past and at present in volunteer service to the town. My father was one of the co-founders of the Cohasset Sailing Club, served three years on the Harbor Study Committee and has spent almost three very time-consuming years on the Sewer Commission.

I hope that this letter helps clarify the impression left by your editorial and that the Mariner will be more sensitive in the future to the enormous contributions made by some of its most valued citizens in volunteer positions, such as Gerard Stanton.

Standish Humane Society needs help

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Standish Humane Society, I would like to take this opportunity to make a holiday appeal for support from area residents. Previous contributions from the public have worked hard to help animals — literally to rescue them.

Winter is an especially difficult time for animals. Night comes sooner, and the roads are more dangerous. Sometimes they can't even find food or water. And puppies and kittens are often unwisely given to people who can't or won't care for them.

The financial support we receive from concerned individuals in Plymouth County helps the Standish Humane Society find loving homes for abandoned dogs and cats, helps defray the cost of our spaying/neutering program and provides medical care for hurt and sick animals.

We hope that during this holiday season you'll be able to continue your support. I can promise you it will be used where the need is most urgent. And you'll feel a special glow at this happy time of the year, knowing you may be helping to save a life.

Contributions can be sent to: Standish Humane Society, c/o Suellen Conlon, Treasurer, 98 Old Forge Road, Scituate, 02066.

President

The secret is the gift of love

Dear Santa:

Can you please tell us how you manage to carry out the many tasks of Christmas?

We know there are elves who help make toys in your North Pole workshop and Santa look-alike helpers who hear children's secret wishes and collect donations for many needy charities and causes, but, how do you find the time to answer all the mail that arrives during your busiest month?

Many children in the Osgood School are looking forward again this year to your replies to the letters they've written in their classes.

Marie Price, who teaches first grade, tells us that her students have received letters written in a "loving and caring spirit" for seven years. Sometimes they are written on special paper with pictures.

Other students look forward to individualized answers to their letters, and as in years past, they will arrive as anticipated.

Can you share your secret with us? We promise not to let the children know.

Dear Mariner:

The only reason I am able to answer the letters of so many children prior to Christmas is because of the wonderful students in middle, junior and high schools in towns like Cohasset.

For seven years, the junior high students of Mrs. Jo Ellen Wood have painstakingly responded to the letters from Marie Price's students. Mrs. Wood is "quite intent that they have correct words and punctuation" and take time for individualized letters.

Often the older students who may share some of the same wishes, fears and problems as the younger ones, have benefited from giving them a little hope, care and love.

There are also students at the Deer Hill School who do the same work; and untold teachers and other adults, I suspect, who, in my name, brighten the little ones' Christmas by answering their letters to me.

The secret, Mariner, is the gift of love.

Merry Christmas,
Santa

Silvia's Garage sold to Hingham family

Silvia's Garage of 147 South Main St., founded prior to 1914, has been sold to a Hingham family experienced in auto mechanics.

Richard Silvia said the firm changed hands because he is planning a new career in public administration.

The firm was sold to the Schiavos. Tom and John Schiavo have worked in all aspects of auto mechanics and will continue to operate the garage as a total automobile repair and auto body company, servicing all makes of cars.

Two long-time veteran employees, Paul Flanagan and Sonny Stover, will continue to work full-time and Ruth Silvia, Richard's mother, will still answer the phones.

"She really is the heart and core of this business," Silvia said.

He added he is confident the Schiavo family will stress friendly and cooperative service to the customers. Silvia's has not done much advertising and depended on "word of mouth" on the quality of their work.

"If people aren't happy with the service, they should call me and I'll make sure it's right. But I'm sure there will be no problems," Silvia said.

Silvia hopes to receive an offer in a public administration job-related field. He also has received "some good offers" from private business.

Silvia is a certified mechanic and taught automotive instruction. He is also an engineer.

The Schiavo brothers will be extending the daily shop hours and will be open Saturday. New hours will be announced soon.

Selectmen hope to name executive secretary by Jan. 3

Selectmen are hoping to have a new executive secretary on board by January 3. They completed interviews with five candidates for the position.

Tuesday night, selectmen interviewed Warren J. Rutherford of Boylston and Richard Silvia of Cohasset.

The final candidate interviewed by selectmen was Richard Silvia of Beechwood Street. A former teacher and an active worker for the local Republican Party, Silvia is also a former member of the Cohasset School Committee.

He is working toward a master's degree in business administration, although he said his education would not take priority over the position, should he be appointed. "The time devoted to school depends on the workload here," he explained.

Silvia, who owns a local garage, said he is finalizing the sale of the property. He told Selectmen he was not selling the business in anticipation of being appointed executive secretary. The decision was made before he applied for the job, he said.

He candidly told selectmen he thought the salary range for the position was "too low for what you want." But he said the benefit package was attractive. He would like to work locally rather than commute to Boston, and he would "look for future improvements" in the salary.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie asked Silvia if he would be willing to work under a contract, and he replied "yes." Ainslie added that selectmen were considering a three-year contract for the new administrator. "I am not looking to Boston. My family is here. I have given a lot of time to this town without remuneration," Silvia said.

Silvia said an executive secretary should be additionally compensated for duties as the town's parking clerk.

This is a new assignment which requires the secretary to collect fines for all parking tickets issued to residents. That duty was formerly provided by the courts, but now it is under the jurisdiction of the town's executive secretary. If any person requests a hearing regarding the ticket, the administrator must act as a hearing clerk.

Silvia said he was not complaining that the duty should not be under the jurisdiction of the executive secretary, but he felt the person should be compensated for the additional responsibility.

He said he viewed the executive secretary as an administrator who "receives power directly from selectmen. It depends on them how much responsibility this position will carry."

"The major function for the secretary other than the standard administrative functions is to work with the boards and selectmen, and to carry out the policies of the selectmen. Selectmen set the direction. The executive secretary provides information for them to make decisions," he said.

The administrator must also be able to work with all the employees and residents of the town, he added. "Handling constituent calls is one daily routine which is of high priority," Silvia noted.

He said the executive secretary is an 180 degree parallel to what a selectman is, and the administrator "should do all that is possible so that those services provided by the town are handled effectively and efficiently.'

Silvia said he had experience in bid advertisement as a school committee member and is quite familiar with the Massachusetts General Laws pertaining to education. He has had experience with grant writing and preparing various types of budgets. As a former marine engineer at J.J. Henry, Silvia said he had a thorough background in research.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur told the applicants that one of the primary duties of the executive secretary would be to revamp procedures followed in the office of selectmen, and to make the office more efficient. This would create a more efficient board of selectmen, she said.

Rutherford, a planner-affirmative action officer for the McKinnon Employment Training Center in Southbridge, was a former member of the Spencer Finance Committee. He has a master's degree in public administration from Northeastern University and also teaches night school in the university's graduate program.

Rutherford said his understanding of the position, and the reason he applied for the job, was that an executive secretary will be an administrator, responsible for fulfilling the policies of the selectmen, reporting to the board, and being responsible to the members of the board of selectmen.

"I am fairly comfortable with the position such as that," he told selectmen. "With a town this size, selectmen are more responsive to the needs of its citizens than in larger cities which have large city councils. This is a position which is not going to grow. I hope I could assist the board in maintaining the character of the town."

Rutherford told the board he had extensive experience wth bid advertisement through the CETA-sponsored McKinnon center, where he was responsible for the preparation of contracts. Although he said he was not familiar with the general laws of this state, he was experienced with laws pertaining to municipal finance. Rutherford explained that at one time he was supervisor for three employees at the McKinnon center, but personnel cutbacks have reduced his management load to one person. He did have some experience as the center's acting director when he was responsible for as many as 25 employees.

He has had extensive experience preparing budgets, and is responsible for preparing all budgets for the Southbridge center. Although he has no experience with centralized purchasing or labor relations, Rutherford said he has been a grant planner for the center for the past four years.

Selectman Henry Ainslie explained the board was not seeking someone in the image of Arthur Clark, someone "who is geared to the utmost in public service," but he noted that the new executive secretary will be expected to improve upon the organization and services provided by the office of the selectmen.

"I believe my talents are in organizational development and management," Rutherford answered. "My own particular style is one that could be called facilitative or participatiave. I enjoy sitting down with managers and coming out with some solid direction and solid ideas.

"In Cohasset, you may want to try a more progressive management while preserving the historical character of the town. I am impressed with how long the town has been here and how stable it is in the state. I think you would like to see a steady management of the town's resources."

The administrator said he would be satisfied with the position's salary range of $19,000 to $21,000.

School Dept. delayed opening procedure

Staff, parents and students are reminded that if ice or snow storm conditions make it necessary to delay the opening of school, the following procedures will be in effect this winter. Delayed openings will be used whenever possible in order to avoid closing school for one full day.

In the event of a delayed opening, the bus route schedule for all students will be moved back by ONE HOUR. Pupils providing their own transportation should leave their houses for school no more than one hour later than usual.

School will recess at the regular time in the afternoon.

All morning kindergarten classes will be cancelled. However, second session kindergarten classes will meet on their regular schedule.

Fire station signals will be ONE LONG BLAST FOLLOWED BY THREE SHORT BLASTS AND THEN THREE SHORT BLASTS AGAIN (1-3-3). Radio stations will carry a delayed opening announcement on the regular cancellation stations.

Staff notification for delay will be handled in the same manner as school cancellation.

Favorite recipes of the Mariner staffers

By Lois Martin

If there is a common denominator within the Mariner work force, it's a shared yen for favorite foods, especially at the holiday season.

And the staff at the Mariner is, like everyone during the Christmas crunch, hurrying to finish work, to shop, to clean, to cook...and probably to gain weight through New Year's.

Lest readers lapse into the notion that the people who bring you the weekly newspaper can do little else, we've compiled a sampling of favorite recipes, gleaned from the staff in the big white house wherein hometown news is gathered at 58 Main St.

WALSH CIDER

Susan Walsh is in the advertising department. She says her hot mulled cider is perfect on a cold winter's night.

Hot Mulled Cider

1½ gallons apple cider, heat over low flames
Place the following in a tea ball, cheese cloth or add and strain before drinking:
1 cup brown sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1½ Tbls. whole cloves
1½ Tbls. allspice
4 sticks cinnamon
Put all in cider
When it's hot, simmer 10 minutes
Add peel from 1 lemon and 1 orange, strain
Consume...

SCHULTZ CHICKEN

Each week Priscilla Schultz saves the Mariner building from its own debris. That takes a lot of trash bags and time. Consequently Priscilla recommends this:

Chicken Pronto

Dip half chicken breasts (no wings) in Lite Italian dressing, then into Italian-seasoned dry bread crumbs. Cover and bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes. Uncover for 10 more minutes of baking.

BARTOW SOUP

Karin Bartow is in the proofing/editing department at the Mariner (that means at the very long, cluttered large table in the production barn). She fashioned this soup from a foursome of recipes.

Vegetable Kielbasa Soup

Melt 3 Tbls. butter
Saute 2-3 mins. 1 onion, chopped; 1 garlic clove, chopped; whites of 3-4 leeks, chopped, if you have them.
Add and saute 3-4 mins. more:
4 carrots, peeled and thin julienne sliced (3'' long pieces)
4 potatoes, diced
handful of green beans, thin julienne sliced
Add 6-7 cups chicken broth, home made or from the can; salt and pepper; 1 can red kidney beans if you have them; 2-3 cups coarsely chopped kale and 1½-2 lbs. sliced (1'' pieces) Kielbasa which has been browned in oil and drained.
Simmer 1 hour, more or less; can serve with parmesean cheese.

YARDUME'S STUFFED LEAVES

Norwell Editor Bucky Yardume submits this as his favorite recipe:

Stuffed Grape Leaves

You can buy grape leaves, usually bottled, in Near Eastern groceries. Or in early summer, pick your own where vines grow wild. Choose only the smaller, tender leaves. Big ones are tough. Also avoid those close to roadways and low to the ground to avoid motor vehicle and other obvious contaminants. What you don't use right away can be frozen.
1 lb. ground shoulder of lamb
1/2 lb. finely chopped onions
1/4 cup rice
1 tsp. salt
Black pepper to taste
2 Tbls. chopped parsley
1/3 cup tomato puree
Juice of 1 lemon

Boil leaves until half cooked. Mix other ingredients and roll in individual leaves about finger thick. Place rolled, stuffed leaves in baking dish. Immerse in water. Cover dish. Bake for 1 hour. Serve hot either as meat course or side dish. Also tasty as hors d'houevres, hot or cold.

KOSKI'S SWEDISH RING

In the 1950's Dot Koski and her husband, Hank, were assigned to the Swedish Embassy as part of the State Department's Diplomatic Corps. While there they learned to celebrate the holidays in the rich Yuletime tradition of Sweden. Dec. 13 is St. Lucia Day and is incorporated with the Festival of Lights.

Part of what Dot, a typesetter, brought home, was this lavish recipe. (If this is your first whirl with an egg beater, you may want to hold till next year).

Santa Lucia Ring

1 cup milk
3/4 cup sugar
1 tsp. salt
3/4 cup warm water
2 pkgs. active dry yeast
6½ cups sifted flour
1½ tsp. crushed cardamon
2 eggs
1¼ cups light or dark raisins
1/4 cup ground blanched almonds

Heat milk until bubbles form around edge of pan; remove from heat. Add sugar, salt and butter, stirring until butter is melted. Cool to lukewarm. Sprinkle yeast over water in large bowl; stir to dissolve. Add milk mixture. Add 3½ cups flour with cardamon; beat with wooden spoon until smooth — about 2 minutes. Beat in eggs, add raisins and almonds. Gradually add remaining flour, mixing in last of it until dough leaves the side of the bowl (dough is soft).

Turn out dough onto lightly floured pastry cloth. Cover with bowl; let rest 10 minutes. Turn dough to coat with flour; knead until smooth (about 5 minutes).

Place in lightly greased large bowl; turn to bring up greased side. Cover with towel; let rise in warm place (85°), free from drafts, until double in bulk (1 to 1½ hours). Punch down. Turn out onto lightly floured pastry cloth.

Divide and shape: on lightly floured pastry cloth divide half of dough into 3 parts. With hands, shape each into a 20'' roll.

Place on lightly greased large cookie sheet. Braid loosely. Shape into a circle; pinch ends together to seal.

To make holes for candles, insert 7 balls of foil, 1 inch in diameter, between strands of braid, spacing evenly. Repeat with rest of dough.

Cover with towel; let rise in warm place (85°), free from drafts, until double in bulk (about 60 min.).

Preheat oven to 350°.

Brush braid with egg white mixed with 1 Tbls. sugar and 2 Tbls. ground almonds.

Bake 25-30 min., or until golden brown. Cool on wire rack.

Before serving, remove foil balls and insert 7 inch red or white candles in holes, first wrapping bottoms of candles in foil.

Instead of brushing with egg white mixture, bake rings, cool slightly and frost with this icing:

Mix 2 cups confectioner's sugar with 2 Tbls. milk.

Decorate with candied cherries, cut in half.

DERR'S BLUEFISH

One might be unaware, seeing Greg Derr, that he's an old hand around his broiler. That being an inflation of the truth, we add that with bluefish, at least, Greg knows exactly what should be done.

Broiled Bluefish

Take four to five bluefish fillets. Put them on the broiler pan skin down on aluminum foil (Greg's neat). Coat the top of the fillets with mayonnaise. Then put on sliced onion, pepper, two diced celery stalks, a little salt and pepper.

Broil at 450 degrees for 20 minutes.

BERGER TRIFLE

The community editor of Cohasset and Scituate Mariners, Mike Berger, offered his wife, Linda's recipe for...

Chocolate Trifle

1 box chocolate cake mix
2 family size boxes instant chocolate pudding
2 8 oz. containers Dover Farms Topping
6 Heath bars (crushed)
2 Nips Kahlua

Prepare cake as directed in rectangular pan. Cool cake. Sprinkle evenly with Kahlua. Allow Kahlua to soak in. Cut cake in small even squares. Prepare pudding as directed.

Line the bottom of a glass bowl with cake squares. Add a layer of pudding, a layer of Dover Farms Topping, a layer of crushed Heath bars. Continue layers to top of dish (2 or 3 layers of each).

FOSTER BROOMSTICKS

Barbara Foster is head typesetter and has Scandanavian heritage, as well as this handed down family favorite.

Swedish Broomsticks

1/4 cup flour
2/3 cup chopped walnuts (chopped fine)
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter
2 Tbls. cream

In saucepan, start melting butter and add rest of ingredients. Stir over medium heat, cook until bubbly. Remove from heat. Let stand for minute.

Drop on ungreased cookie sheet, the size of a quarter, six to a sheet, leaving lots of room.

Bake 350-375° for 3-5 minutes. Watch carefully. If sides are brown remove. Let sit for minute until pliable and then roll. Put on paper towel.

If too brittle to roll, put back in oven to soften.

CONNIE'S SCALLOPS

This recipe is for someone who has already developed savvy at the stove. Connie Ruisi, ad manager, is mother of two sets of twin boys, leaving her with time on her hands for creativity. She loves seafood, company to share it with. This is what she whips together...in her own flexible manner...

Start, she said, with a stick of butter in a frypan, to which you should add a chopped onion and a little garlic, and parsley, along with the juice of at least one lemon. Then put in 1 to 2 cups of bread crumbs, after your onions have cooked a bit. Connie says the mixture ideally looks like 'wet sand perfect for castle-making.'

...But when she puts in a little white wine, she needs more crumbs.

Time then for 1 to 2 pounds of raw scallops, and if you're blessed, shrimp.

Toss and bake at 350..."till done."

MARTIN'S BORROWED BRUNCHER

A friend, Ann Fletcher, recently passed along this brunch recipe to Lois Martin. She put it to work last weekend so it's been kitchen-tested...and devoured by folks who've lived to tell about it. Here it is.

Brunch Casserole

Put it together 12 to 24 hours before you need it. Refrigerate in the interim.

4 cups Italian bread cubed (crumbled is quicker)
2 cups cheddar cheese
Beat the following together
10 eggs
4 cups milk
1 tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. Dijon mustard
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. onion powder
shot of pepper

Put the bread and cheese in a buttered bowl or 9x13 dish. Pour combined egg/milk mixture over.

Then top with sliced mushrooms, tomatoes and 8 to 10 pieces of cooked/crumbled bacon (sausage or ham wouldn't be bad). Refrigerate until ready to bake at 325 degrees for an hour.

PUBLISHER'S CAKE

No recording of Mariner's recipes would be complete without an inclusion from the publisher.

In this case that's David Cutler, who, when first asked for a recipe, said he'd give his for 'jello.'

That light moment passed, he searched his mind for memories of about five years ago when, he claims, he used to make a sour cream cake.

As best he can remember it, and in the order remembered here's his tricky formula...

Sour Cream Chocolate Cake

2 eggs, "No, I think I put in three..."
1 cup of sour cream; don't double that, he did once.
vanilla
2 cups of flour "sounds right" little baking soda chocolate, forgotten at first, but tough to get that flavor without it, so melt three squares
2 cups of sugar

This is an original probably because no self-respecting cookbook would record it like this. David Cutler confided that he once broiled this cake in error. Don't do that, or for that matter, don't forget to butter the pan. The publisher has had experience in that mishap, too.

Happy holidays and adventurous baking.

Conservatory invites all for 'Shoestring Christmas'

Everyone is invited to "A Shoestring Christmas" at the South Shore Conservatory of Music Sunday, Dec. 19 at 2 p.m. in Cox Hall.

This holiday presentation will take place at the school off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham and there is no charge for admission. Children and adults are invited to enjoy this program by students of the Creative Dramatics classes under the direction of Ellen Kelly.

The children range in age from 7 to 14 and come from Cohasset, Hingham and surrounding communities. Workshops I and II will present poems and selections from their "Story Bag" and Workshop III. The Shoestring Players, will peform scenes from "Alice in Wonderland."

No program is complete during the Christmas season without music and the children in the "Joy of Music" recorder class, under the direction of Kathleen Moran, will play holiday selections during the afternoon.

The audience will be invited to join with the youngsters in a Christmas "sing-along" accompanied by Kitty Moran at the piano and to enjoy refreshments following the program.

At Brigham's, Christmas cones but once a year.

So make the most of it! Buy a Brigham's Christmas card containing two small cone coupons for $1.19 and stuff all the stockings with ice cream. But Hurry, this offer is good only for the Christmas present (but can be enjoyed long after Christmas has past)

CHS sports update . . .

By Alana O'Brien

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls varsity basketball team is looking great this season. Coach Bill Fallon says this year's team is the most talented he's coached in his three years at C.H.S.

Senior Captain Gia Barresi, a returning starter from last year's squad, is expected to be one of the best players in the South Shore League.

Also looking good is senior Beverly Mullaney and sophomores Janet DiGirolamo, Carla Lucas and Tracy Fitzpatrick, all in starting positions.

Returning from last year are seniors Jill Grant, Kristin Wilkin, Elizabeth Glasfeld, Alana O'Brien and junior Jenny Dickerman, all talented and big contributors to the team.

New to the squad with a lot of potential are juniors Trina Moore and Penny Wright.

The girls played in a Milton League over the summer and went to the final of the championship but were ousted by Brookline.

They recently scrimmaged Sacred Heart, West Roxbury and Avon in pre-season action and did well in all.

The South Shore League is expected to be one of the toughest girls leagues this season and Coach Fallon expects his team to do very well. He thinks that if they beat Norwell in their first game, they should be right up at the top with Rockland, fighting for the league title.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The C.H.S. varsity boys basketball team will open their season this week with matches against Norwell and Duxbury.

The team will be led by senior Captain Jack Maloney, the only returning starter from last year's squad.

Seniors Dan Anderson and Larry Hoogeveen are the only other returning lettermen. Larry is a strong rebounder and will provide scoring inside, while Dan can be counted on for his strong outside shooting.

Juniors forwards David Barcomb and Peter Caruso were junior varsity starters. Barcomb is a strong rebounder and should provide some inside scoring as well as some short range jump shots. Caruso, a hard worker, will be relied on for rebounding and good defense.

Junior Rodney Best, another hard worker, will also be a strong rebounder. All lack necessary varsity experience and should improve throughout the season.

Sophomores Dave McDonald, Philip Bernstein and Jack Cooper are also new to the team. McDonald is a point guard and Bernstein is a power forward. Cooper has no previous experience, but has a lot of talent.

Freshmen James Creed, Tony Bogarty and Bobby Schultz all have good physical talent. Creed, the tallest player at 6 feet 4 inches, is an excellent rebounder and a powerful inside scorer, with varsity experience. With continued improvement, his potential is unlimited.

Bogarty is an excellent passer and ball handler. Along with Creed, he is another potential all-star.

Coach Minelli says his team is hard working and he expects them to be competitive this season. "If we can get the necessary game experience for the younger players and leadership from the upper classmen, we will surprise some teams."

WRESTLING

This year's wrestling team is looking for a rebuilding season. Coach Ross says his team is very young and inexperienced, but will learn and improve after wrestling with experienced opponents.

Losing eight seniors to graduation, Captain Paul Igo is the only returning wrestler. He will be wrestling in the 100 pound class.

FOOTBALL AWARDS

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

When the wreath is on the door and the last Christmas card in the mail, let's hope there's still time left for a few homemade gifts "from the kitchen." If your spirits wilt at the thought of endless hours in front of the stove, mounds of messy pots and pans and untidy counters, just remember that even the simplest recipe can seem quite glamorous when prettily packaged. Your nearest 5 and 10 cent store, local flea market or yard sale, often has inexpensive bottles or goblets which will look quite festive when decked out with a colorful bow, full of Mabel Perrin's

DAIQUIRI LIQUEUR

4 limes
3 c. light rum
1½ c. superfine granulated sugar

Pare very thinly the bright-colored rind from the limes (no white). Blot peel on paper toweling to remove any excess oil. Put peel in a 4-cup screw-top jar. Add two cups of the rum. Close jar. Store in a cool, dark place for two days or until rum has absorbed the flavor and color of the peel. Remove peel; add sugar; shake vigorously until sugar dissolves. Add remaining one cup of rum and stir until liquid becomes clear. Close jar and store in cool, dark place at least one week to age. Makes about two pints.

* * *

Calorie-counting is on hold for at least a few days while we nibble and gorge our way through the holiday, so the neighbor, shut-in, or schoolteacher who would be able to resist a homemade cookie, is sure to be rare, indeed. You'd better hide Hope Seymour's goodies, for they sound so tempting they may never get beyond your own kitchen. They're called

CHOCOLATE RUM BALLS

2 c. sifted flour
2 tsp. instant coffee powder
1/8 tsp. salt
1/2 c. unsweetened cocoa
2/3 c. granulated sugar
2 c. chopped nuts
2 tbsp. rum, sherry, or brandy
1 tsp. cold water
1¼ c. butter or margarine

Mix all ingredients in large bowl very thoroughly, using your fingers. Chill at least an hour, or overnight. Shape each tablespoonful of dough into a ball. Place about 1" apart on lightly greased cookie sheets. Bake at 325 degrees for 15 to 18 min. Makes about five dozen cookies. You may want to roll in confectioners' sugar while warm, then a second time when cooled.

* * *

A quick trip to the market is well worth the time needed to gather up the ingredients for these Glazed Cheesecake Puffs, great for the holidays. Topped with three cherries and a spoonful of cherry pie filling, they're festive looking and taste as good as they look. The tiny individual desserts are baked in small muffin tins lined with aluminum muffin cups. So, from Ann Murphy's kitchen, here is how to make her

GLAZED CHEESECAKE PUFFS

Vanilla wafers, small size
1 lb. cream cheese
3/4 c. sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla

Place one wafer in each cup and pour a mixture of above ingredients over each one, filling the muffin cups 3/4 full. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 10 min. Cool and cover with cherry pie filling. Makes 20 to 24 small cheesecakes.

* * *

Making your own salad dressing is easy and cheaper when you do it Libby Long's way. Instead of buying those expensive little packages to add to vinegar and oil, Libby suggests 1 and 1/3 c. vinegar in your blender, then, 4 tsp. dried sweet pepper flakes, 1/8 tsp. cayenne pepper, 1 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. sugar, 1 tsp. oregano, 1 tsp. accent, 1/4 tsp. basil and 1 garlic clove or 1 tsp. garlic salt. To make dressing, use 1/3 c. of above mixture and add 2/3 c. of oil. A whirl in the blender and you end up with a bottle of dressing in your fridge, ready when needed.

around town

☐Curry College is lucky to have Joe McCullough playing on their hockey team. Joe scored two of the three goals in the game they won against Nichols recently. Good work, Joe.

☐Speaking of Cohasset's athletes, Chris Keating started for the Buffalo Bills again this week and his name was mentioned many times. It's great to watch those games when one can look for a familiar name and number.

☐Don't forget to visit the Holiday Shoppe at the Art Center for hand-crafted gifts by the Center's artists. They are open Monday through Friday, 10-5:30 and Saturday, 10-2. Good gift ideas.

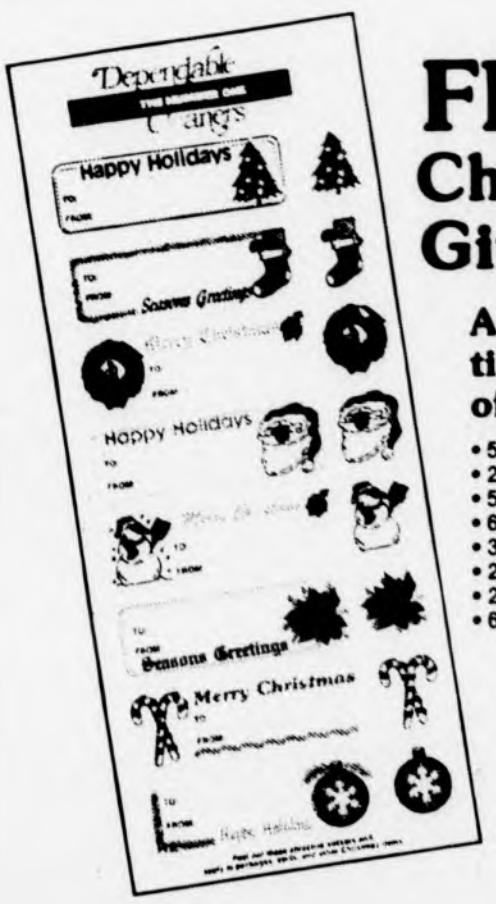
☐Speaking of unique Christmas presents, there were two good ones right in the classified section of the Mariner!

☐The Recreation Department is holding registration for ski lessons at Blue Hills for both children and adults, Thursday, Dec. 16, between 1:30 and 4.

☐Happy 16th birthday last week to Dan Curran.

☐A note arrived from Jody Thaxter the other day. He wanted people in the area to know where he is located, in case people home on college break care to look him up. Jody is a student at Harvard; his address is The Castle, Suite 7, 10 Dana and Centre Sts., Cambridge, Mass. 02138.

☐Two family birthdays deserve special attention...Happy Birthday to Laura Pompeo, just celebrated, and Holly Pompeo, coming up.



☐The George H. Mealy Post #118 held their annual Christmas party for the residents at 60 Elm Street Saturday. A delicious feast was enjoyed by all, Santa Claus found time in his schedule to make an appearance, and a sing-along finished the evening nicely. Everyone had a grand time, especially the "caterers" and "waiters."

☐The South Shore Music Circus Staff party was held at the Lothrop House this weekend. What a spectacular place for such an event. The house looked so festive, and it was really like going back in time! Everyone should be proud of the Historical Society and the job they have done restoring the house.

☐The party for the cast, crew, musicians and directors of "Grease" was held after the final show Saturday night at the home of Jane Mullen, 337 So. Main St. The host family found the group of 75 or so to be a great bunch off stage as well as on. The highlight of the party was a video rerun of the show. With undiminished enthusiasm for the show, the group joined in with the taped songs. The courteous and friendly behavior of the whole company was refreshing and reassuring as was the concern of the many parents who called, checking on their children who forgot to call home in the excitement of the party. The end came too soon, but fortunately before the snow!

Further reflections on the metropolitan press

Recalling the history of the Hub's metropolitan press revived memories of some individual giants.

Bill Cunningham, the long-time Herald sports columnist who during WWII turned war correspondent, launched his newspaper career as a college correspondent while attending Dartmouth. Reports, staffers used to say, raved about feats of a big Indians football lineman named Cunningham, who susequently made All American. Cunningham was big on the rubber chicken circuit, not only as a speaker but as an organist, as his West Newton neighbors readily could vouch. Boggled over what to give her husband for Christmas one year, Mrs. Cunningham bestowed him with a gold-plated typewriter. Cunningham prided himself on his command of language. Any editor who dared revise his copy heard from him loud and clear. One of his pieces referred to an athlete and his keister in clear double entendre, leading an editor for the ever-conservative Herald to revise the graph. Cunningham promptly berated the young man and said he never had heard of keister as being anything but a vaudeville suitcase, certainly not vernacular for one's bottom. The two struck a bet, to whit that Cunningham would ask the first person he encountered to define keister which he was certain would identify it as a valise. He lost.

They used to call Al Hirshberg of the Post and later The Traveler, "The Magnificent Faker." 'Hirsh' hated rowing. In fact, he flatly refused to accept rowing as a sport, regarding it as exciting as watching grass grow. Nevertheless, he was assigned to cover the Harvard-Yale regatta in a year when Crimson oarsmen had swept everybody under and were scheduled to go to Henley and the Olympics. Al decided the result was a foregone conclusion so he didn't bother to go and dashed off an account off the top of his head. Trouble was a Harvard sweepswinger caught a crab and the shell capsized, permitting Yale to coast in the winner.

Frank Sweeney, press aide to Norwell's State Senator Anna Buckley and a former Post hand, brought to attention Frank Murphy, another ex-Post staffer and later Herald city editor. Sweeney described Murphy as possessing an encyclopedic vocabulary including expletives. What he didn't mention was Murphy's equal proficiency at crooning sea and other chanties, none publishable in either The Post or Herald.

Everyone figured Dave Egan who authored 'The Colonel' column for The Record as a cross between Attila the Hun and Jack the Ripper. Egan was a master at dissecting people in print. His pet whipping boy was Judge Fuchs who owned the Boston Braves. If there was nobody else to take apart, the Judge was always good for another blast. Or there always was Ted Williams to zap. In addition to his acidic talent, Egan was thoroughly versed in law, having attended Harvard Law School. So as viotriolic as he'd get, nobody ever nailed him for libel. Egan was a little guy and soft-spoken, not the two-headed agre some envisioned. He'd say privately, "I've got nothing against these guys. But people love to see them plastered. It's just a living." Egan constantly tried to bait other columnists into a feud. Those who took the bait regretted it. His critics complained Dave hardly ever was seen in a sports press box except at the racetracks, inferring his critiques were without first-hand foundation. But to many, the Colonel was the Bible.

Scholars among sportswriters were Harold Kaese of The Globe and Will Cloney of The Herald. But both were capable of zinging subjects, but unlike Egan they did it in Marquis of Queensberry fashion.

Arthur 'Izzy' Siegel of The Traveler had a different approach. If he couldn't say something good about an individual, he rarely said anything. He was probably closer to Boston's athletes than anybody. He was the Pearl Mesta of sports scribes, throwing fabulous steak and champagne parties, constantly in the company of players. As a result, he'd come up with more information than a half dozen contemporaries. Izzy befriended many a college athlete down on fiscal fortunes. His greatest love was racing. Not foot-racing! But hardly a day passed in season that didn't find him at the horse or dog track or both. What he blew at the races would have funded the city budget. He was fast friends with Ed Costello, sports editor of The Herald. Siegel was cursed with extremely poor eyesight which may have accounted for some sartorial ensembles that rivalled Finian's Rainbow. Costello stammered. Both were very close to Frank Leahy when he was B.C. grid coach. Frank sent a young Heights student to see the two sports editors about a job as B..C. correspondent. The young man got himself a haircut, donned his best suit, even polished his shoes to make the best possible impression. He got the job and later became a staff member. He'd relate, "I showed up expecting to find real spiffed up, impressive executive types. Siegel looked like he'd picked up his threads at Morgan Memorial and looked like he was typing with his nose, he was that close to the keyboard. Costello stuttered. Boy, was I disillusioned."

Larry Dame was The Herald dramatic critic and played the role to the hilt. He'd shave his head Telly Savalas style one month, sprouting a beard the next. First nights found him resplendent in top hat, tails and an honest to God opera cape. And a cane! Turned out it was a sword cane, even though hardly anybody ever got mugged in Boston those days. A copy boy was dispatched one evening to pick up Larry's review at his apartment because he couldn't make it to the office. The kid was met at the door by Larry in the buff. Without batting an eye, Dame apologized, "Sorry young man. I was expecting a lady." Last word from him was a postcard after he quit and joined the French Foreign Legion.

John O'Connor authored The Herald's Chartruese Gallagher satirical columns which won a rabid following. John went to Herald Managing Editor George Minot and asked for a $15 raise or he'd have to leave to accept a much more lucrative P.R. post. He didn't want to go. John loved the business. Minot, a fierce guardian of the exchequer, allowed Okie had better take the other job. He did. As soon as Chartruese stopped appearing, loyal readers bombed the paper in protest. O'Connor had to be induced to moonlight the column weekly at a lot more a pop than his old salary and the raise.

There are so many others...

...The Herald's Rudy Ely, who wore sneakers before jogging became popular and had vision before the times...Bill Liston, late of Scituate, who, like Jackie Jenson of the Red Sox, hated flying, even though he'd been in the Air Force in WWII. As a baseball writer, he had to fly and naturally unscheduled events dogged his flights. Like the flight he asked the stewardess if the prop shouldn't be turning. "Ssh!" she admonished...Earl 'The King' Wilson, blond Polish handicapper for the American, was a hard-bitten type who still bailed out many a strapped contemporary...Bud Collins of The Herald, then The Globe, was a blithe spirit before that became big. He liked to sing as well as swing a tennis racquet...And Herald publisher Robert Choate, who took the Eastern Dog Show very seriously since his wife showed Sealyhams. When a cub reporter turned in a really funny piece likening showers to their showdogs, he was fired.

A colorful lot. Boston lost much. And not just newspapers.

Tasteful, topless torsos? A matter of select choice

By Lois Martin

One might not recognize it as the pending feather and plume capitol of the world, but Hull residents with vision see promise in that prognostication.

Last week their Selectmen showed a concensus of support for tasteful semi-nude dancing. When I think of what Hull folks must have gone through to find three people who'd have the acumen, the discernment to select nifty nude dancing from the "raunchy kind," which they won't put up with, I'm confounded. Must have taken at least 17 pages of their street list to find them.

PATCHES

So it worries me...I having a bit of vision myself. What happens when our board is called upon to know tasteful nudity. Are we ready? Did they, when they were sworn into office, realize it isn't enough to garner the language of contract negotiations, or that of sewerage systems, or the kind used in big town budgets.

You gotta know your show biz stuff to serve in Hull. And they're ready. They have nailed the difference between artfully nude and dangerously naked.

So we learn. We go to school on communities which have dealt with development problems of this nature. The board up there, two women and one man, reportedly suggested they could live with "70 to 80 dancing girls, topless perhaps, dressed in glittering costumes and plumes of feathers."

I love a good plume. And I bet there are housewives in Hull who share that enthusiasm and who have said to themselves, "Who needs part-time work as a waitress, or in a store during the Christmas season."

You've got your career choices to make in life. And when opportunity knocks, well if you've got the glittering costume for it. Talk about kicking the unemployment rate down a few notches. They're creating jobs.

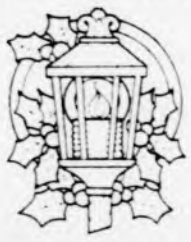
The thing is the board made an apprised decision. They called on their individual experiences, apparently, for memories of what the shows in Las Vegas or Lake Tahoe offered. And they did not find them wanting.

It isn't easy to get a Selectman who gets to Vegas or Tahoe and has the good sense to see a few shows. They know a good light industry when they see one. You don't have to stick to manufacturers to attract money to a town. You try something that's been put together already and you garnish with feathers.

They won't be having gyrations though. Those are out and they used for an example the on-stage manner of moving featured at Alex's in Stoughton. Poor Stoughton. Traffic's so heavy on their main drag, it's hard to tell the protesters from the bookstore customers sometimes.

Anyway the suggestion of tastefully accomplished partially uncovered dancers met with the apprised endorsement of the head of Hull's council on aging. She is said not to oppose elaborate floor shows, for mature, sedate (there's the stickler) crowds. Exhibiting her own qualifications for judgments, the chairman is quoted as saying..."Take the MGM floor show in Vegas (people who've been there call it that), you don't even notice that the gals are bare..."

Now there's a perspective on nude dancing that too few people share. Watch those dancing feet, that's all.



A further distinction was made in that no $1 bills could be tucked in garters. I'd agree. A dollar is not what it used to be. It's nearly offensive, like leaving a penny under your saucer. A $10 spot shows more class. I've never seen one that wasn't tasteful.

We best be ready for dealing with this issue. Maybe if you've been to Vegas, you'll consider running for Selectman next spring. We clearly have to add to our interrogations of political hopefuls at candidates night. Don't go for one who doesn't get out much.

In early 1956 I was in an establishment outside Lewiston, Maine with a group of college friends. A lone woman was called upon to entertain those who had taken seats in the lounge. She'd have been hard put to do so had it not been for one joke that I alone thought was hysterical.

In spite of her red dress with its spattering of sequins, she showed little promise of advancing her career to a place like Hull.

I blame it on the lack of feathers and plumes, not to mention the town manager.

ANNOUNCING
An Exciting New Place To Live in Hingham...

The MEADOWS

FURNISHED MODELS NOW OPEN!

You'll love living at The Meadows, a superb new community of attached single family homes now being built by The Green Company in Hingham. Expert construction crews have completed the first group of two and three bedroom homes, and the exciting furnished models are now ready for your visit.

Our pride in the design and construction of The Meadows is well justified as you'll see when you visit. There's a wonderful spaciousness to the homes . . . an exceptional flow between rooms achieved through the use of large foyer areas, vaulted ceilings, expansive glass with views to the out-of-doors, and rooms opening into each other yet subtly separated by custom dividers.

There are many gracious details: tray ceilings; large country kitchens with sunny breakfast bays—even one designed as a greenhouse; walk-in bay windows; and exceptional master suites, some including secluded fireplaced sitting rooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights.

The combination of location, space and amenities make these homes an exceptional value at $153,000 to $210,000. We suggest a visit soon for early selection. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, keep left to our entrance, or call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

New shoplifting law boon for business, puts heat on thieves

By Kate Coon

It's official; the Christmas season is upon us. For store owners, it's the season of hectic buying and heavy sales, but it's also the season of hefty losses to shoplifters. Larceny is the most common crime in the country, and will become ever more common as the economy tightens. It's a crime that comes in all shapes and sizes, from the heist of a candy bar to the large scale felony of a fur coat.

It's costing everyone, customers as well as retailers, millions of dollars every year, both in lost revenues and higher prices passed along to the consumer.

What the potential shoplifter should know, besides the age old injunction that it isn't right to take what isn't yours, is that Massachusetts has a new law which clearly defines shoplifting, and which makes punitive action more swift and more sure than it was in the past.

Where the previous law limited police officers to the time-consuming and ineffective device of taking an alleged shoplifter's identification and serving a summons, the new law empowers an officer to make an arrest, on merchant's or employee's word alone. If a suspect cannot or will not provide proper and valid identification, he or she stays in custody.

The new law spells out some of the previously vague definitions of shoplifting. Broadly, it encompasses as it always did, "any intent to deprive the merchant of the full retail value of any merchandise." Specifically, the law includes any attempt to conceal or carry away merchandise without paying, any attempt to pay less than full value, as by ticket-switching or altering, container switching or having a clerk ring up a false value. It includes removing shopping carts from the store without consent of the merchant. It defines all shoplifting, no matter how small the value of the item, as larceny, a misdemeanor. It calls for steadily stiffer responses beyond the first offense, a staircasing effect leading to possible jail sentence by the third offense.

Local courts have a reputation for dealing seriously with shoplifters, while understanding that for many this type of thing is a person's first brush with the court system. "You handle them with dignity, but some severity," says Hingham District Clerk of Courts Jim Gillis, "fairly but firmly." In the case of an average juvenile, punishment might entail 25 hours of community service, plus restitution of the goods taken. Nine times out of ten, a juvenile is released to his or her parent or guardian rather than asked to appear in court. Adults, however, get a court appearance no matter what.

What do shoplifters take? You name it. Aspirin, mascara, steaks, leather coats and record albums. At a place like Zayre's in the Hanover Mall, which employs 2 full-time security managers, shoplifting "grabs" or "stops" run from 10 per week to 25. The average dollar value of the stolen goods is between $30 and $40. The hot items in the juvenile set are tapes, records and makeup. Older juveniles and young adults seem to go for clothes, sometimes exchanging the outfit they came in with for a whole new wardrobe. Adults, "they take anything," according to Zayre's security manager, but mostly TVs, radios and expensive clothes.

They come from all walks of life, from the housewife who seems to think she can balance her limited budget better by including a few items not paid for, to the professionals who come down from Boston and who never carry ID's. A fair number are runaway kids, too, although most of the juveniles come from comfortable backgrounds.

Then there are the professionals. A recent Zayre's grab netted $146 worth of razor blades, intended it seems to be sold at a flea market. That's apparently the destination of a lot of the lifted merchandise, especially leather coats and brand-new record albums.

A professional can steal hundreds of dollars worth of records, concealed cleverly in bulky clothing, and it's not unheard of for long-line girdles under floor-length skirts to be stuffed full of ill-gotten merchandise, valuing in the hundreds of dollars.

One of the most common forms of larceny, now included in the shoplifting law, is tag or ticket switching, a misdemeanor of the same order as any other form of shoplifting. Large lettered signs to that effect grace the entrance of Marshfield's Pharmacity, but still, according to security manager David Snell, too few people are aware of the provisions of the law. He would like to see "more publicity to make potential shoplifters aware of the new law."

All of the security managers echoed Jim Gillis in feeling that the law was to be used fairly but firmly, with some flexibility but plenty of severity. "You use good common sense in making collars," stressed Zayre's security manager, "but at least I know when a person goes to court they won't get out scot-free, with a slap on the wrist." And, she adds, they won't be welcome back to the mall for a whole year.

Clergy speaks . . .

Dear Abby Landers:

Having read numerous confessions of weird behavior in your column, usually followed by your equally weird advice, I am writing to you to describe my own seasonal obsession, or fantasy, or worse.

Each year I feel a stronger and stronger urge to dress up in a red suit trimmed in white, put on a beard and a red stocking cap, and impersonate the familiar figure of Santa Claus. (Each year, I might add, I would need less and less padding to fill the role.)

Don't misunderstand me. I have no desire to play Santa Claus at a fine department store, offering my knee and my listening ear to long lines of somewhat spoiled children who have everything and want one more of each. Nor do I want to rent my Santa-suited self out for the home visit circuit, making a brief appearance in clients' homes in order to sustain the children's belief-system for one more year.

No, Abby, what I want to do is to stand among the 20 or 30 "Santas" to be found on any city street in December, ringing a bell and inviting passers-by to contribute their loose change. In my annual fantasy on this theme, I imagine that people will contribute generously to a good cause, and that the neediest of our neighbors will be fed, clothed, or even sheltered from the winter wind as a result of their generosity.

No doubt I'll control my weird compulsion once again this year. In order to help me, Miss Landers, would you please print a paragraph or two about an organization worthy of your readers' support this Christmas?

The organization is Parents Anonymous. In chapters all across America, women and men who want to be better parents meet regularly in order to help each other deal with the stress of parenting. They acknowledge that their own frustration and anger, along with the stress of economic problems or of being a single parent, has sometimes kept them from being the kind of parents they want to be. Some of them have injured or abused their children. Some of them have spouses who have been violent. All of them use the meetings of the Parents Anonymous group in order to help them be better parents.

What your readers in Cohasset may not know, Abby, is that a chapter of Parents Anonymous meets regularly in a place near their home. If any of your readers know a family who may need the help of Parents Anonymous, they should telephone (toll free) 1-800-992-1250. In the holiday season, for various reasons, the stress of parenting may be at its worst.

Now for the Santa Claus part: If some of your readers would like to assist in providing transportation or child-care for the nearby chapter of Parents Anonymous, they may send a check made out to Parents Anonymous. If the checks are sent to me, I'll see to it that they are applied to the ongoing expenses of the local chapter.

Incidentally, Abby, your readers may want to know that the local Parents Anonymous group was begun as a joint project of Parents Anonymous, the Social Service League of Cohasset, the Second Congregational Church, the Coastal Community Counseling Center, and the Child Abuse and Neglect Committee of the Coastline Council for Children.

Yours in a red suit,
Rev. John Benbow

Dear Yours-In-A-Red-Suit:

Abby Landers is happy to print the information you included. Anything to keep weird bearded people off the streets. If any readers want to help, they may volunteer as drivers or send a check, payable to Parents Anonymous, to Rev. Benbow, 43 Highland Avenue, Cohasset.

Dramatic Club tryouts for 'Dangerous Corner'

Tryouts for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production, J.B. Priestley's English mystery "Dangerous Corner" will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Sunday, Dec. 19 from 2 to 5 p.m. and again on Monday, Dec. 20 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The performance dates are Thursday to Saturday, March 3 to 5. Judy Holmes of Hingham will direct the show and Betty Miessner of Scituate will be production manager.

"Dangerous Corner" is a three-act play set in an English country house, calling for a cast of four women and three men. Play books are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club invites anyone interested in participating in its winter show to read from the script at the tryouts — veteran theatrical performers and newcomers alike.

If you are interested but unable to try out on these dates, call 749-0616 or 545-0942 for an appointment.

Selectmen to review cable specs

Selectmen were scheduled to meet Wednesday night, Dec. 15, with members of the Cable Advisory Committee to discuss final bid specifications for the town's cable television contract.

The advisory committee has prepared its final bid specifications and has submitted them to selectmen for their review. Selectmen will discuss the specifications and recommend any changes.

Committee chairman Joseph McCool said a final draft of the specifications will be prepared after selectmen review it. It will be sent to the four participating vendors next week.

The four companies which have submitted preliminary bids to Cohasset are Campbell Cable Television, American Cablesystems, Greater South Shore Cablevision, and United Cablesystems.

The companies have 45 days in which to respond to this final Request for Proposal. The advisory committee will have 30 days to recommend a company to be awarded the provisional cable television license.

Selectmen will take about two weeks to select the provisional licensee. Although the advisory committee will make a recommendation, it is the selectmen who make the final determination, McCool said.

The companies will offer bid prices on the items outlined in the contract. The four companies also have the option to offer additional items not specified within the contract. All prices must be included in this final bid, McCool added.

The cable advisory committee hopes to send the final published specifications to the four contractors by Dec. 22.

CHORES FOR CHILDRENS' HOSPITAL

The open house second and third grade classes at Osgood took Dave Maynard's advice and are collecting money to send to him for Childrens' Hospital. The students contribute money earned by doing chores at home. Generous project...congratulations.

FUTURISTIC DISPLAY

Art teacher Tom Lucas' seventh and eighth grade classes have mounted a display of what they think the 21st Century will be like. The students' large pastel drawings of their conception of the future are located in the corridor between the senior high and junior high wing. The public is welcome to drop by and look at the exhibit.

RAFFLE TICKETS

Student council sponsored raffle tickets for Stop & Shop gift certificates ($25, $50, and $100) will be on sale through Friday, Dec. 17 in the school's main office.

Proceeds from the sale will go towards the cost of the recent vandalism to school windows.

The drawing will be held at halftime at the boys varsity basketball game vs. Duxbury, at Cohasset, Friday, Dec. 17 beginning at 7 p.m.

CHS raffle for Stop & Shop certificates

Cohasset High School raffle sales for Stop & Shop certificates need an extra boost.

Sponsored by the student council, the raffle was initiated to help pay for the recent vandalism to school windows. Students wanted to do something helpful to make up for the embarassment of having their school defaced.

Tickets are available until Friday, Dec. 17 at the main office of the high school (383-6100) or from any member of the student council. They cost $1 each.

The drawing for three winners ($25, $50 and $100 certificates) will be held during halftime at the boys' varsity basketball game vs. Duxbury, at Cohasset, Friday beginning at 7 p.m.

Be a raffle booster and help C.H.S. students in their worthwhile cause.

PCEA happenings . . .

By Helen Forsgard

GIFTS PROGRAM

PCEA members and teachers throughout the county will send Christmas gifts to children at the Lakeville Hospital. Mary Lou Mills, 1982 program chairman, said, "Each year since this program was started, we are more aware of just how much teachers care about other peoples' children.

"They have special insight about appropriate gifts for handicapped children, but they take the time to make special wrappings and to send more than one gift."

Donations were delivered by members at the Dec. 13 meeting at Ridder's Country Club in Whitman.

SCHOLARSHIPS & ENRICHMENT

Plymouth County's teachers play Santa more than once a year as recipients of over $15,000 of higher education scholarships know.

To support their belief that education is an investment in the future, county teacher organizations held craft fairs, art shows, bake sales, and other functions to raise financial aid in their separate school systems.

Christmas and book fairs are also being run by parents and teacher groups to provide "extras" such as professional music and theatre groups to culturally-gutted Prop. 2½ systems. These groups don't want children deprived of "esthetically up-lifting programs."

Fire marshal gives tips for safe holiday

State Fire Marshal Joseph A. O'Keefe has listed a few common sense tips for a happy and safe holiday season.

Before you buy your tree, consider the type you want and where you'll put it. Be sure to select a spot away from radiators, heat outlets, fireplaces, heaters and away from heavy foot traffic.

A live tree should be bought as fresh as possible.

If newly cut and properly cared for, a tree can stay alive and fire safe for several weeks.

Pine and fir trees usually outlast spruce.

Green needles should not fall off when you lift the tree by the trunk and tap the butt on the ground.

Grasp a branch near the top and pull your hand along it slowly. If you bend a needle and it breaks before bending in half, the tree is already quite dry.

Before you mount your tree in a suitable stand, cut an inch or two off the bottom of the trunk at an angle so it will absorb water more easily.

Always keep the base of the tree in water and check it daily.

By adding beer to the water, evaporation will be slowed.

Live decorations such as evergreen boughs and wreaths, laurel and holly last longer and are less of a fire hazard when displayed outside.

Decorative lights are often used year after year; check carefully for frayed and worn cords and replace or discard them.

Never connect more than three strands of lights to one extension cord.

Use only UL listed lighting and decorations. (NOEL does not meet state approval standards).

Do not use electric lights on metallic trees; spotlights are a more effective and safer illumination.

Be able to turn off the Christmas tree lights without reaching or crawling under the tree.

Be sure to turn off electrical decorations when leaving home or going to bed.

Artificial trees should be made of flame retardant material. They are best for families who will be away several days, who may not have time to care for a live tree, or whose homes or apartments are unusually dry.

Make sure artificial decorations and trees are labeled "flame-resistant" or "fire-retardant."

Apply artificial "snow" in well ventilated areas and avoid using near ignition sources.

Dispose of papers and boxes at once. Do not allow them to accumulate.

Never burn Christmas trees, boxes or paper in the fireplace or woodstove.

Do not use candles on or near trees, evergreens or other flammable decorations and trimmings.

Use care when placing decorations which use bulbs, especially in windows where curtains or drapes can ignite easily.

Dispose of your tree soon after the holidays, before it dries out.

It is best to use the same care with an artificial tree as with a live tree. Fumes generated by a smoldering artificial tree can be just as deadly as an actual fire. Flame resistant materials only retard fire, ultimately they will burn.

Live cut trees are prohibited in all public buildings, including other live decorations.

When making out your Christmas shopping list, consider a gift of life — give a smoke detector or fire extinguisher.

VoTech smoking area request denied

The South Shore Votech School Committee last week turned down a request from the student council to establish an outside smoking area at the regional school campus.

Students wanted to set up a designated smoking area to clear the air in the school's restrooms, but the regional school committee unanimously nixed the idea of an outside smoking area for students during lunch.

Students are allowed to smoke at the school bus waiting area before and after school now, but committee members argued that the area is not kept clean and that permission to smoke during school hours would encourage more smoking.

The Votech School lost about $1,600 worth of equipment from a new marine technology shop at the Abington campus last weekend. The committee agreed to up its burglary insurance at the school until a more adequate alarm system is installed in the next few weeks. The committee discovered that the school's insurance broker hadn't included burglary coverage on its policy after the break.

The Votech School recently won a grant from the federal government and the National School Energy Task Force to make energy-saving improvements to the Hanover campus this year.

The school will cover the overhead doors in the auto shops, install weather stripping on all outside doors, install a microprocessor control for the heating system, install a small water heater to save on use of the large boiler on warmer days, and install ceiling fans in the shop areas to conserve energy.

The Votech School has been discussing plans for a Cooperative Extension fisheries course with the coordinator for Plymouth County. Courses could include trawl net construction, lobster pot funnels, net construction mathematics and the design and construction of gill nets, according to Asst. Supt. Warren Anderson. The new program could be added to the school's new marine technology program.

Students at the Votech School are manning the schools new retail shop at the Abington campus called "New Directions," filled with lots of items on sale for Christmas.

The store is open from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. until Dec. 22. Students in the school's marketing, management and merchandising course man the shop each day. Ribbon cutting ceremonies were held Dec. 10.

The shop features candles, "preppy" Christmas tree ornaments, straw baskets for plants, tapes, sports banks, games, jewelry, shoe laces, living trees, Christmas cards, dried flowers, spice ropes, decorated water cans, tool kits, log rings, baked goods and cheese balls from the culinary arts department, coffee mugs and plant pots and items hand-crafted by students of the school and the North River special needs collaborative.

The Votech committee appointed Kathleen Clarkson as cheerleading coach and David Sahl as intramural girls' basketball coach, marking the first time the school has had such programs for girls. The area of girls' sports and extracurricular programs was noted as lacking by an evaluation team at the school last year.

A proposed budget reflecting an 11 percent increase over last year was outlined at the Votech school committee meeting last week.

The proposal will be presented informally to the advisory committees from the eight towns in the region at a special meeting Dec. 20.

Four towns will face large increases in new assessments. Rockland faces an increase of $77,920; Abington, $32,551; Norwell, $22,278 and Scituate, $14,781. Hanover faces a small increase of $1,420 in the projected assessment; Cohasset, $3,245; Hanson and Whitman both can expect decreases in the next year.

The Pink Ladies ham it up at the Pajama Party in last week's concluding performance of CHS's production of "Grease." The reviews were 'rave,' the seats all sold out, and the cry is 'encore!' (Greg Derr Photo)

CHRISTMAS PARTY

Pack #38 will hold a Christmas party at their regular meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Deer Hill. Scouts will bring ornaments for a tree which will be decorated and donated to the Ripley Road Nursing Home.

Canned foods will also be collected for a basket to be given to a needy family.

Thanks to the party organizers, Paula Almeida, Linda Gaston, Kathy Morgan and Elaine Hughes.

RECENT HAPPENINGS

Elaine Caffrey and Mary Ellen Smith arranged the Pack's visit to the Pt. Allerton Coast Guard Station in Hull where they learned about water safety and rescue. The boys toured two Coast Guard ships and watched the men respond to a call.

Many scouts joined brownies and girl scouts for Christmas carolling on St. Stephen's steps during the Village Christmas Stroll.

Cubs attending a Fun Day held at the Resurrection Church Hall in Hingham were Philip Pratt, Matt Lombardy, Jay Gaston, Doug Moe, Tony Morgan and Robbie Lawrence.

ALADDIN AND THE WONDERFUL LAMP

Reservations for a trip to the Thursday, Feb. 24, 2 p.m. performance of "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" by the Boston Children's Theatre, should be made now. Call Linda Farrag at 383-9519.

DEN NEWS

Looking back: The 'Heritage Trail' of Cohasset

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset Historical Commission Member

The recent sale of the old Beechwood Fire Station which will be moved to Scituate raises questions regarding a possible lack of knowledge on the part of Cohasset's citizens concerning preservation of historically valuable buildings within the town.

In 1970, an organization was established in the town to direct Cohasset's Bicentennial year celebration. It was known as "Cohasset Bicentennial Incorporated" (today it is called Cohasset Historic Trust) and among its projects was the issuance of a booklet titled "Heritage Trail."

This booklet pictured and described many of the town's earliest homes and oldest buildings. It listed those still standing at the time of publication, from the oldest house of 1695 to those dating from the year 1811. Subsequently, the town's Historical Commission, in its survey of the historical assets of the town, has extended the list of representative historical buildings to 1900 and later. The Commission's survey still continues.

Of the original "Heritage Trail" listing made in 1970, two of the oldest houses now are gone. Victims of the building wreckers have been Heritage Trail number 41, the old Nichols House dating from 1722, and the Couillard House, HT number 45, dating from 1790. Both were located on King St. The site of the former is now a shopping plaza, and the latter is the town's water treatment plant. The Nichols and Couillard houses were among the best examples of early American architecture to be found in Cohasset.

Of a later generation of architecturally significant Cohasset homes, represented by the Victorian mansions familiar along our shore roads, the famous Logan estate on Jerusalem Road fell victim to developers some years ago. Some feel that it was needlessly lost and ought to have been preserved for the uniqueness of its character.

At Government Island, the Cohasset Historical Commission recently acted to protect two of the remaining and original U.S. Lighthouse Establishment buildings from the days of the construction of Minot's Light. The lighthouse itself is now a national engineering landmark, and Government Island played a major role in the building and maintenance of the light.

A small brick structure there is perhaps one of the few surviving examples of once-common "oil storage buildings" used to store fuel for the lighthouse beacon lanterns.

Nearby, the former Lighthouse Keeper's Office building has been saved from demolition and has been restored. In both cases, old and significant structures have been successfully "recycled" for quite different but useful functions.

Not so fortunate, however, was one of two original Lighthouse Keeper's dwelling houses located there, for one of those historically important buildings was demolished some years ago.

Preservation of historically valuable buildings often hinges upon finding a suitable new use for the structure. If no one is interested, all efforts at preservation may fail, regardless of the value of the building.

Once gone, a historical building can never be replaced, and the cultural loss to the community may be substantial. Of other examples of historical preservation having happy endings in Cohasset, the Historical Society's restoration of its Lothrop House is one of the finest efforts.

But the fact remains that there has been a rate of attrition among the town's oldest and best historical buildings. If allowed to continue, this slow but steady loss will remove from the town much of its unique identity, the very thing so prized by townspeople and potential residents alike.

Where did the old Beechwood fire station fit in the question of historical preservation within Cohasset? It is a 19th century fire house dating from the year 1895. For the past 20 years or so it has been the sole survivor of a group of three similar buildings of roughly the same age which once housed most of the town's fire department.

For years, the other two near-twins were the two components of an old central fire station at the Cove. Those close contemporaries at the Cove originally had formed a side-by-side pair of stations affectionately called "the ugly twins." In 1913 the "ugly twins" were combined to form the town's first Central Fire Headquarters.

The Cove station was removed some years ago to clear the way for today's Veterans' Memorial Park, leaving the Beechwood building alone to represent its architectural class. (It should be mentioned that the North Cohasset Station, dating from 1902, was a converted commercial building and not originally a Fire Station.

Perhaps it is ironic that as the old Beechwood Station declined in its operational capability, its historical and architectural value actually increased. As a fire station, the building became archaic, but at the same time, it became a surviving relic of Cohasset's past. Its value now rests in the fact that it represents a bygone era and shows exactly what the typical late 19th century building of its type was like.

A tip-off to the real significance of the old station came when inquiries were received from Old Sturbridge Village asking about its age and its history. Unfortunately, the date of construction was not quite early enough to qualify, otherwise the Beechwood station might now be part of that organization's collection of representative historical buildings, an example of an early New England fire station.

It is regrettable that the Beechwood station is leaving Cohasset, and another opportunity to preserve the town's historical flavor has been lost. At least we know that its new owners have a deep appreciation of the old building and we must applaud their willingness to do what most Cohasseters seemed afraid to try.

Old Beechwood fire station moves to Scituate.

Christmas open house

The Ripley Road Nursing Home will hold a Christmas Open House on Sunday, December 19 from 2 to 8 p.m.

The residents have been busy making gifts which will be on sale. Santa will be there at 7 p.m.

Rec Department magic

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor "The Magic of Russ & Co." Friday, Dec. 17 from 7 to 8:15 p.m. at the Town Hall auditorium.

The show will include the famous Houdini straight jacket escape topped off with metamorphosis, the great trunk mystery. Also, the production of a live rabbit from nowhere and snow white doves magically produced from silk handkerchiefs and chafing pans.

Russ and his two assistants will make up a trio of the finest mystical, magical, mirthful entertainers. Cartoons will be shown and refreshments will be sold.

New Year's celebration

A very special New Year's Eve extravaganza is being planned by the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association.

"We have got a feeling 1983 is going to be a special year for us, so we're trying to do something very special to start it right," said Mary Menakos, president and chairperson of the event.

The festivities will begin on Friday, Dec. 31 at 9 p.m. at The Cove on Route 3A in Hingham, (formerly Iris' Broad Cove Ballroom).

Ticket donation will include favors, entertainment, all hors d'oeuvres, complimentary champagne at midnight and breakfast buffet. Tickets are available individually or in tables of 10.

Those who wish to reserve tickets in advance may do so by calling 5545-3670 after 6 p.m.

The South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association is a non-profit organization.

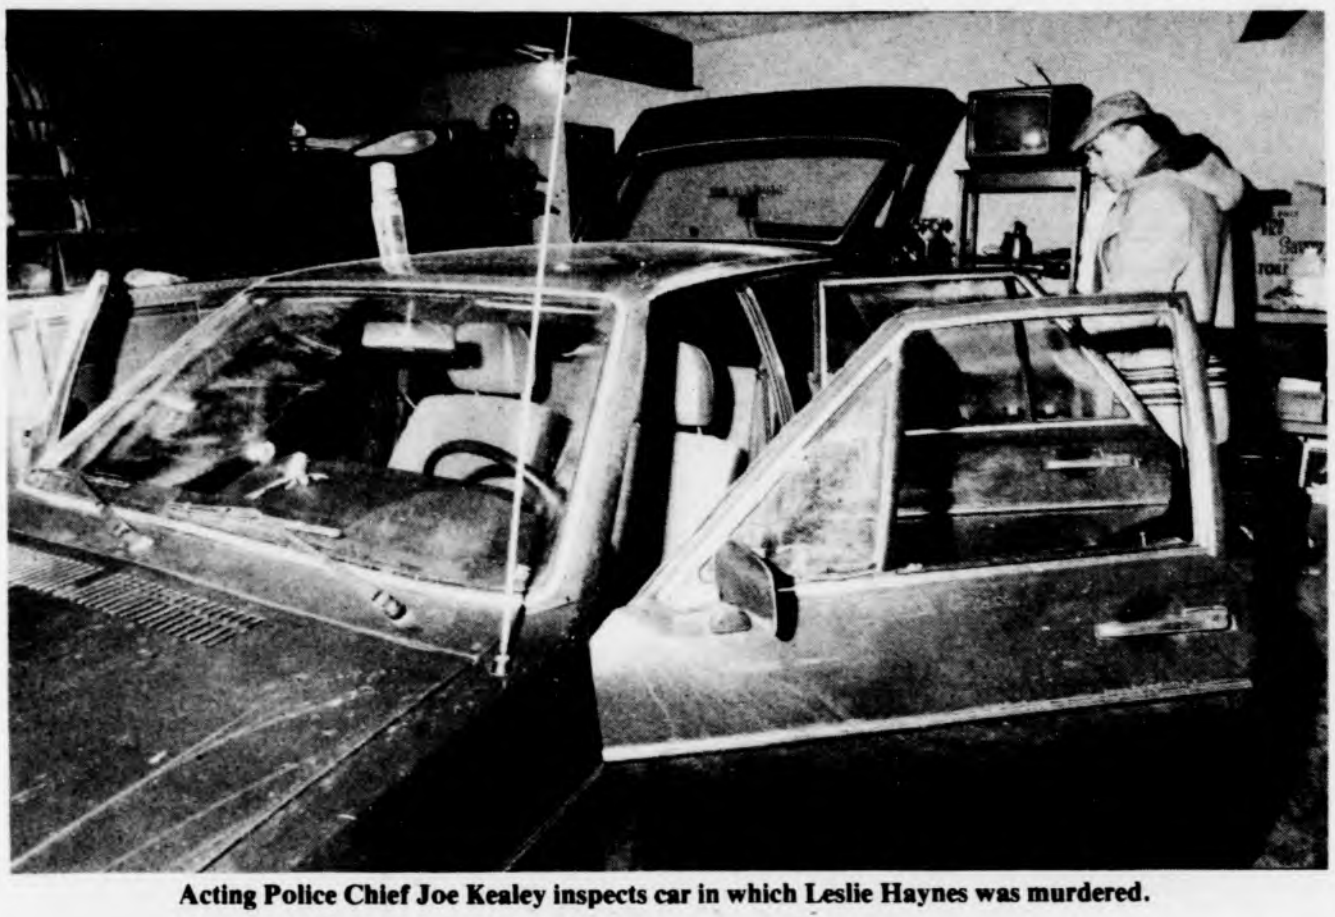
Arrest near in shooting of Leslie Haynes

Law enforcement authorities Tuesday were on the verge of making an arrest in the shooting death of Leslie Ann Haynes.

Haynes, a 20-year-old college junior on vacation from her studies at the University of Denver, was shot to death early Sunday morning. Police discovered her body in her parked car at the Texaco service station in Cohasset Village. She had lived at 16 Surrey Drive.



"There will be a successful conclusion to this case before long," said Asst. Dist. Atty. Robert Banks of Norfolk County Tuesday.

Police investigators were still conducting interviews and awaiting ballistics and fingerprint tests before making an arrest, said Banks. The suspect is a male and is thought to be a boyfriend or a former boyfriend.

"We are still working on several channels of investigation," Banks added. "We have someone in mind. But at this time it would not be proper to name the person or to charge him. We are waiting for several facets of the investigation as supplementary information."

Banks said a statement in a Boston newspaper that the .22 caliber pistol found in the car was registered to the victim's father, William Haynes, is "inaccurate."

Police, he said, are unsure who the gun is registered to. He also added there is no significance to the red rose corsage found on the dashboard of the 1979 Volkswagon Dasher that Leslie was driving. He also said he had no information about the incident being drug-related.

Acting Police Chief Joe Kealey inspects car in which Leslie Haynes was murdered.

"The motive for the murder is speculation at this point," he said.

Acting Cohasset Police Chief Joseph Kealey said police have ruled out robbery, and they say there was no evidence that Haynes was sexually assaulted.

Another motive mentioned has been a girlfriend-boyfriend relationship.

"Usually in cases like this, a murder can be either a result of a robbery, a rape or something like that (boyfriend-girlfriend)," said Kealey. "An assumption is the boyfriend-girlfriend, but it's only an assumption at this point."

Haynes had come home in November to spend Christmas with her family. She was last seen alive about 3 a.m. Sunday when she dropped off a girlfriend.

Earlier Saturday night, Haynes had accompanied her friend to a party in Boston hosted by a professional associate.

At 4:26 a.m. Sunday, Patrolman Richard Yocum, on patrol in Cohasset Village, found Haynes with her head leaning against the wheel in the car at the South Main Street Texaco station, near two phone booths.

The slaying apparently happened shortly before the body was discovered. Ambulance crews tried to resuscitate Haynes, but she was pronounced dead at 5 a.m. at South Shore Hospital.

Haynes had been shot four times in the head and once in the shoulder. Several other bullets shattered the window on the driver's side where she was sitting. Police found the gun, a .22 caliber, in the car along with nine spent cartridges.

Police found Haynes dressed in her party dress, with high heels and a full-length fur coat.

Haynes was studying hotel management in college and was working as an intern at the Sheraton Boston Hotel. Her father, William, is an accountant in Newton-Wellesley. Leslie Ann was described by many Cohasset residents as a beautiful, attractive, friendly and athletic person. She was a graduate of Notre Dame Academy in Hingham.

Commission applications

Cohasset residents applying to selectmen for two vacancies to the Sewer Commission include Charles DeSantis of 260 Forest Avenue, Bernard J. Salvador, Jr., of 43 Elm Court, Richard J. Avery of 22 Surrey Drive, Maxwell R. Pounder, Henry Rattenburg of Briarwood Lane and Robin Schubier of 178 South Main Street.

Selectmen's meetings

Selectmen will meet Wednesday night, Dec. 22 and plan to name a new executive secretary. They will next meet Tuesday, Dec. 28 to begin screening applicants for police chief.

OMNI winter program

OMNI, the South Shore Center for Life and the Arts, a non-profit, health-oriented educational organization in Hingham, announces the beginning of registration for its Winter Program.

The program, which will begin the last weekend in January, includes ongoing classes, one-day intensives on Friday evenings and Saturdays and a continuing Sunday afternoon seminar series.

Brochures containing a full listing of OMNI offerings as well as a Holistic Directory are available at local stores. For further information about registration, call OMNI at 925-2815 or 545-0948.

Student Council raffle

The Cohasset High School student council sponsored a raffle to help defray the costs of window vandalism netted approximately $1,000.

Winners of the four Stop & Shop certificates were drawn at last Friday's basketball game.

Jim Hoy and Mary Keating, both of Cohasset, won the $100 and $50 gift certificate, respectively and E. Cronin of Hingham and Craig Mulcahy won the two $25 certificates.

Congratulations to the winners and to the high school students for their efforts to pay for new windows.

A special kind of Christmas story

Mary & Henry Brennock are Mr. & Mrs. Claus

By Jane Lane

Some may never know the true and special meaning of Christmas. But there are a few who caress that knowledge and share its wondrous message. They give freely of their abundant love.

Mary and Henry Brennock, their four children, six grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews, have shared their profound gift with others for many, many years.

The Brennocks are more widely known and recognized during this time of year as Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus.

And although both Brennocks hold fulltime jobs during the day, Mary said their costume changes become so frequent these days and nights, it's difficult to remember which job they're reporting to.

But there is one large difference between jobs.

The Brennocks have never been paid for their performances as Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus. Mary wouldn't think of accepting one cent for this annual assignment they undertake simply "for the love of Jesus."

"We do this because of our love for children and our love of Jesus, on his birthday," Mary explained. "We just can't accept any money. People today feel they have to be paid for everything they do. But we won't accept a penny for this."

Henry and Mary began the Yuletide tradition about 30 years ago when they decided to dress up as Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus for their young children. The impromptu performance went over well, so they decided to continue for as long as their children appreciated their amateur efforts.

But news of Mr. and Mrs. Claus' arrival at the Brennock home spread quickly throughout the neighborhood. In following years, the Brennocks found themselves playing to larger audiences.

As Mary recalled, they started visiting some neighborhood homes. Each year after that, they received more and more requests to entertain children and adults throughout the community.

Now the couple hold their first performance each year on the Saturday after Thanksgiving, and there's no rest until Santa's work is completed Dec. 25.

In addition to their extended schedule of performances, the entire production has been upgraded and professionalized since their first attempt many years ago. But the common denominator remains — they won't collect a fee, they'll perform for anyone who extends an invitation, and it remains strictly a family affair.

The toddlers who once were captivated by the Brennocks' performances are now grown with children of their own. And just about everyone has become part of the Christmas pageantry.

In fact, perhaps this secret should not be shared, but it's rumored that Henry's son, Eddie, 36, periodically fills in for his fatigued father. That's an understandable dilemma, because as Mary explained, during the height of the season, they will often play two different locations in one night.

Sunday afternoon, for instance, Mr. and Mrs. Claus performed in a pageant at a local church and then it was off that night to a nursing home and then to a private party.

The popularity of the Brennocks' production is based upon several elements. First, their love for performing this magical event is obvious. And having a large number of family members participate with them makes it more meaningful. It is a total family effort, from Santa's substitute, Eddie, to the other Brennock offspring who assist in the production — Maureen, 35, of Plymouth, Danny, 31, a Lt. Commander in the Navy who is stationed in Brunswick, Me., but helps out when he comes to town, and 23 year-old Kana of Somerville.

The grandchildren, who learn to recite lines and work extremely hard as Santa's elves, include Heather Brennock, 8, and her sisters, Katie, 7, and Holly, 3, of Cohasset, and Rayna Swales, 12, of Plymouth and her brother Robby Swales, 10.

Sunday night, Holly made her debut with the Brennock productions, and from all accounts, she performed wonderfully. Mary said her father Eddie deliberately and calmly explained he only appeared to be Santa, but of course, he was not the real thing.

"She said she understood, but when a bearded Santa made his entrance, she was scared to death," Mary said. "One of the older nieces stood by her and she got through it and did wonderfully."

As the years progressed, so did the performances and the costumes. Mary made each costume in the production which now includes several elves and those all-important reindeer. In fact, a recent addition to the program is a featured performance by Rudolph. Maureen (Brennock) Swales is the star under that shiny red nose, which has become a favorite scene-stealer in the production, Mary said.

The traditional program usually begins by having the small children run out to yell, "Santa's here!" Then Mrs. Claus enters and sings a few songs. Santa is the last to arrive. Everyone then accompanies the performers in some caroling.

Candy canes are given to the audience. At nursing homes, the entourage usually visits the rooms of the bed-ridden adults, and brings them gifts donated by the nursing home.

Tradition is difficult to break, Mary said, because they often find themselves performing for the same audiences year after year. And many people request them to perform the same songs each time.

"I am asked all the time to 'please do the number about Santa living on the North Pole,' which is a song I don't even know the title to, but I learned as a child. I never forgot it, and most people don't forget it — it has a lot of action and the kids really enjoy it. Then, we usually sing 'Must be Santa,' together, and a couple of other songs I learned as a child," Mary said.

After working all day as a secretary in the high school guidance department while her husband toils as head custodian of the Osgood School, how can they keep the frantic pace?

"The real reason we do it is because of our love of children. It is our way of helping to celebrate Christmas," she said.

Would they ever consider closing the show, or being replaced by their children?

"We are never going to stop," Mary automatically replied. "It's too much fun. There is so much pleasure in doing this — you should see the faces on those kids when we enter the room. They love it. And it gives us so much joy."

Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus share the wondrous message of Christmas.

Selectmen appoint Ainslie a permanent patrolman

Lawrence Ainslie, Jr., was named a permanent police officer by selectmen last week.

Ainslie was one of four permanent intermittent officers who qualified for permanent appointment from the civil service list. Ainslie was chosen by selectmen, based on his five years' experience as an auxiliary officer in Cohasset.

The patrolman's uncle, selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie, abstained from the vote. He said, "The town feels it is better that way because he is my nephew."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle approved the appointment, saying Ainslie had more experience than the other candidate, including two years as a permanent intermittent officer. Ed Connor had no police experience, he said.

In July, patrolman Ainslie was accused by former Police Chief John DeBassio of withholding information and lying on his job application. The chief also charged that Ainslie neglected his duty and conducted himself in a manner unbecoming an officer. The former chief refused to use the patrolman for traffic and other police details.

Selectmen cleared Ainslie of the charges and ordered the chief to use the intermittent officer on police details.

Ainslie is employed as a security guard at the Prudential Center. Selectman Laugelle noted that Ainslie had received a commendation from Boston Police Commissioner Joseph Jordan for his assistance in capturing a robber at Prudential Center.

Ainslie will fill the vacancy in the police department created when officer Richard Fairbairn left in October for a position in the Weymouth Police Department.

Although there were four qualified candidates to fill the vacancy, selectmen did not receive responses from Robert Williams and Daniel Ainslie.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur felt it was appropriate that acting Chief Joseph Kealey be asked his opinion regarding the proposed appointment, Executive secretary Arthur Clark assured the board Kealey had "no problem" with Ainslie's appointment.

Kealey told the Mariner he is not the appointing authority and "has nothing to do with appointments." He said he made no recommendation and was not asked for one. "It's just up to me to see he performs his duties."

Acting Chief Kealey will designate a starting date for the new officer. The appointment leaves the Police Dept. with 17 men and a chief.

New executive secretary to be named this week

Selectmen are expected to name a replacement for retiring executive secretary Arthur Clark Wednesday night.

A contract is being prepared, and a document will be ready to be offered to the prospective employee, they said.

Last week selectmen finished interviewing the five finalists for the position. There is one local resident among the finalists, Richard Silvia of Beechwood St.

The other four candidates include Warren Rutherford of Boylston, Mark Lanza of South Yarmouth, Richard O'Leary of Medway and James Overmyer of Lenox. Arthur Clark is resigning Dec. 31, and selectmen would like to have a replacement on board by the first of January.

After a motion by Mary Jane McArthur during Wednesday night's meeting, Selectmen agreed to request that the personnel board give serious consideration to upgrading the salaries of non-union employees in the next fiscal year.

Although McArthur did not specifically mention the position of executive secretary in the motion, that job is one non-union classification within the town.

Some of the candidates for executive secretary mentioned that a starting salary of $19,000 -$21,000 was modest compensation for the position. Candidate Silvia candidly told selectmen he thought the salary range was "too low" for the administrative position. He added that the benefits' package was an attractive lure for prospective candidates.

Paintings on display

The Quincy Co-operative Bank, Rte. 3A, Cohasset, and the South Shore Art Center are showing paintings by Caroline Ruland of Scituate at the bank galleria through the months of December and January.

Ruland is a representational as well as a portrait artist. She holds a B.A. in art from Winona State University and did graduate work at the University of Minnesota and Augustana University.

She also studied privately with Mario Araujo, Guatemalan National Artist, and recently with Connie Pratt, Michael Keane and Clement Micarelli.

Ruland is the recipient of many awards and is an exhibiting member of the Copley Society, Boston, the South Shore Art Center Gallery and the Scituate Guild Gallery, which she helped to found.

Vacation projects for kids

During Christmas vacation week children from ages seven to 12 may "drop in" at the South Shore Art Center from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon for creative projects with paint and pencil, collage, mixed media and also to work on a continuing art work that will be displayed at the Art Center Winter Open House.

Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, teacher in the Weymouth elementary schools, will guide the group in a series of fun-filled projects that are designed to instruct while tapping the students' creative resources.

No pre-registration is necessary and all supplies are included in the low fee.

This program is funded in part by the South Shore Playhouse Associates. For further information, telephone 383-9548.

The country look in home decorating celebrates rural lifestyle in all its richness and simple pleasures. The element that gives country's look of seeming clutter its underlying order is calculated design. Siding-covered walls, brick hearths, hand decorated tiles, basketry, stripped-pine furniture, whitewashed walls, shutters, small prints, quilts and collectibles must all mesh into an intelligent whole. It is a most difficult look to coordinate, but with the help of a decorator/designer, the delightful flavor of country living can be achieved. You can almost smell the bread baking in the oven.

If you like the country look, aim for a pale color scheme when you're decorating a bedroom. The effect can be very soothing. Have you got an exact color in mind but can't find the paint that fits your needs? Located at 763 Country Way in N. Scituate, BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE has the ability to mix and match 1000's of different shades and hues. There is no need to overbuy either. We can keep a record of your blend and match it exactly if you need additional quantities. ☐Philip Dormitzer, a Harvard University sophomore and 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School, won the Wendell Scholarship Prize.

The Wendell prize is awarded to a sophomore at Harvard/Radcliffe "who as a freshman made rank list group 1, showed strong promise as a scholar, displayed unusual intellectual maturity and seriousness of purpose, followed up his/her academic interests in out-of-class activities, and showed breadth as well as depth in both academic and non-academic areas."

A faculty committee selected Dormitzer as "the most promising and catholic scholar" in his class of 1,600 students. The decision was based on his record, recommendations from professors, an essay and an interview. He will receive a monetary award and the Wendell family will hold a formal dinner at the Harvard Club in his honor.

A bioanthropology major, Dormitzer leaves in February for an expedition in Pakistan where he will work as a field assistant for the Harvard Anthropology Department.

He is also a member of the Harvard University Band and the Wind Ensemble, and is a coxswain in the Harvard Varsity Lightweight Crew.

☐Paul Farren, CHS Class of '79, has been named to the All Yankee Conference Football Center. He has also been named U.P.I. All E.C.A.C. Center and, additionally, has received the football Most Valuable Player Award at Boston University for 1982.

Paul is a senior at the B.U. School of Management majoring in finance.

☐Joan Brown called to report that she and her husband, Merle, have a new member in their family. Alvaro Diaz, an A.F.S. student from Porto Alegre, Brazil, will be part of their family until he graduates with the '83 class in June.

Joanne reports his command of the English language is superb and that Alvaro is a most welcome addition to her family. He certainly received an unusual welcome...his first day in Cohasset he was greeted by a snowstorm, followed by a crash course in how to use a shovel.

Joan called with another subject in mind. After watching the recent performance of the musical "Grease" (which she loved), it reminded her of last year's Senior Class play, "Lil' Abner" and her lack of pictures for same. She took a role of film, but not one picture came out.

Joan would like any one with negatives of pictures from "Lil' Abner" to please contact her; she will even pick up and promises to deliver them back.

☐Watch for Joe Becker's name to appear in the papers. After completing a successful season for Deerfield's football team, he is now a member of their hockey squad. Anyone who watched Joe in action last year knows he'll be a star again.

☐Mrs. Eva Black is in town for the holidays. A long-time resident of Cohasset, Mrs. Black moved to New York several years ago. She is visiting her daughter Sue Fone, on Surrey Drive. May the holidays be merry and your new year a good one, Mrs. Black.

☐Heard a lot of comments around town about the snow removal during our last storm — all good. Hats off to highway superintendent Harold Litchfield and his able crew.

☐Sara Froio of Forest Ave., made the dean's list at Johnson and Wales for the first semester this year. Sarah is a freshman and says it's a wonderful school. She has some great friends and she really loves it.

☐Another idea from the "Last-Minute Gift Party" is a two-fold suggestion. Make a heap of pomander balls, tied with gold cord, to keep in a bowl. They're sweet-smelling decorations or instant gifts.

Select firm, fresh oranges, lemons or limes. Cover with whole cloves. Mix equal amounts of ground cinnamon and orrisroot and put a heaping teaspoon of the mixture in a small bag along with one of the fruits. Nice aroma, pretty decoration and an item that can be given as a gift at a moment's notice.

☐Had a nice note from Dr. Keith Meganthlin and his wife Sue (Studley), who tell me that we have more snow than they do in Portland. Their sons are busy — Craig is a sophomore at Union College and Shawn and Mark were members of their Portland High championship soccer team.

☐Brian Cogill had a real hunting story to tell...while on his annual trip to Nantucket with seven other hunting enthusiasts, they were "driving an area" and spotted a deer. The boys with them wanted them to shoot, but one saw that the deer was spotted, so they held back. All of them moved in to surround it and caught it, a young deer with a broken back leg. They took it to the airport, which is the tagging station, and an elderly woman somehow got word of the deer's dilemma, whereupon she donated $400 to transport the deer to Morgan Memorial Hospital where the deer's leg will be fixed. After the deer's leg is mended, it will be returned to Nantucket. Now that's the right kind of a hunting story.

☐Wishing you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Attorney hired to disentangle sewer proposal

By Jane Lane

An environmental attorney has been hired at $85 per hour to assist special town counsel Richard Henderson in his attempt to dissolve the $13.7 million Metcalf and Eddy sewer proposal.

Henderson told selectmen last week that he sensed there was considerable support throughout town for a special environmental attorney to help in the negotiations with the attorney general.

Selectmen named Thomas B. Bracken of Boston to assist in outlining to the attorney general's office why the Metcalf and Eddy plan should be substituted with a cheaper alternative.

A hearing is scheduled for Jan. 5 at 10 a.m. with representatives of the state Division of Water Pollution Control, the attorney general's office, and the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering. Henderson said the attorneys would work together to illustrate to the state not that the Metcalf and Eddy report is negligent, but that an alternative sewer plan can be implemented at a lower cost to the town.

Several proponents of Article 4 of the special town meeting which called for the creation of cheaper alternatives attended last Friday night's session at which the special attorney was named. Their concern was that a special attorney not be hired to work independently from Atty. Henderson, who has been involved in the situation for three years.

Henderson, who was called to the meeting from his home by selectmen, emphasized the attorney, who specializes in environmental law, would assist him when expertise in that area was warranted.

During a previous meeting with selectmen, Henderson said the first step in dissolving the sewer plan was to outline the town's legal, technical and engineering objections to the Metcalf and Eddy report. If the state is not convinced by that argument, then a modification of the court agreement between the Division of Water Pollution Control and Cohasset must be filed in Superior court.

Henderson explained that the town counsel's office had been involved in the negotiations of the contract with Metcalf and Eddy and it would be "incongruous" for the same attorneys to now explain why the town wanted to back away from that same plan.

Several residents including William Baird, an environmental engineer, emphasized the time limitations involved. He suggested the first duty for the special counsel would be to petition for a postponement of the Jan. 5 hearing and to establish "a time frame we can live within."

Atty. Henderson agreed "it would make a big difference to us."

Article 4 proponent Peter Pratt urged selectmen to re-establish the sewer commission's ad hoc committee which could be used to complete the "legwork" to create alternative sewer plans.

The ad hoc group could work with the assistant town counsel and special counsel on alternative proposals to present to the state.

Henderson agreed with the suggestion and said he would contact Bracken and inquire about his working with the citizens' group.

Bracken was recommended by Henderson from a list of five qualified attorneys who specialize in environmental law. Henderson recommended all five lawyers. But based on years of experience and a fee schedule, the assistant town counsel made Bracken his final choice. Selectmen accepted that recommendation.

"He will work completely in concert with anyone," Henderson said. "It's going to be a tough road ahead and it's going to split somewhere, but at least we will have (the advice of) a special environmental attorney."

The special environmental counsel would prosecute litigation and advise the town on alternatives so the town is not held in violation of the court order, he said.

Article 4 proponent Charles DeSantis said, "The success or failure of the town hinges on this special counsel. And he doesn't have a lot of time."

In the meantime, Henderson will write a letter to selectmen by Dec. 22 advising them of the legal responsibilities of sewer commission member Joseph Gwinn. Henderson said he did not know if Gwinn had the authority to prepare a budget as the lone member of the commission, or if he would solicit alternative sewer proposals for the town.

Selectmen were to discuss that situation at Wednesday's meeting.

Christian mandate

As in our frailty we are given to understand it, the Christian religion is designed for all seasons — summer and winter, feast and famine, birth and death. Nevertheless, our understanding is taxed when the last days before Christmas — the most hopeful Christian holiday after Easter — are bloodied and contaminated by an event such as the murder of Leslie Ann Haynes of Surrey Drive.

Here was a beautiful, vivacious young woman with her whole life in front of her but for the depravity of one. Surely she would some day have passed on the gift of life had she lived. Now she has been taken by a vile act that is the antithesis of life and Christmas and "peace on Earth, good will toward men."

It is difficult to understand this act, let alone to forgive it. We hope that we will be forgiven if at this juncture we are unprepared to do either. We do not understand what logic, however momentary or irrational, could have produced such an act.

If greed was the motive, we do not understand what robber could put the contents of a woman's purse ahead of the life ahead of her, ahead of the life she might some day create, and ahead of the anguish of a family at Christmastime.

If, as would seem quite possible, jealousy was the motive, we cannot at this juncture forgive one who would translate his momentary disappointment, no matter how powerfully felt, into the permanent catastrophe he has now inflicted on decent, innocent people.

At this moment our hearts go out to the Haynes family. While most of us are being "merry" — whatever that word means — the Hayneses are dealing with an incomprehensible loss this Christmas. Christmases of the future, moreover, will necessarily be a bittersweet anniversary for the Hayneses, at once the celebration of all that is good and decent for a Christian family, and a painful reminder of the way in which they lost their daughter and sister.

One hopes that if Leslie Ann Haynes' younger sisters have children they look like her, and that the family she has left behind will know hope with each Christmas along with the unmitigated loss that this Christmas brings.

One hopes that the rest of us will pause in our merry way this Christmas long enough to honor Leslie Ann Haynes by putting a little Christmas into Christmas.

The only proper response to an act of murder is not to be ashamed to stand tall for the decent, Christian values that are the antithesis of murder. The only proper way to remember Leslie Ann Haynes is not to be ashamed to give love and speak it often, for seasonal sales pitches notwithstanding, love is all any of us really has to give.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Don't mess with this little, old lady

By Claire McDonough

"That mugger picked the wrong little old lady this time," Skipper chortled.

Breida agreed. "We could have told him not to try to get her pocketbook away from her. Heaven knows I would know better than to mess with her."

"Would you mind deleting the expletive 'old' from your statement?" I asked Skipper. "Clearly I am in the very pink of condition or even now the little stinker would be presenting his best girl with a gift from the Leather Gallery — secondhand."

They were referring to my experience on the MBTA last Tuesday. Because of the seasonal but unexpected cold, I had decided to treat myself to a "T" ride from the North Station to Park Street. A mistake. I could have walked to the State House a good deal faster.

Further, we humans were jammed into the trolley in a manner that would make a cotton swab box seem positively spacious. Worse yet, our unwilling bodies had been forced into patently unnatural positions. I was located at the door, and I hooked my arm around a vertical support against the unlikely happenstance that someone might create a space that would allow me to fall. I then mentally removed myself from this mass of contorted humanity and fantasized about Peggotty Beach in summer.

I had the start of a fairly good tan when I felt the shoulder strap of my purse moving down my arm. Blinking my way back to reality and the MBTA, I found that we were stopping at Haymarket Square. An enterprising young individual had his right foot out the door. With his left hand he was deftly relieving me of the lovely new bag my vanpoolers had given me for Christmas.

Now you must realize that I had occasionally anticipated just such an occurrence. What would my reaction be, I wondered? Would I yell? Cry? Meekly surrender my belongings? After much deliberation, I had decided on the last. After all, I reasoned, what if he had a knife? Something worse? Surely this body is worth more than any possession it might be carrying. Right?

No way. My immediate reaction, I learned, was to get mad and fight.

Using the stentorian voice that I developed calling nine kids from the four corners of the television, I bellowed, "Take your hands off my belongings, you miserable little crook!"

At the same time I grabbed my bag with both hands and yanked.

The strap broke, but I kept the bag.

My would-be brigand shot me an agonized and incredulous look before melting into the Haymarket crowd.

"What is the world coming to," he clearly wondered, "when a macho guy like me can't intimidate a broad like that one?"

Given a different set of circumstances — a lonely street or the Boston Common at dusk, for example, I would probably still opt for meek surrender and/or a hysterical sob. After all, bodies like mine don't swing from trees. But all young punks who operate in crowded MBTA cars should be aware of one thing:

Don't mess with this little old lady.

On appointing new sewer commissioners

Letters

To the Editor:

As the remaining member of the Cohasset Board of Sewer Commissioners, I have reserved the right to observe a 30 day period before formally notifying the selectmen that two vacancies exist on the board. Upon notification, no later than January 3, the selectmen then have seven days to fill the vacancies.

By publicizing these openings, I hope qualified applicants will seek to serve the town. I recognize the commendable qualities of the several applicants who have applied but invite them and others to consider carefully the duties, the limits and the responsibilities of the board to which they offer their services.

The first duty of the Board of Sewer Commissioners is to run the Sewer Department, a mundane, time-consuming, unexciting but necessary business. It is helpful if a member is available for day-time decisions, since the board acts as unpaid superintendent of the Sewer Department.

Ideally, the various talents and backgrounds of the commissioners should complement one another. The board is not expected to design waste water disposal plants. However, one or more of the following qualifications are desirable, whether needed in the next three months or later.

1) Some knowledge of Cohasset's past history of waste water problems and its attempts to reach an acceptable solution.

2) Experience in town government, or administrative procedures, or large construction projects, or knowledge of EPA regulations including funding and scheduling procedures, with specific knowledge of water pollution problems a bonus.

3) An appreciation of the possibilities as well as the limitations of both alternate solutions and central sewering.

New members must recognize that town bylaws

Police to get extra pay for holiday work

Selectmen agreed to compensate police officers for a full eight hours pay on holidays.

That agreement was reached last Tuesday night when selectmen met with police union attorney Joseph McParland and officers John Rhodes and Paul Laugelle. The police union contract will now be amended to include full compensation for holidays.

McParland said the officers were not receiving a full day's pay for each holiday. The contract allows for an officer to be paid one-fifth of a week's pay, but that is now computed on a 37½ hour work week, he explained.

The average officer in the union is losing about $4.27 per holiday, he said.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that Town Accountant William Signorellis has been following the same procedure for ten years and has no authority to amend that practice. His understanding was that the work schedule had changed to a four days on, two off work week, but the benefits remained according to the previous schedule.

After meeting with Henderson in closed session for several minutes, selectmen approved a change in the union contract to provide a full day's compensation for holidays.

In a related item, Atty. McParland will talk with court prosecutor Brian Noonan about working a five day work week. Judge Albert Kramer has asked Noonan to be on duty at the Quincy District Court five days a week, rather than four days as stipulated in the police union contract.

Henderson said if the officer and the union do not object to the five day work schedule, selectmen would also not object. McParland said he would discuss the situation with Noonan.

McKinnon raps Legislature's largesse

[The following is a statement delivered by state Senator Allan McKinnon before the Massachusetts State Senate Dec. 20.]

"I rise reluctantly, but I feel I must express my frustration and disappointment at the performance of the Legislature over the past weeks. I have served in the Senate for 12 years, and at no other time have I been more depressed and ashamed of our public image.

"Our actions on the budget amendments allowing office holders to keep their campaign fund surpluses; the allowing of judges to retire at higher pensions than they are presently eligible for, and the bill giving the Legislature control of the capitol building — these are all examples of actions that have nothing to do with the public interest.

"It appears that we continually insist on giving the media and the citizens of the Commonwealth ample evidence to support the poor opinion so many have of the Massachusetts General Court. It would almost seem that we have a "siege mentality" that it's "us" against "them" — that "they'll never understand our problems anyway, so why worry about what they think."

"It is my feeling that we are collectively committing one of the most grievous sins elected officials can ever commit — that is the sin of stealing. We steal, not something as mundane as money, but something far more important in the long run. We have stolen the public's confidence in the democratic process and in their right to expect their elected officials to act in their best interests.

"When the Senator from Amherst, one of the best, the brightest, the most dedicated men I have ever worked with, in or out of government, is quoted as publicly saying, 'In 14 years I've never seen it so bad,' I think it's time for all of us to give pause to what we're doing.

"If anyone is offended by my remarks, so be it. These sentiments have been inside me for weeks and I could no longer keep silent.

"The best and kindest thing we could do, and the greatest Christmas present we could give the pople of the Commonwealth would be to adjourn for the rest of this session."

Santa was around Cohasset town plenty this month, spreading his kindness and mystery. Patrick and Jessica McCluskey had a private word with the kindly old gent during the Village Fair.

Sewer commission . . .

limit the Board to operation and planning of the town sewer system and the maintenance and updating of a master plan for the whole town. The Board has no jurisdiction over on-lot systems, this authority being reserved to the Board of Health.

There are two commitments I ask of applicants.

1) Whatever the outcome of legal proceedings now ongoing, a new commissioner will serve until Town Elections.

2) A new commissioner will pledge not to deliberately open the town to a contempt of court charge. If the consent decree is still in effect when a step 2 grant is offered Cohasset, a commissioner must sign acceptance under the decree.

I would suggest to those applicants who may state that in this instance they will not obey Superior Court, that they offer their services to a revived Citizens Advisory Committee, organized under EPA guidelines, where their advocacy of special interests will be welcome.

Blue Cross probe

To the Editor:

An investigation by the state legislature into activities at Blue Cross and Blue Shield is urgently necessary.

This summer it was reported in local papers that the Federal Medicare program was the source of numerous illegal perks for BCBS employees. The taxpayers were the ultimate source of these "perks." How many more such perks at public or policy holder expense are being enjoyed by BCBS employees, we do not know.

Abuses of Blue Shield policy holders abound. Numerous lawsuits are on public record in which customers believed they were covered for certain medical treatment and were left holding the bag, presumably by sweet talking BCBS sales pitches. The companies have been defendant in over one hundred and twenty suits at last count, mostly over unpaid claims.

Finally, allegations of racism and antisemitism at BCBS have never been properly addressed.

Why the legislature listens to Blue Shield lobbyists and not to the public interest is indeed a matter for thought.

Selectmen's briefs . . .

POLICE CHIEF INTERVIEWS

Selectmen plan to review resumes for the 10 or 12 qualified candidates for police chief.

They will rate the candidates according to a system outlined in the police chief's handbook. A police chief must be rated according to character, education, experience as a supervisor, length of service, leadership ability, type of personality, and urban versus small town experience.

Selectmen said they will narrow the field of qualified candidates to about eight, including three local residents who applied for the position. Those three candidates include Lt. Charles Stockbridge, Sgt. Richard Barrows, and Acting Chief Joseph Kealy.

The police chief should have at least ten years supervisory experience, selectmen agreed last week. Leadership ability is also a high priority, selectman Mary Jan McArthur added. It was McArthur who compiled the system after reading through the police chief handbook several times. She also devised separate inquiries for experienced supervisors and former chiefs, local candidates, and a general questionnaire for all candidates.

McArthur said she "leaned toward small town rather than urban police experience." The other selectmen agreed, and added that personality was alos a valid category, although the board would have to meet the candidate before assessing that characteristic.

CABLE NEWS

Selectmen met last week with members of the Cable Advisory Committee. A final draft of the Issuing Authority Report will be prepared this week. The report will include the specifications from which the four cable companies will bid.

The four companies, American Cablesystems, Campbell Cable Television, Greater South Shore Cablesystems, and United Cablesystems, have 45 days in which to submit final bids to the committee. The advisory committee will then have 30 days to recommend a company to be awarded the provisional cable license. Selectmen will make the final determination.

Committee chairman Joseph McCool said they were only five days behind schedule.

BOAT REMOVAL

Selectmen will notify William Figueredo by registered letter that he must remove his boat from a stretch of town-owned land on Parker Avenue. Executive secretary Arthur Clark assured selectmen the boat is located on town property; the owner refused to remove it. Selectmen authorized Clark to send the letter demanding the boat be removed.

CLERK-DISPATCHER UNFILLED

Selectmen approved eliminating $10,296 from the police department salaries account and that the position of clerk-dispatcher not be filled next fiscal year.

Selectman McArthur made the motion, and said the contract stipulates that the clerk-dispatcher position not be filled until an 18th officer is hired in the department. Since that has not been done, McArthur recommended removing the funds for the clerk-dispatcher.

"Why leave that money in there when we can use it somewhere else," she said. Selectmen agreed to take the money from the salary account and not fill the clerk-dispatcher position.

Clergy speaks: A Christmas story with nothing to hide

By The Rev. John Benbow
Second Congregational Church of Cohasset

"Now, a Christmas story should be one. For a good many years the ingenious writers have been putting forth tales for the holiday numbers (of magazines) that employed every subtle, evasive, indirect, and strategic scheme they could invent to disguise the Christmas flavor...Nowadays, the only way you can tell a Christmas story is to look at the footnote which reads: 'The incidents in the above story happened on December 25'...Mr, I am for the Scrooge and Marley Christmas story, and the Annie and Willie's prayer poem, and the long lost son coming home to the poorly thatched cottage with his arms full of talking dolls and popcorn balls and — Zip! You hear the second mortgage on the cottage go flying off it into the deep snow. So this is to warn you that there is no subterfuge about this story — and you might come upon stockings hung to the mantel and plum puddings and hark! the chimes! and wealthy misers loosening up and handing over penny whistles to lame newsboys if you read further."

Those are not my words; I've borrowed them for the occasion from William Sidney Porter, better known as O. Henry. That gentleman's own best Christmas story has the title "The Gift of the Magi," from which I've borrowed one character whom you will meet in the story you're about to read. If you remember that O. Henry story, you know that it is about two newlyweds who give each other extravagant gifts that turn out to be useless. Do you remember it now? If you don't, just wait around a bit; I'll tell you more about O. Henry's story later on.

What you need to know for now is that the young bride in O. Henry's tale, which took place in 1904, is still alive today. Her name is still Della Young, though now she is the widow of James Dillingham Young, and assuming that she was the proper age for a bride in 1904, she must be nearly a hundred by now. But her last name, and as O. Henry might say, her basic nature, person and character, have remained the same: Young.

Before we meet Della Young, however, let us meet her great-grandson, Thomas J. Young, who with his wife Sally is busily engaged in the familiar struggle of the Christmas season: attempting to buy the perfect gift for those perfect strangers sometimes found on one's giving list, and for those less-than-perfect friends and relatives who are there by rights.

Both Tom and Sally work, which means not only that they receive two welcome paychecks at regular intervals, but also that they have all too little time to attend to the chores and pleasantries of life such as the purchase of the perfect gift, etc.

Right now they are completing the third and final hurried round of present-buying, having found suitable gifts for his sister, her brothers, his parents and hers, her grandmother, two great uncles, and 11 assorted cousins, nephews, nieces and in-laws, not to mention a paperboy, an apartment superintendent and many of the friends for whom they have also bought wedding gifts in the past few years.

Through all of this, they've kept their senses and their generosity in feeble check. They've also left till last one of the most pleasant gifts to buy: last but not least on their long shopping list is a gift for Tom's great-grandmother, the Della Young I promised you'd meet in this tale.

The trouble is, they've left so little time to choose and buy a gift, for a hurried look at Sally's watch reveals that it is 8:42 p.m., which means that they have something less than 17 minutes to find and buy a gift for their favorite relative.

Tom and Sally know that whatever they buy will please her, which makes them try all the harder to find the perfect gift for her.

For her part, the only requirement seems to be that the gift be wrapped nicely, for she seems to take almost as much delight in receiving and opening a beribboned, colorful package as in keeping the gift it contains.

Every Christmas and every birthday she is like a child at her first party. Her eyes, more milky now than the deep blue of her younger years, still sparkle with wondrous delight at such elegant gifts as a crayon portrait of Santa scribbled by her only great-great-grandchild, or the gaudy fluorescent earmuffs presented to her by a slightly daffy and apparently color-blind niece.

Already precious minutes are passing, and Sally and Tom have yet to find the right gift for Tom's great-grandmother. A shawl would be an insult, as would a large-print book. With slippers and neck scarves and dusting powder she is more than adequately supplied. It is Tom, at last, who finds the perfect gift: a miniature music box decorated in gold and blue enamel, depicting on its cover the Magi en route to Bethlehem.

The tune it plays, of course, is "We Three Kings," and Tom knows that it will remind his great-grandmother of that old story O. Henry wrote about her and her young husband, all those years and years ago.

"The perfect gift," says Sally, and they purchase it with moments to spare, only to learn that the department store's gift-wrapping service has already closed. This creates a minor crisis, for they have promised to visit Tom's great-grandmother at nine o' clock, for which visit she has had to ask special permission from the retirement home. Tom and Sally hurriedly buy wrapping paper, ribbon and a greeting card, so that as Tom drives the car, Sally can give the perfect gift the perfect wrapping.

As they find their car, already nearly full of the various gifts they have bought in the final frantic hours of Christmas shopping, and journey to the retirement home to take the perfect gift to Della Young, let us stand back at a discreet distance in order to make a rather distressing observation.

In spite of the warm holiday ambience of a happy young couple finishing their Christmas shopping at the traditional hour (namely the last possible moment), there is something Tom and Sally have forgotten or conveniently found too little time to do.

Among the dozens of gifts they have bought, two are conspicuous by their absence.

Tom has bought nothing for Sally, and Sally has bought nothing for Tom!

Of course, only Tom knows the former sad truth, and only Sally knows the latter; for the moment all they share is the silent dread of Christmas morning and its inevitable revelation.

Has the last minute rush of too much to do and too little time to do it in kept them from buying gifts for each other? Have they run out of cash or credit? None of the above.

Yet each has sadly and singly concluded that no gift can be given to the other, though each would dearly love to find the perfect gift to give.

How are we to understand this strange and even tragic circumstance? It is not that Tom and Sally have fallen out of love, though each has indeed begun to feel a little emptiness at being unable to find and buy and wrap and give a Christmas gift to the other. And it is not that they do not wish to give, for giving is as natural as loving, and no one can love without wanting to give.

No, what has happened is this. Whenever the subject of gifts and giving has come up and Sally has asked Tom, "What can I buy you for Christmas?" Tom has said something like, "Oh, there's nothing I really need," or "I can't think of a thing. Really. There's nothing I want but you..."

And though the compliment is endearing, the situation is distressing, for in five years of marriage the subject of giving has become more stressful each year.

Moreover, the two of them seem perfectly (if tragically) matched in this regard, for when Tom has asked Sally the same question he has received almost the same reply, "Nothing, darling; I can't think of a thing I want or need."

Last year they settled for the lacklustre expedient of gift certificates, which is rather like serving a menu instead of a meal. This year, as we have noted already, it has come to the sad pass that in their fifth Christmas as husband and wife they have bought fine and wisely-chosen gifts for three dozen people, some of whom they barely know, but for each other, whom they love deeply, they have bought and will give nothing.

Last year, the year of the gift certificates, they were still able to joke about it. "Can this marriage be saved?" Tom would ask. But this year their inability to buy or give a gift to each other has become a matter for silence, made all the more troubling by its invisibility.

It is one of the few things they cannot talk, argue or joke about. And when a couple cannot talk, argue or joke about something, it is a serious matter indeed.

While we've been considering the strange circumstances of Tom and Sally Young, and their particular difficulty at Christmas time, they have made their way through incredible Christmas Eve traffic to Westcove Manor, an elegant old Victorian mansion known officially as a retirement and extended care facility.

Unofficially, it has been renamed by Tom's witty elder relative as "Decrepitude Arms, the Old Codgers' Home."

Sally has carefully wrapped the music box. When they arrive at "Decrepitude Arms" they discover that no parking space is available. Tom remains at the wheel, promising to come in as soon as he can park the car while Sally goes in to find the room labeled "Mrs. James Dillingham Young."

As Sally opens the large, old-fashioned door to that room, we meet for the first time Della Young, whose appearance and energy as she rises from her chair seem to contradict her age which we have already noted is hovering on the brink of a hundred years. "A century!" Della has sometimes been heard to say. "Why, I've outlived elephants! And I've got the wrinkles to show for it."

Now she greets Sally warmly and asks, "Where's Tommy?"

"He'll be in as soon as he parks the car," says Sally. She places their gift to Della on a table, next to two small packages labeled "Tom" and "Sally." "How have you been, Gran?"

"That's the last question to ask the likes of me," Della says. "How I've been is wrinkled, creaky and half-past senility. Dr. Whozis told me I'd be in my second childhood if I'd ever left my first. There's only one small comfort. I've had some of my wrinkles so long they have wrinkles of their own, which serves them right. My Jim used to call me his beautiful, blushing bride right up to the end of his life, but I think his memory was better than his eyesight."

Sally had never met Della's late husband who has been dead for more than a decade, but she is well acquainted with the family's stories about him.

A Christmas story . . .

"Poor Jim," Della says. "It was the birthday candles on his 85th birthday cake that did him in. I told him not to blow out all those candles, but the foolish old codger did it and then ate more than his share of cake and ice cream. Three years later it caught up with him." Her eyes have both a tear and a twinkle in them as she pretends to berate her Jim, and one can plainly see the love that has survived his death.

"Sentimental old coot," Della says. "Why, the last winter of his mortal life he insisted on going out in a snowstorm to buy a pile of Christmas presents."

At her own mention of the Christmas presents Della Young can't help remembering that Christmas long ago, the one O. Henry wrote about, not even disguising their names "to protect the ignorant," as Jim used to say.

Because some of you may have forgotten the story, and because Sally being new to the family has only heard it half a dozen times, let us listen to Della's own reminiscence of it.

"Young and in love," she begins. "And broke, in New York. That was Jim and me in 1904, living grandly in an $8 furnished flat and wishing we had money enough to buy each other Christmas gifts.

I had saved $1.87 to buy something for Jim, but that just wasn't enough, not even in those days. So I found a way to get the money I needed to buy the gift he deserved. I had beautiful brown hair when I was young. It would reach below my knees when I let it down. Now I'm lucky if I can cover one ear with it, but never mind about that. My hair was one of our two prize possessions.

"The other was Jim's pocketwatch, his only visible sign of the prosperity we hoped would come in the future. What I did, clever girl that I was, was to sell my hair for in those days there were wig shops by the dozens on Broadway.

"The hairgoods dealer was willing to pay good money for what Mr. O. Henry called 'the rippling brown cascade' of my hair. She cropped it off short, and gave me $20 for it! That may not sound like much, but it was precisely the amount Jim could earn in a week. Twenty dollars! That was enough to buy the finest gift I could imagine: an elegant chain fob to attach to Jim's pocketwatch. So I bought it and took it home, afraid he might not like my new look. What is it they call it now — 'Punk'? I looked like a punk all right, or a newsboy who had gone to a blind barber.

"Jim was so startled when he saw me that it took several minutes to make any sense out of what he said. You see, he had gotten a gift for me too, a glorious set of combs, the kind elegant young ladies wore in their stylish long hair. These were made of real tortoise shell and decorated with tiny jewels and bits of gold and I had longed for just such a thing for months.

"But now of course I had nowhere to wear them! I began to cry and gave Jim the handsome watch chain fob I had bought for him, only to have him laugh uproariously. When I finally made out the whole story I began to laugh with him. He had sold his watch in order to buy the combs for my hair!"

O. Henry told that tale only once. Della has told it a thousand times in her long life and never without eliciting from her listeners a warm burst of sentimental laughter.

But Sally, listening to the story, has begun to weep quietly and mournfully. This puzzles Della, but she is wise enough to say nothing knowing that a tear (like laughter) is sometimes more eloquent than speech can ever be. She waits patiently until Sally is able to say, "Oh, Gran, I'm sorry to be such a crybaby. Things must have been so much easier back in 1094."

"Things like what, Sally?"

"Oh, everything. Life, marriage. Everything. Half our friends have never gotten married. The other half seem to be picking out lawyers before they decide on names for their children."

Della reaches out to take the young woman's hand in her own. "Things are fine with Tom and me...so far. You see what I mean? As much as we love each other, in the 1980's we find ourselves saying 'so far' whenever we talk about marriage. It's...scary."

She begins to cry again. Tom comes into the room and surveys a strange scene. Here are three small wrapped presents lying on a table surrounded by the two women he loves and admires most — both of them (as writers like O. Henry would say) dissolved in the comforting liquid of female tears. He takes both their hands in his — Sally's young hand and Della's old one — and asks the question which seems inevitable, even if it's not the right one. "What's wrong?"

Now there are more tears, as Sally tells him the whole story of Della and Jim which he has heard more times than he can count. "But I've never known anyone to cry when they hear that story," Tom says. "What are you crying about?"

"Us," says Sally, incongruously. "I love you. But every year Crhistmas is a hard time for us and I think I know why. When you were young," she says to Tom's great-grandmother, "it was all a matter of learning how to give, or scraping together pennies enough to buy the gift you wanted to give. For you and me, Tom, it's something else. What gives us so much trouble is learning how to receive."

"I think I know what you mean, Sal," says Tom.

"We're lucky not to have any desperate needs, or even serious wants, like a set of combs or a fine chain fob. So our gifts from each other embarrass us, and we really mean it when we say 'You shouldn't have.' " They are looking into each other's eyes now as old and young lovers ought to do, and Della waits to see which of them will speak.

Finally Tom breaks the silence. "You know what, Sally? I couldn't even buy you a Christmas present this year. You kept saying, 'There's nothing I need, there's nothing I want,' and I just couldn't bring myself to buy anything."

Sally is nodding her head crying again and Tom guesses her meaning. "You too? I guess we make it pretty hard for each other." By now one might catch a glimpse of a tear in Tom's eye as well, but smiling bravely he asks, "Can this marriage be saved, or what?"

Then they are laughing and embracing each other, if somewhat damply, and hugging Tom's great-grandmother and insisting that she open her present to her.

The last of Della's own tears has been replaced by a wicked gleam, as she says firmly, "No, thank you. I won't do it." She moves the two small packages towards them — one for Tom, one for Sally. "You open these first, lovebirds."

Now anyone who's ever heard a real Christmas story, complete with plum puddings and penny whistles and hark! the chimes! has surely guessed by now that her present for Tom is an old but still elegant chain fob, and for Sally a set of tortoise shell combs decorated with bits of gold and little jewels.

And surely it will come as no surprise that they are delighted beyond words at these sentimental gifts — so delighted that they almost foget to have her unwrap the perfect gift they chose for her.

Della is as excited and pleased as Tom and Sally are, but as she winds the little music box to hear it play "We Three Kings," even she is surprised to see what happens next.

Tom holds out the antique watch chain fob and offers it to Sally. Sally accepts it (commenting that it will go nicely with her digital Timex) and lovingly installs the jeweled tortoise shell combs in Tom's hair.

The perfect gift. Yes, Jim and Della shared it in 1904 (and share it still, despite the absence of one of them) and it is the gift of learning how to give.

But Tom and Sally share it too, in the uneasy days of the 1980's and they've begun to learn the gift that's beyond learning to give, and equally important with it in the world of love and life: the gift of learning to receive.

For it is blessed to give and blessed to receive. And who is to say which of these is more important at Christmas or any other time? And are they not, when joined together as always they must be, the perfect gift?

Government Wharf expansion plans prompt concern

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Plans to extend Government Wharf may curtail parking in the upper Government Island parking lot for one summer. Some fishermen fear it may also attract 60 foot or larger commercial draggers.

Charles Fink, chairman of the Harbor Study Committee, Burk Ketcham of Fernway and project director for Anderson-Nichols and Co. of Boston, William Richardson, project manager, and Kenneth Alley, project engineer, unveiled the designs at a public workshop Dec. 16.

The proposal would extend the existing pier approximately 50 feet into the harbor, turning an additional 120 feet at 90 degrees towards Bailey's Creek.

Engineers plans include a deep water, all tide pier with depths of approximately eight feet, tie-up spaces for six to eight, 35 to 45 foot boats, a 35 foot wide dock, loading spaces for six pickup trucks and additional parking for 25 to 30 trucks, gin pole davits for loading gear at low tide, floodlights, power, and water, a gangway ramp, and floats for dinghies.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter said the plan would not displace any recreational boats, but three commercial vessels would have to be moved.

The choice of construction materials and disposal of the dredged materials need to be resolved.

Wharf construction materials could be granite with a rubble infill, concrete and steel, precast concrete or wood.

Project cost estimates are between $330,000 and $700,000.

State Rep. Philip Johnston of Marshfield, has filed proposed legislation that might result in 50 percent state aid for the project. The remainder would have to be provided by the town or another financial source.

Used railroad bridge granite construction would cost $330,000. New granite would increase costs by about $150,000; concrete and steel would cost $600,000 to $700,000; precast concrete, $280,000-$300,000; and wood, $200,000 to $300,000.

The consensus of the three engineers and 15 residents who attended the meeting is that granite is better because it can stand for hundreds of years with pointing upkeep. Wood and concrete withstand ice, ocean, and elements for only 50 years.

The amount of material to be dredged cannot be determined until borings are taken this week. Three locations for cheap disposal of the dredgings were presented.

The suggestion to deposit it as an extension of Minot Light Park was opposed by Herbert Jason of Cushing Road, a fisherman for 50 of his 69 years.

"This is the only place you can beach a boat in the town of Cohasset, when you have to make repairs," Jason said. "It would be disastrous to fishermen. Presently, you have several hours of low tide to work on a boat there, and this would cut the time down in half a tide. Furthermore, you have left space in the plans for only one boat,when as many as four boats at a time were beached there last spring. I beached there three times last summer." The space is sometimes used for lobster cars.

Jason said the second area between the wharf and the Gulf River inlet, was the best area for a boat trying to unload in a Northeast storm.

The third proposal was to dump the clay dredgings on the new parking lot up the hill on Government Island. The dredged material would have to sit there six to eight months to leach out, Richardson said, before it could be used by the town's Public Work's Department. He acknowledged it would curtail parking for one summer.

Herbert Towle of South Main St., said the Sailing Club's leaching field was located in the front of this parking lot. He feared the extra weight from the dredgings would be too much. Richardson said they would depositing the dredgings at the rear of the lot.

Environmental agencies will not allow the clay to be dumped on Bassings Beach. It would cost $3 per yard and additional hauling fees to put it in the commercial dump on Rte. 3A.

Jason and William Kelly, who fish singlehanded without a stern man, requested the proposed float on the inside of the pier be extended the full length of the pier for unloading small boats.

After the hearing several fishermen said they're afraid that because of Prop. 2½, town meeting voters may not be willing to spend thousands of dollars to commercialize the harbor. They also fear that the new dock spaces and dredging in Cohasset may encourage large vessels to dock at high tide.

Currently, one Cohasset fisherman with a 100-footer uses Scituate Harbor.

Government Wharf is owned by the town, but is used almost exclusively by commercial fishermen.

Several years ago when John Stewart, formerly of North Main St., tried to keep his skiff tied up at the wharf, said he found his lines cut on several occasions and his boat floating out to Minot's Light.

Most residents pay to use the Sailing Club or Yacht Club floats.

The proposals for Government Wharf project will be completed by Feb. 15. There will be another public hearing scheduled in January.

There'll be plenty of time for swinging at Osgood during Christmas vacation, December 23 through January 3. Nicky Terry and Adam Reid pump it up at the school's playground.

Arthur Clark prepares to take his leave . . .

By Mike Berger

Full-time days at Town Hall for Executive Secretary Arthur Clark are coming to an end.

Arthur is anxious to leave Dec. 31 when the end of his contract as the town's first executive secretary ends. He may stay on a few extra days to work with the new secretary.

"I'm anxious to get through. But on the other hand, I don't want to leave him flat," he said.

Arthur has served as executive secretary since July 1981. He previously served as selectman for 14 years and for 12 of those years as chairman. He has also served as school committee member, water commissioner and advisory board member.

It's been a tumultuous period for the town — 18 months' worth of several personnel changes, searches for new police and fire chiefs, continual sewer problems, and a change in town government philosophy calling for a five-member board of selectmen.

But for Arthur, whatever personal feelings he may have had about an issue, he kept them to himself.

He acknowledged it was a major step going from the shoes of a selectman to the new shoes of an executive secretary.

"You had to separate in your mind what is administrative and what the selectmen want you to carry out. Sometimes it was difficult not doing anything other than administrative," he said.

"You have to keep the feelings away from your job. Your job is to follow the policy of the board whether you agree or disagree."

Coming into Town Hall every day was natural for Arthur.

"This job wasn't hard. It was an extension of what I was doing before as selectman. But as executive secretary, a paid position, selectmen expect more of you."

He feels the new executive secretary should be knowledgeable about municipal affairs and state laws. But one of the more important qualities is to "get along with people on a daily basis."

The executive secretary's office is part of the selectmen's meeting room. His desk is crowded into a corner. The door to Arthur's office is constantly opened. He said he's been available to "meet the public on a daily basis.

"A small town government office is different from a large town government office. You have to expect that people will come in every day and talk about any problem, any time."

The executive secretary, he said, should oversee the operations of the selectmen's office, to inform the public about the selectmen's policies, and basically "serve at the pleasure of selectmen."

As the town's first executive secretary, Clark organized the selectmen's records, kept in daily contact with town counsel, and set the agendas for the selectmen's meetings.

When Arthur's last term as selectman expired in April, 1981, the board felt he created a vacuum. And with a backlog of work, the board wanted someone who could give the office stability and keep things moving. Arthur was chosen, but he took the position with the understanding it would not be a long-term job for him.

He feels his experience as a school committee member, water commissioner and advisory board member helped him ease into the position. His advantage was knowing so many people in town and also knowing the town's history and past board actions.

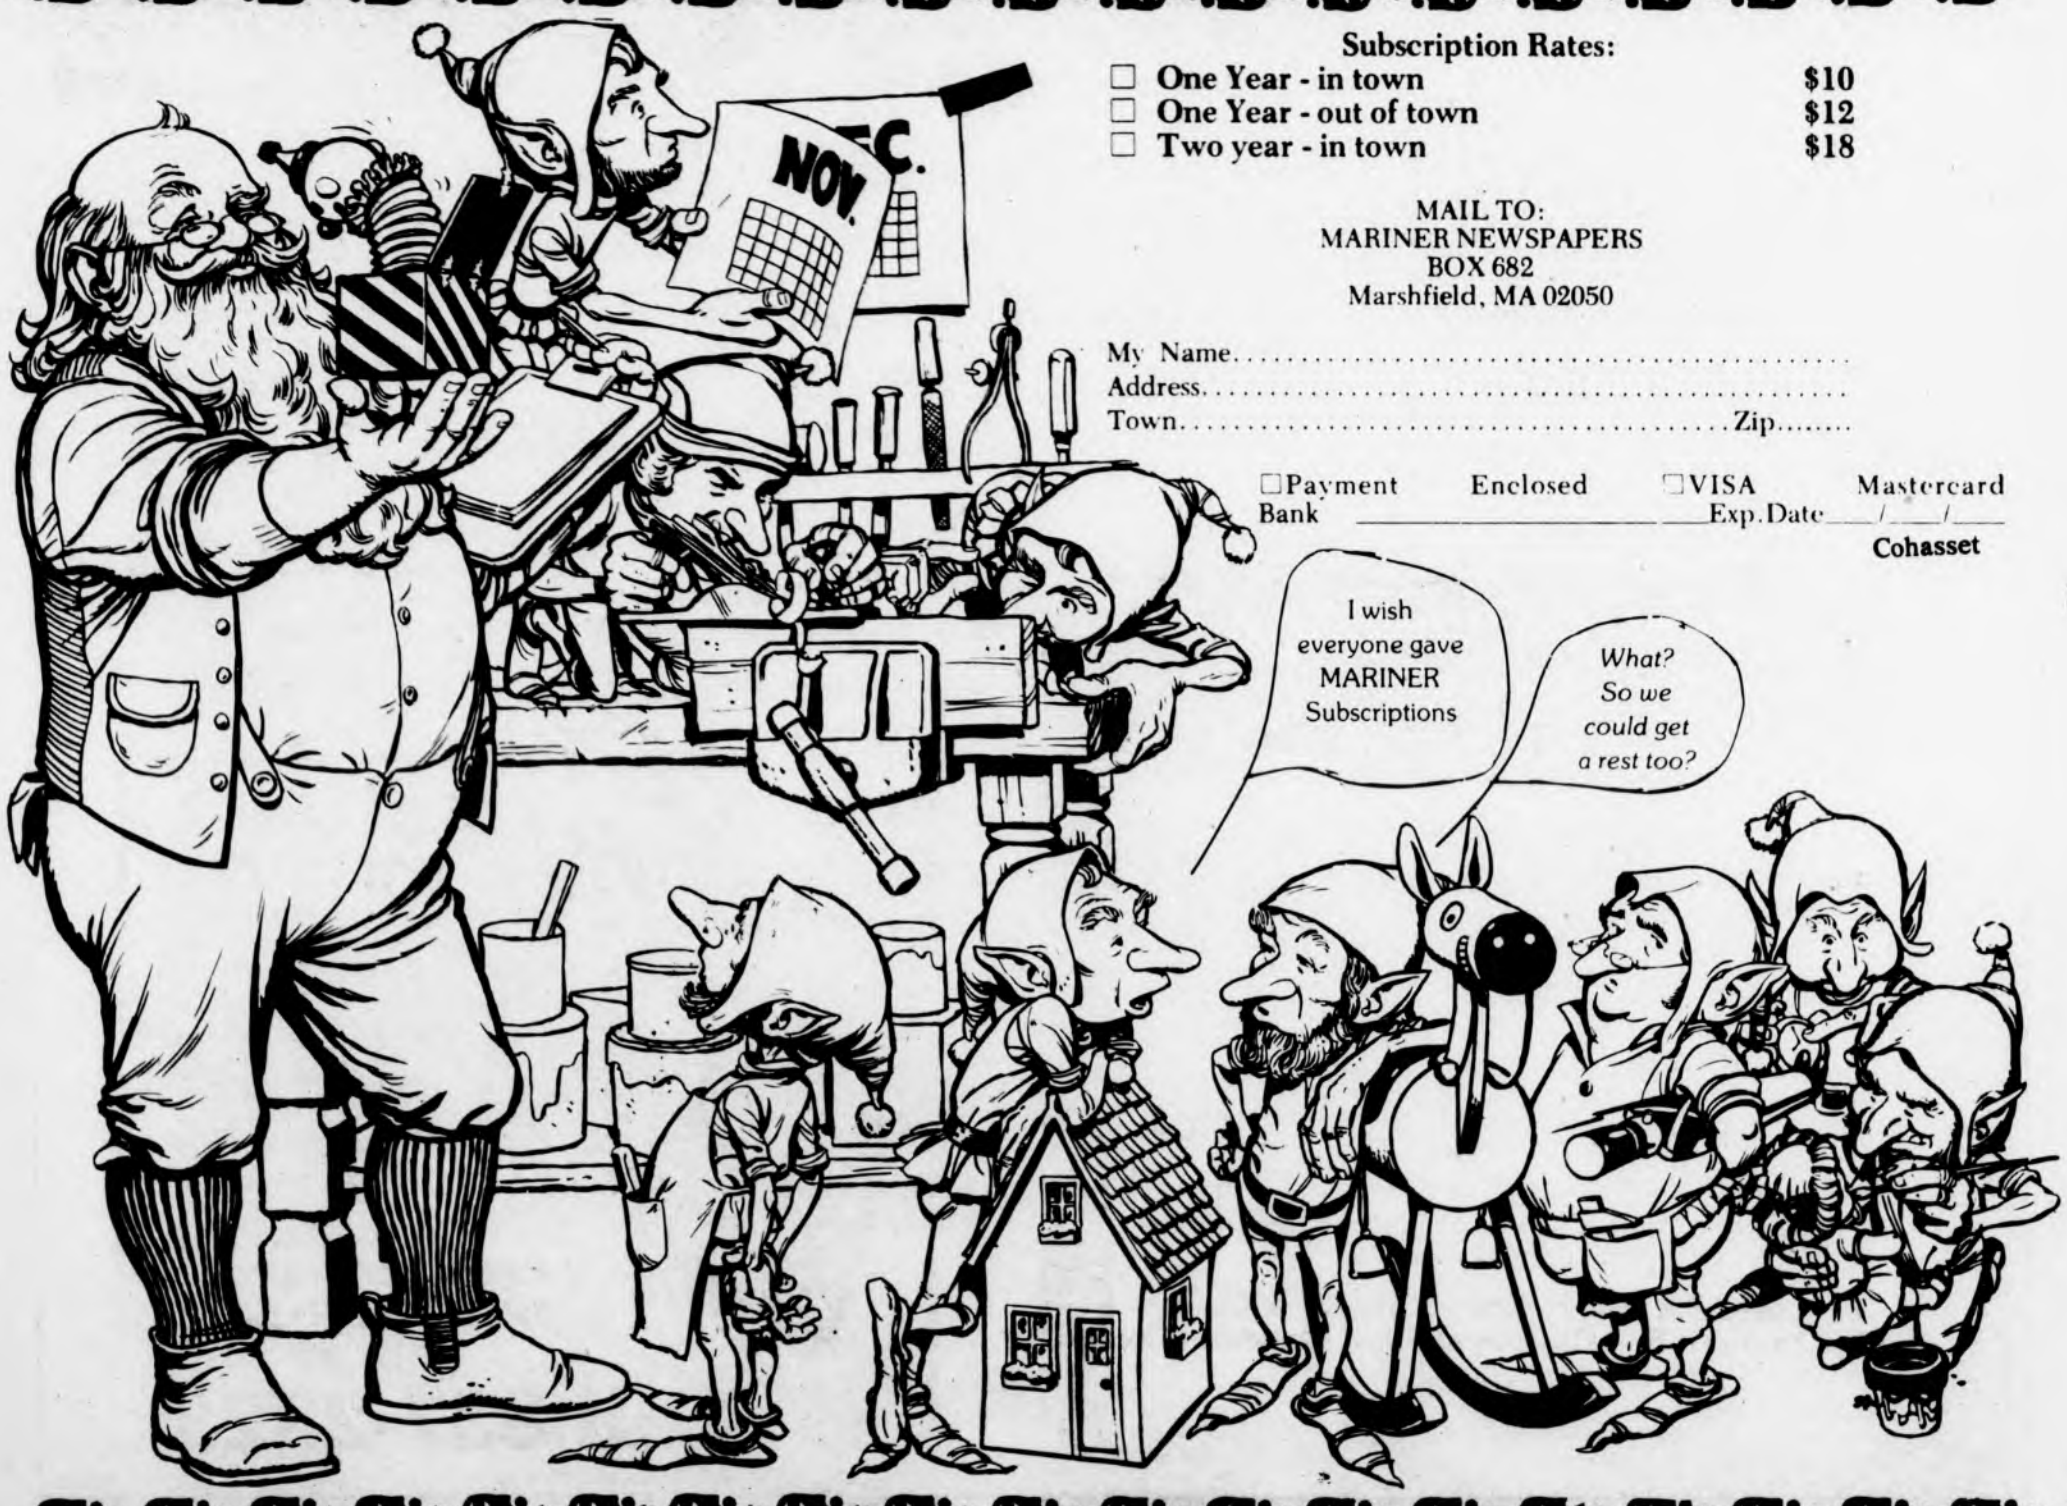
He is concerned that the new executive secretary's workload will be increased by the five selectmen. He looks at the crowded selectmen's office and wonders how the five-member board and the public will fit into the executive secretary's office.

"It's going to be much more difficult with five selectmen. Each one generates so much work," he said.

The town's most immediate problems, he said, are getting the tax bills out on time and completing 100 percent revaluation.

Other than meeting the constraints of Prop. 2½, Arthur said the board must deal with establishing the proper storage facilities for the town's trucks and equipment.

"This has been an ongoing problem for years. And there is no solution in sight. We also need better Town Hall facilities to conduct business."



Arthur has no formal plans after he leaves office. He has a summer camp in Concord, New Hampshire and has a small 16-foot riverboat. He enjoys rabbit hunting and raising dogs.

"Right now I will sit around and play it by ear. I will be making short trips here and there and maybe work around the house."

Arthur Clark

Negotiations end, Dooley to take over as fire chief for 3

After a month of continual contract negotiations between attorneys, Hartford, Ct. Fire Lt. Martin Dooley ordered a halt and agreed to become Cohasset's next fire chief.

Dooley will report to duty Jan. 3. At the end of a two-hour session with selectmen and attorneys Wednesday night, Dooley agreed to sign the contract offered by the town, at a starting salary of $28,000.

Selectmen and Dooley became increasingly wary of the legal marathon between Dooley's attorney, Lawrence Kellem of Hull, and the town's special counsel, John Slater. Dooley finally interjected, "Can this chief (Dooley) work with this board (of selectmen)?"

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie answered, "We wouldn't be here now."

The new chief responded, "Then I'm willing to take a chance — life's a gamble."

The one remaining stumbling block that Dooley side-stepped was a stipulation stating the chief could be dismissed from duty after a one-year absence for a work-related injury. Atty. Kellem warned Dooley that it was not specifically stated within the contract that his disability benefits would continue after that time.

Dooley, a 14-year veteran with the Hartford Fire Department, decided to take that chance, despite his attorney's advice.

He said he would give his employer two weeks notice and begin his Cohasset duties officially Jan. 1.

Selectmen proceeded to give their unanimous approval of Dooley as the new fire chief. His salary will begin at $28,000 with a six percent pay raise in the second and third years of his contract.

In the meantime, Dooley must undergo a physical examination by Dr. Stephen Golden. Dooley told selectmen at the beginning of their meeting that he had already signed a lease for a two-family home at 60 Summer St. His son Patrick, 23, who attended the meeting with him, will continue to work as a firefighter in East Hartford, Ct. Dooley has a daughter Colleen, 21, who is a senior at Simmons College.

There was a lot of give and take that preceded the contract agreement. Selectmen agreed to extend the number of days the chief could be out on a non-work related injury. That number had been stated as 90 and selectmen agreed with Atty. Kellem to increase it to 120 days. After that amount of time an injured chief would be dismissed from duty.

One of Atty. Kellem's major concerns with the contract was that the chief is not defined as a "firefighter." If the chief was injured while fighting a fire, the contract would not guarantee that the chief was entitled to the same compensation benefits as a firefighter.

Atty. Kellem insisted that provisions within the state law, Ch. 32 and 41, be specifically included in the contract. That would officially outline the exact benefits to which the chief would be entitled under state law, he said.

These laws detail the general and disability retirement benefits allowed in Massachusetts, Kellem said.

Special counsel Slater disagreed with the need to include the provisions within the contract and said a chief is never considered outside the category of firefighter. A chief, therefore, would be entitled to the disability benefits, as specifically outlined for firefighters.

Atty. Kellem's concern was that after a year of collecting disability benefits, the board of selectmen would be able to dismiss the chief. There is no guarantee within the contract that his disability pension would continue after that time. If the chief is covered by disability benefits after that time, then state it in the document, Kellem urged.

Slater emphasized that selectmen need not include that provision within the contract, because it is mandated by state law that an injured chief retain his disability benefits. No written contract by selectmen pertaining to that provision will alter or add to the state law.

"I don't see the need to put it in," Slater told selectmen. "There is nothing the board can do to affect disability benefits. As a general principle, to put additional language in a contract may prove in the future to be dangerous."

Selectmen agreed with Slater's advice and did not include the additional statement within the contract.

Selectman Ainslie said, "We have to get to the point where we trust each other. We could go on like this forever."

At that point, Dooley interrupted the proceedings to say he was willing to sign his name to the document. Selectmen then voted to accept the new chief. Dooley will sign the finalized draft of the contract when it is prepared this week.

Selectman Ainslie said at the outset of Wednesday's final negotiations, "This has been quite a drawn-out affair."

The problem with the stalled contract negotiations will not occur again when selectmen make town appointments. The prolonged sessions were almost inevitable because a contract was not prepared before the appointment was made.

Selectmen said that before an executive secretary is chosen, a finalized contract will immediately be offered to the prospective employee. At that time, the proposed appointee can either accept or reject what selectmen have offered in writing.

Turnpike Authority serves coffee for drivers

The Massachusetts Turnpike Authority will serve free coffee at restaurants on the turnpike over Christmas and New Year holiday weekends.

Howard Johnson Company, operators of the restaurants along the 135 mile super highway, will provide free coffee to promote safe driving.

The gesture is intended to remind motorists that rest stops and coffee stops can help keep drivers alert, thereby improving driving performance. All too often motorists in a rush to arrive at their destination become fatigued and a pause along the turnpike will enhance safe travel. Certificates will be distributed at the toll plazas, which allow motorists to be served coffee without charge from 10 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 25, through 7 a.m. on Sunday, Dec. 26, and 10 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 31, through 7 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 1.

Girl Scout cookie sale kicks off Jan. 21

Plans for the 1983 Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council Cookie Sale were announced by Cookie Sale Chairperson Judy Crockett at the recent Council Cookie Sale Kick Off Dinner. The theme for the 1983 sale is "Girl Scouting — Rising to Greater Heights."

The Girl Scout Cookie Sale currently contributes the largest portion of the Council's operating budget, more than 80 percent of which is used for direct support of activities in the 65 cities and towns served by Patriots' Trail Council.

The sale will officially kick-off Jan. 21 with a two-week order taking period and will conclude in April with a week long commercial sale.

Seven varieties of cookies will be sold: Samoas, Thin Mints, Do-Si-Dos, Van'chos, Tagalongs, Trefoils and Chocolate Chunks. These cookies are supplied by Little Brownie Bakers, a division of Beatrice Foods.

Proceeds from the Cookie Sale will assist local troops in financing activities, service projects, assure improved camping facilities and the continuation of Council-wide programs that meet the needs of all communities served by the Council.

New Drug & Alcohol Abuse Guide

The School Department will mail copies of the "Drug and Alcohol Abuse Guide" to all parents of Kindergarten through Grade 12 students this week.

The copies should arrive Thursday or Friday. They were delivered Wednesday to the Cohasset Post Office by School Superintendent Eugene Crowell.

The mailing comes two months after the School Committee voted to adopt the drug and alcohol abuse policy. They directed administrators to implement the policy and distribute it to the community.

Crowell said the policy has been carefully checked by town counsel's staff to ensure the rights of all students are protected and "that the procedures and policies included are legally sound as well as educationally and operationally prudent.

"The policy is but a starting point in our continued fight against the harmful misuse of these substances and our educational programs will continue to receive a high priority as we attempt to change the attitudes of young people as to the seriousness of the problem.

"No one should read into this correspondence that Cohasset has an unusual situation. We do not, but our effort must be preventative as well as corrective," said Crowell.

In a letter mailed to all parents of Cohasset public school students, Crowell said any questions concerning the policy should be directed to Michael Gill, Cohasset health education coordinator, to school principals or to the school superintendent.

Following the October 18 committee vote, the policy was sent to town counsel for review. The policy went back to the school and health committees and Gill for some legal amendments.

The policy includes specific sections on reporting, penalties, due process, search and seizure and police interviews of students, suggested guidelines for specific drug and alcohol related situations and a synopsis of the Controlled Substance Act and penalties.

The policy includes procedures School Department personnel should follow if a student is engaged in "prohibited" conduct during school hours, or if a medical emergency exists.

Penalties are divided into use and/or possession, or being under the influence of a prohibited substance, and distribution and/or sale of a prohibited substance.

If a student is found guilty of being under the influence the parent or legal guardian will be notified immediately by the principal or assistant principal; the principal may impose a five-day out-of-school suspension; a conference with a parent or guardian will be scheduled within 48 hours; and the family will be referred to a rehabilitation program.

Every student who is to be disciplined is entitled to protection under the due process clause of the constitution's 14th amendment.

If a suspension of 10 days or less is imposed, the student is entitled to notices of the charges against him, an explanation of the evidence, and an opportunity to present his version of the incident. If possible, the notice and hearing should precede the student's suspension.

If the student's presence in the school endangers persons or property or threatens disruption of the academics of the classroom, the notice and hearing may follow the student's suspension.

The policy also includes a search and seizure policy preceded by this statement: "Students while in school are entitled to the protection of the Fourth Amendment and have a right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures. Nevertheless, it is the duty of school officials to maintain order and discipline in the schools, which may at times require inspections for prohibited substances."

Christmas feelings . . .

By Lois Martin

Every so often there's a line in a movie that sticks with me. There's a chance that I get more out of it than an author/producer intended. But you know, a phrase, a thought that for that moment has meaning which sticks.

On one of the rare occasions I've watched a midnight movie, "Northwest Passage" was on with James Whitmore playing the lead role. I ought to be apologetic about not remembering the famous explorer's name. But maybe it's more important to keep the message.

Anyway, these men, you see, had traversed the unwelcoming terrain. And a few survived over there on the other side of the country... to part, emotionally. One of the few who'd made it with the leader told him why he had. He said something to the effect that the explorer had a quality of bringing out the best in the followers, of enabling them, not merely to follow, but to gain strength and to use power they didn't know they had. He activated their best.

That impressed me. I consider it a definition of a true leader, not just someone who's at the top as an exercise of his or her own power, but someone who serves as a catalyst in inspiring a person to be his best

Then there was Kate Hepburn's line to Jane Fonda in "On Golden Pond." Jane was wearing that two piece bathing suit made out of a sixteenth of a yard of remnants. She was whining still to her mother about the void in her relationship with her father, Henry Fonda.

Kate listened, cared. Then she counseled that no matter what had been, it was time to "get on with it."

That stuck. I think of it as being relevant for everyone. No matter what...just get on with it.

And recently I was taken with a line from "E.T." Notice I said a line, not the whole thing. The movie's greatest merit was enchantment...And the line from this scene.

When Elliott's older brother (forgot his name too) was explaining the sibling's relationship with E.T., he was asked if Elliott thought E.T.'s thoughts. He answered, "He feels his feelings."

There is empathy. Behind it, if you're with me, my Christmas message.

One of the highest forms of friendship, call it something else if you will, is to share the emotions of another. Sympathy is when you feel for. Empathy is when you feel with. And that's what E.T. and Elliott had, shared feelings only friends know.

And this is one of life's moments for it. Because Christmas is purely emotional, founded on faith, expressed in feelings. We can feel good, overwhelmed, excited, poor, sad, warm, disheartened, empty, fulfilled, all those things within the next week or so.

And often it's risky to feel another's feelings. When we do that, we bear genuine pain in concert with others. But you see, on the other hand, we share joy.

I don't want to emit pain to be shared. Who does!

But, boy, I'd love to send the positive signals others could feel, if they feel my feelings.

I'm reminded of E.T. because of the sensitivity inherent in the line. I've learned there is no such thing as a happy grump. Pains-in-the-neck are miserable before they, in passing, made you feel their feelings..

It's just something to be mindful of. You may not realize the influence you have in another's day. Someone will be feeling your feelings. And you will surely feel those of others.

Now feel this.

A warm, genuinely merry Christmas and hope, bright promise, in a happy new year.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year

You may receive more clever, more artistic, more colorful Christmas greetings in 1982. But you will never have a more cheery message than this one from the Mariner staff:

May you and your family and your friends find new meaning in Christmas joy this year. And may the coming New Year surprise and reward you.

Overeaters Anonymous, an alternative to overweight

By Claire McDonough

There are many suicides over the holidays.

The bright lights, decorations, memories of childhood Christmases — filtered through a distorting gauze of years presenting a picture of Utopia that never existed — combine to make our present situation, with its imperfections, unfulfilled dreams and failed relationships, more than we can bear.

We don't want our life as it has become.

There are those who choose a suicide that is slow, painful and agonizing. They destroy themselves over a period of years with alcohol, drugs or food.

Food? An abused substance? Our symbol of affluence, of family solidarity — the thing glorified above all others at holidays and holy days, at family gatherings or meetings of friends?

Maryanne, an attractive, stylishly dressed blonde, ran her finger over the rim of her coffee cup and smiled.

"Not many people think of food as an abused substance, but it is. Just as surely as morphine or gin. For years I was a food-abuser. I'm still a compulsive overeater, but through Overeaters Anonymous I have my disease under control. This time of year, though, I really need the program. I wouldn't make it through the holidays if it weren't for O.A."

Maryanne had a problem with her weight since she was a teenager. Even though her high school pictures show she was not overweight, she never felt comfortable with her body. She always believed that she was a little chubby.

"When my girlfriends wore two piece bathing suits, I couldn't bring myself to wear one. I thought I was too fat."

With the birth of her children, however, Maryanne started to really experience food problems.

"I put on 30-40 pounds with each baby, and I was never able to loose it all afterward. In between pregnancies I would gain more. By the time we moved to Scituate 16 years ago I was at least 40 pounds overweight.

"This was when my compulsive eating began. I felt so isolated. I didn't really know anyone. My husband had to go so far to work. I was close to a nervous breakdown, and I really started eating to compensate for the loneliness and depression.

"It got so I wouldn't leave the house. When the kids would leave for school I would start eating, and I would eat almost nonstop all day. In a very short time I was over 200 pounds."

This cycle led Maryanne to marital problems.

"My husband had no understanding of my very real despair. The more depressed I got, the more I ate. The more I ate, the more ashamed I felt and the more depressed I became. He threatened to leave me; he tried bribing me; he took me on vacations. Nothing worked. I hated myself."

For two years Maryanne tried everything to control her eating.

"I went to Weight Watchers, Diet Work Shop, I tried pills, hypnosis. Nothing had a lasting effect. I would lose a few pounds — maybe 10 or 20 — then I would return to what I considered 'normal eating.' "

Maryanne was aware of Overeaters Anonymous for two years before she came into the program.

"I read about it in Ann Landers, and David Susskind had a program on O.A. It sounded good, but I had a lot of trouble dealing with the idea of a 'Higher Power.' As a matter of fact, I still do.

"But one day, when I was most desperately unhappy, I picked up the Patriot Ledger, looked at the "What's Happening" column, and saw that there was an Overeaters Anonymous meeting at the Baptist Church in Scituate on Sunday afternoon.

"I went, all by myself. I didn't tell anyone I was going. If it was going to be just another diet and calories club, I knew I wouldn't be able to make it, and I couldn't face the thought of having anyone know I had failed again. I didn't know if I could cope with another failure.

"I sat in the back of the hall in a big coat, and I didn't talk to anyone. I just absorbed. But right from the beginning I knew I was in the right place. I couldn't believe there was a whole room full of people who were like me — who shared my feelings and my fears. Many of them were slim by then, but they all understood.

"After a while I told one friend, and she started coming to meetings with me. Then I started talking to people at the meetings. My first meeting was just before Halloween — I had been terrified of what would happen to me if I got into all that candy — but it was New Year's day that I started working the program in earnest.

"After I lost 20-25 pounds I started getting compliments. By the end of my first year in the program I had lost between 60 and 70 pounds. At the end of the second year it was 80.

"A lot of people who commented on the new me weren't so much impressed by my weight loss as by my personality change. I had my hair styled, and as the weight came off I was able to get out and do things I hadn't been comfortable doing before. I lost a lot of physical ailments, too — arthritis in the knees, bronchial asthma, my blood pressure dropped. Last but not least, I was able to cross my knees again.

"The main thing, though, was that I felt so much better about myself. I wasn't a failure any more. I looked on myself as someone who had experienced a victory. I was happier."

Maryanne sighed. "It's important that I remember that when I came to this program my whole life was going badly. There was that vicious circle of eating, feeling guilty, hating myself, my husband yelling at me...I don't get back into that cycle any more."

Maryanne feels that O.A. differs from other weight loss plans in basic ways.

"The group support is very important. It's not a money making scheme. And I'll have to admit that the Higher Power is an important part.

"I also was given a safe environment to explore myself and my needs. I discovered that I had a great deal of hidden resentment and anger that I used to overeat. Much of my success in the program is due to the fact that I could identify with the feelings of other compulsive overeaters. I thought I was the only one in the world who ate that way. Now I'm never alone."

Maryanne had some advice for others who feel they may be compulsive overeaters.

"Particularly at this time of year, food comes at you from every direction. You observe others who are able to pick it up, put it down, and walk away from it. You feel isolated because you're not like that. Please believe you are not alone. You aren't bad or weak-willed. You're sick. But there are others who share your sickness. Come to a few meetings and listen. You don't have to talk if you don't want to, no one will embarass you. But you may find what you've been looking for in all the wrong places. You may find that you don't have to suffer any more."

Goodwill seeks donations

Every year at Christmas time Goodwill has a rush of people making last-minute donations.

Goodwill urges area residents to avoid the rush and long lines at its attended donation trailers and make contributions of goods before the New Year at its attended donation trailer at the Hanover Mall, Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The attendant will accept any donations of toys and games, men's, women's and children's clothing, housewares and household furnishings and provide a tax receipt. All contributions made before Jan. 1 are deductible at fair market value on your federal income taxes for 1982.

Part of the holiday excitement for me this year has been our mini "bake-off" — only the second such contest we've had since the column came into being 10 years ago. It was all very impromptu and you had only a week to send in your entries at this the busiest time of the year, but a host of good cooks took part in our little contest. Third prize in your family favorite holiday food's contest goes to Fran Carey for her

ALASKA MINCEMEAT CAKE

Combine:
2 c. water
1¾ c. sugar
3/4 c. butter or oleo
1 9 oz. package mincemeat, broken into pieces
Bring to a rolling boil. Boil 3 min., stirring occasionally. Remove from range and cool.
Sift together:
3¼ c. flour
2 tsp. soda
1 tsp. salt.
Add to cold mincemeat mixture, stir in:
1 c. raisins
1/2 c. chopped walnuts
Turn into 9 or 10" tube pan, well-greased and floured on bottom only. Bake in moderate oven at 350 degrees for 60-65 min. Cool in pan one hour before turning out. Sprinkle top with confectioner sugar.

Millie Carr writes that part of the holiday fun for her is experimenting with new recipes and her guests always look forward to surprises when they come to dinner. Like Fran, she will win a year's subscription to the Mariner, for she is our second prize winner with a recipe that would be welcome any time of the year, called

MUSHROOMS IN WINE CASSEROLE

1 Tbsp. marjoram
1 Tbsp. chives
1 lb. mushrooms, cleaned and trimmed
1/2 c. melted butter
1/2 c. chicken broth
1/4 c. dry white wine
Salt and pepper.
Put mushrooms in casserole. Combine all other ingredients and pour over mushrooms. Cook uncovered at 350 degrees for 30 min.

A festive red poinsettia has found its way "From the Kitchen" to the home of Peggy Beals, for her holiday recipe entry won first prize. In her little note she writes: "Dearest" was Mrs. Ione Crane, mother of Mrs. James Craig, who lived on Nelson's Hill in North Marshfield in what is now the Kennedy house. They were long-time close friends of my mother." So, here is Peggy's prize-winning

DEAREST'S CHRISTMAS PUDDING

Mix:
1 c. molasses
1 c. chopped suet
1 c. milk
Mix with 1/2 c. flour: 1 c. seeded raisins
1 c. chopped nuts
1 c. chopped figs
Put it all in big bowl with:
2 c. flour
1 tsp. soda
Mix thoroughly, asking everyone in house to help stir., Pack into two cans, 1 lb. coffee size. Cover top of each can with two layers of waxed paper, secured with rubber band. Put on a trivet in kettle and add a few inches of water. Steam for two hours. (Check pressure cooker or crock pot for their pudding directions. Can easily be done on a wood stove.)
Sauce: Whip until soft peaks form, 1 c. heavy cream. Add a little honey and vanilla. Enough sauce for one pudding. Serves six to eight.

And so, to all our readers who have been so very generous with their gifts of recipes in the year past and cards and holiday wishes these last few days, happy holidays from our kitchen to yours.

Obituaries

Helen Ketchum

Helen (Luchars) Ketchum, 95, a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, died Dec. 14 at the Brockton Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Philadelphia, she attended schools in Upper Montclair, N.J., before moving to Cohasset 67 years ago.

She was also a member of the Cohasset Garden Club and the Social Service League of Hingham.

Wife of the late Kenneth Dow Ketchum, she leaves a son, David D. Ketchum of Ipswich; two daughters, Adelaide Sproul of Watertown and Elizabeth Tucker of Cambridge; 11 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

A private graveside service was conducted by the Rev. Richard D. Muir, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Burial was in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Altar Guild of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Leslie Ann Haynes

Leslie Ann Haynes of 16 Surrey Drive, a 20 year-old college student, was killed Sunday, Dec. 19 in her car at the parking lot of a Cohasset service station.

Miss Haynes graduated from Notre Dame Academy in Hingham in 1980 and was a junior attending the University of Denver, where she majored in hotel management. She was working as a college intern this month at the Sheraton Boston Hotel.

She was a volunteer at Massachusetts General Hospital and was involved in local yachting. She once was a summer student in Vichy, France.

Her parents, who moved to Cohasset 10 years ago from Westwood, have been active in church and community affairs.

She leaves her father, William E. Haynes, a public accountant and owner of the firm Livingstone and Haynes of Wellesley; her mother, JoAnn Haynes; and three sisters, Hilary, 17, Lauren, 15, and Robin, 10.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday, Dec. 21 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

No Mariner December 29

Just a reminder — there will be no Cohasset Mariner published Dec. 29, the week after Christmas.

In fact, the staff will be enjoying a well-deserved rest as the entire office closes its doors from Dec. 24 to Jan. 3.

Seahawks sweep six straight

The Seahawk Youth Hockey teams were victorious in all six games reported by their coaches for the weekends of Dec. 12-13 and Dec. 18-19.

Coach Rick Sparrow's Bantam C's edged Plymouth 5-4 as Brian McGovern netted the game-winner with only 34 seconds left in the contest. John Meschino, Jim Sadler, Billy Resnick and Ronnie Morrison notched the earlier Seahawk goals while Meschino earned a "Playmaker Patch" for his three assists, Morrison and Dan Elmes had a pair of set-ups each, and Resnick, John Goffar and Mike Leighton contributed single assists.

Coach Frank McGovern's Pee Wee B's got a "Hat Trick" from Peter Buckley as they whipped Hingham 6-2. Patrick Glennon with a pair of "bullets" and Paul Norton with a single marker closed out the scoring while Erik Steverman (2), Buckley, Kevin Quinn and Damon Sparrow were credited with assists.

Coach Jim Consalvi's Pee Wee C's blanked Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 1-0 behind the excellent cageminding of Joshua Goulart. Stephen Elmes scored the winning tally assisted by John Niland and Justin Hughes.

Coach Barry Resnick's Squirt A's emerged the winners in all three of their contests beating the Brewins 5-3, dumpting Brockton 5-2, and trouncing Weymouth 8-2.

In the first encounter Cole Hughes (2), Billy Lincoln, Jon Mahoney and Mike Richardson were the goal-scorers while assists were garnered by Mahoney, Lincoln, David Orpen, Mark Resnick (2), Sean Noonan and Greg Salmaine.

In the Brockton affair Chris Sullivan (2), Mahoney, Richardson and Bobby DiVito dented the nets while Mahoney and Jeffrey White provided the set-ups.

Jon Mahoney notched a "Hat Trick" to pace the A's to their win over Weymouth. Hughes (2), Richardson, Orpen and Brian Pompeo also busted targets while Jeffrey White and Bobby DiVito recieved "Playmaker Patches" with three assists each. Sullivan, Lincoln, Noonan and Lincoln also were credited with set-ups.

Athlete of the week

Freshman Tony Bogarty scored 30 points in the CHS Varsity Basketball team's league opener against Norwell last Monday.

Bogarty, a Metco student, is a big part of this year's squad. Coach Eddie Minelli says, "Bogarty is a natural leader on the floor. He has a great basketball sense. He is an excellent passer and ballhandler. With hard work and experience, he is a potential all-star."

Senior forward Beverly Mullaney scored 22 points to lead the girls' varsity basketball team to their second victory of the season over Hanover.

Mullaney, a first-string player, broke the record of most scored points in CHS girls' basketball. The previous record was set by Kate Salerno, a 1982 graduate, three years ago with 20 points.

Coach Bill Fallon says Bev is a big asset to the team and also thinks she could be a surprise player in the South Shore League.

Coming Events

Boston Celtics' guard, M.L. Carr, and Bob Lobel of Channel 4 News will visit Cub Scout Pack #38 in January. Scouts should be thinking of sports questions to ask Carr and Lobel.

Joanne Mitchell and Marilyn Pope of the Pratt Library and Marge Murphy, Deer Hill School librarian, are organizing a special program for scouts on "Folklaw." This will help the Cubs achieve their Bear badge.

Good dental health and the use of a microscope will be subjects discussed by Dr. Michael Equi in January.

The next committee meeting will be January 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House and the January Pack meeting will be on the 26th at 7 p.m. at the Deer Hill School.

CHS sports update . . .

By Alana O'Brien

The girls' varsity basketball team opened their season last week with two victories and a loss.

Last Tuesday they traveled to Norwell for their season opener. It was a two point game with three and one-half minutes to play, but the Norwell Clippers added another 10 points to bring the final score to 40-28.

Captain Gia Barresi played a strong game for Cohasset, scoring 18 points.

Coach Bill Fallon said Norwell had a big height advantage and also they're one of the better teams in the South Shore League. "Overall, we had a lot of first game jitters," said Fallon.

Friday the girls won a minor upset along with a moral victory over arch-rival Duxbury, 40-39. This was the first time in four years that Cohasset beat Duxbury in girls' basketball.

Captain Gia Barresi sank two valuable free throws with a minute remaining to earn the win for Cohasset.

Coach Fallon praised forwards senior Beverly Mullaney and sophomore Carla Lucas for an exceptional rebounding job. Sophomore Janet DiGirolamo played a strong game at the point guard position.

Monday the girls played league opponent Hanover in a home match. Cohasset used an outstanding fast break to overwhelm Hanover 64-47.

Senior Beverly Mullaney was the high scorer of the game with a tally of 22 points and 12 rebounds. Capt. Gia Barresi added 13 points to the win. Sophomore point-guard Janet DiGirolamo was praised by Coach Fallon for an excellent game.

Fallon praised the whole team for a strong passing game with good ball movement. Overall he found it to be a satisfying win.

"If we continue to improve throughout the season, we should be a hopeful tournament contender at the end of the season," Fallon said.

The girls, now 2-1, were to play Middleboro away Wednesday.

Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 27 and 28, they will be playing a Christmas tournament at Scituate High School. Monday they play Cape Cod Tech and Tuesday, Scituate. Both games will be at 3 p.m.

BOYS' VARSITY BASKETBALL

Monday the CHS boys' varsity basketball team traveled to Norwell for their league opener.

The boys played a close game the whole way until the fourth quarter when the Clippers applied a tough man-to-man defense and edged the Skippers 63-55.

Freshman starter Tony Bogarty played an outstanding game earning 30 points. James Creed, another freshman, scored 14 points and grabbed nine rebounds for Cohasset.

Friday they played league opponent Duxbury and were defeated 72-44.

The Skippers held the Dragons close in the first quarter, but were gradually worn down by Duxbury's fast break and press.

Senior Dan Anderson and juniors Peter Caruso and David Barcomb were praised for their fine performances.

Monday the boys faced the Hanover Indians in a home match. Hanover, third in the state division, totally overmatched the Skippers and defeated them 83-59.

Senior Captain Jack Maloney played a strong hustling game for Cohasset. Junior David Barcomb was praised for a good offensive game.

This years' squad is a young and inexperienced team with two freshmen, Tony Bogarty and James Creed, in starting positions. Sophomores David McDonald and Philip Bernstein see a lot of playing time along with freshman Bobby Schultz.

Wednesday they were to play Middleboro in an away match.

Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 27 and 28, the boys will be playing in a Christmas Tournament at Scituate High School. Monday they play Chatham and Tuesday they face Cape Cod Tech. Both games will be at 6:30 p.m.

OSGOOD

DRESS: During the winter months some children often become immersed in water on the playground, while others need warmer clothes.

Donations of warm clothing, sizes K-3, would be appreciated. Please send to Mrs. Gormley, school nurse, who will dispense as needed.

LIBRARY: The library is concerned about the amount of overdue books and the care of books while borrowed.

The books suffer somewhat between school and home and find places to hide that mystify parents.

Parents are asked to encourage proper book care and help get them back to school as stipulated.

DEER HILL

Kudoes from everyone to Amy Green, instrumental music substitute teacher, who directed the Deer Hill Holiday Concert. She received a standing ovation and praise for leading the Deer Hill band, but also ably directed the chorus due to choir instructor John MacInnis' illness.

Student vocalists and instrumentalists are to be congratulated too. It was a superb concert.

A synopsis of the new drug & alcohol policy

SEARCH AND SEIZURE

No search of a student's person, possessions or locker may be conducted unless the school official objectively has reasonable grounds to believe that the particular student is in possession of a prohibited substance. Among the factors which courts have considered in determining whether a search is based upon reasonable grounds, include: a) the child's age b) history and record in school c) the seriousness and prevalence of the problem to which the search is directed d) the exigency requiring the search to be made without delay and e) the probative value and reliability of the information used as justification for the search.

The school official conducting the search should be able to demonstrate that facts existed which provided reasonable grounds to search a specific student for a specific prohibited substance and that the search was in furtherance of a legitimate school purpose, such as the maintenance of discipline.

Blanket or random searches are not permitted.

Any and all searches should be conducted in the presence of a witness.

Where possible, every effort should be made to locate the student prior to searching his locker or possessions. A student should be informed of the circumstances justifying the search and the objects which are to be seized.

Where a search of the student's person is to be conducted, it must be conducted by a school official of the same sex.

As a general rule, prohibited substances seized under this section should be turned over to the police within three (3) days, as an administrative convenience.

Where there is prior police involvement or participation, the full measure of the Fourth Amendment applies. Therefore, no search of a student's person, locker or possessions may be conducted unless the police have secured a valid search warrant.

Police Interviews of Students: If a law enforcement agency conducts an interview of a student during school hours, the following guidelines should be followed:

It should be conducted in private with a school official present.

Every effort should be made to inform the parent or legal guardian and to give them an opportunity to be present.

The student shall be afforded the same rights that he would have outside of the school, including the right to be informed of his legal rights, which include the right to remain free from coercion and restraint, the right to remain silent and the right to be represented by counsel.

The school shall not release a student to the custody of a law enforcement official, unless such official has secured a valid arrest warrant. If a student is arrested, the parent or legal guardian should be notified as soon as possible by school officials.

Confidentiality: In general, the state does not recognize a privilege for student-staff communications, with the possible exception of the school physician.

School personnel may be subpoenaed into court and required to reveal information which has been confided to them.

Administration and teachers may also be liable in civil suit for failure to notify parents or legal guardians about pupils' drug or alcohol involvement.

Similarly, student records may be subpoenaed into court with respect to civil or criminal proceedings.

Many teachers fear that this will stop young people from asking for help. Reports from schools which have adopted this confidentiality section tend to indicate that it does not deter students from seeking help.

Therefore, teachers must make it clear to pupils who confide in them that it is their duty to report this information to the school principal but only in order to further the goal of promoting the pupils' personal welfare.

Students are advised that information must be reported to the school administrator — and, the pupil who seeks the teacher's help is actually asking for help from the school authorities.

Holiday concert

The Junior/Senior High School Holiday Concert takes place Wednesday, December 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Band director Jeff Dodge will conduct the Junior High School band, the combined Junior and Senior High School Bands and the saxophone quartet.

Bryan Marks, choral director, will lead the Junior and Senior High School Chorus and Barbershop Chorus and Quartet.

Rafferty named director of state food services

John Raftery of Hull was named Director of the Bureau of Nutrition Education and School Food Services by the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Raftery was business manager for the school department for eight years, where he supervised the school food services. He also served as an elected school committee member in Hull for a total of 18 years, seven as chairman.

Prior to his employment in Cohasset, he worked at the John Hancock Insurance Company as coordinator of data processing for 12 years.

Raftery is a graduate of Holy Cross College where he received a bachelor of arts degree in business administration and economics. He has studied computer management and computer based financial management programs at the I.B.M. Systems Science Institute and the American Management Association.

As a member of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, he has served as regional chairman, treasurer, vice-president, president-elect, president and is the immediate past president.

As a member of the National School Board Association, he serves on the Committee for Federal Relations Network. He has served as regional chairman of the Northeast Region of School Boards of 13 states.
